FESTIVAL OF VIOLETS.

BEAUTY IN COLORS AND ARRANGEMENT AT TRINITY CHURCH.

The Whatsoever Circle of King's Daughters Conduct a Sale and Entertainment With Great Success—Those in Charge

Violet and white make a beautiful combination, and the lecture room of the Trinity Reformed church never looked prettier than it did last evening in its tasteful garb of those two colors. The occasion was that of the Festival of Violets given by the Whatsoever Circle of King's Daughters of the church. The decorations were beautiful, and the banquet lamps on the tables sent out a soft light, tinged with violet from their violet colored shades, that added to the effect. The gas light overhead filled the room with a brightness that dazzled the new comers. The the pleasant faces and the merry chatter helped to make the scene a delightful one.

The young women of the circle presided at the various booths and tables in light colored gowns, which corresponded to the decorations in color. The effect was charming and added to the general harmony of color. The waitresses' gowns were also trimmed in a delicate shade of violet.

But the booths! They were, every one of them, works of art, and though simple, they were far more attractive than any flashing combination of colors that could be arranged. The many visitors looked around with unconcealed admiration, and the praise that was bestowed on the decorators was lavish and hearty. For the first moment the visitor was dazzled, but the beauty of the tables drew him on and he soon became a purchaser at one of the booths.

The first to attract the attention of the visitor was the candy booth, which was placed in the corner directly in front of the entrance. Three arches, the central one of which was used as an entrance, with their supporting pillars, inclosed a beautiful booth. White bunting was draped in an artistic manner from the arches and was twisted around the pillars. The artistic effect was heightened by little bunches of violets fastened on the white while violet bunting was festooned around the edge and base of the board counter on which a pretty display of flowers, both cut and potted, was displayed. Miss Virginia Van Winkle presided over this bower of flowers with Miss Martha Cook and Miss Maud Van Dyke as her assistants. A King's Daughters cross of violets hung over the entrance.

A less pretentious table was the perfumery booth, but it was decorated with equal taste. The handsome banquet lamp with its violet shade, and violet ribbon and violets made up its decorations. The Misses Jennie Quick and Louise Snedeker were the committee in charge.

The next table groaned beneath a load of delicious cake. Violets were everywhere arranged in wreaths around the cakes and formed a striking contrast on the snowy-white spread. Miss Will F. Williams was in charge, assisted by Miss Mabelle Force.

In the centre of the room dainty cups full of delicious chocolate were served by Miss Minnie Williams and Mrs. F. S. Cutter, from a small table handsomely decorated with the flower and leaf of the violet on the white table cloth.

A lemonade well occupied one corner of the room. An artistic combination of violet and white bunting, tastefully hung over the framework of wood, made it equal to any the rest in beauty while the cool and refreshing lemonade, served out by Miss Emma Gillen and Miss Mabel Wilson, was just the thing. Little bunches of violets were fastened about the sides in a pleasing manner.

The refreshment department consisted of a number of small tables, on each of which was a jar of violets, at which light refreshments were served. Mrs. F. E. Woodruff was in charge and the waitresses were the Misses Jessie Hockridge, Nellie Hockridge, Grace Roland, Grace Emmons, Emma Lines, Eva Donavan, Lizzie Cutter, Nora Bennett, Mabel Moore and Martha Anthony.

Last, but by no means least, came an octagonal booth decorated in the usual violet and white, at which home-made candies found ready sale. Miss Mabel Woodruff and Miss Edith Dubois were in charge.

The kitchen where the dainty supper was prepared was not so prettily decorated but the good things that came out from there more than made up for its appearance. Mrs. Anna E. Doggett and Mrs. Edward Van Winkle superintended the work here. Violet paper napkins were given to all that partook.

The chairman of this wonderfully successful festival was Mrs. Fred MacDonald. The decorations and entertainment were arranged under the supervision of Miss Jennie Quick. The decorations were well arranged and consisted, besides the booths and tables, of a large sign in letters composed of violets, "Festival of Violets," while bunting and violets were arranged in choice array.

During the evening a number of selections were rendered by an excellent male quartette from Somerville, which were heartily applauded. This evening the ladies Schubert orchestra will furnish the entertainment.

Edward Van Winkle presided at the door and collected the tickets. The attendance was not as good as the festival deserved, but this evening a much larger number are expected.

Lecture by a Talented Woman.

Mrs. E. B. Horton, who is to lecture on "Historic Paris and the Treasures of the Douvre," in the chapel of the Crescent Avenue church, next Tuesday evening, is a delightful speaker and from her long residence abroad is admirably qualified to address an audience on this subject. She is well-known throughout this State as a vice-President of the New Jersey State Federation of Women's Clubs and as an officer in the General Federation as well. She is spoken of as the prospective President of the State Federation to be elected next fall. The lecture will be fully illustrated by beautiful stereoptican pictures and the proceeds are for the benefit of the Boy's Mission Band of the Crescent Avenue church.

Stole the Oranges.

Three small boys were loitering about Paoli & Co.'s fruit store yesterday afternoon, and when the opportunity offered itself they each made away with an orange. The man in charge gave chase and caught one of the lads near the fire headquarters on East Second street. He threatened to arrest him, and this fact frightened the boy so that his cries were heard blocks away. A crowd gathered and remonstrated with the man, who became angry and swore considerably. In the meantime the boy escaped and the man finding one orange, returned to his store muttering things that were not nice. The other two boys escaped also.

The Purchasing Power of a Dollar

is greater just now than at any time during the history of this country. Edsall, of the Commercial Palace, says that people come into his place every day and wonder how it is that he can sell fine goods so cheap. His buyers, who make buying a profession and are constantly in the market looking out for special opportunities to secure goods under their market value, keep the large store brimfull of good things, and are thus enabled to save many dollars for the patrons. Read the new ad in another column for further particulars.

Everyone a Gem.

An appreciative audience gathered in Grace M. E. church last evening and listened with pleasure to the programme as published in these columns Wednesday evening. Every number was a gem and it would be unfair to make special mention of any particular one. The musical was a great success financially and the audience was thoroughly pleased in every respect. Credit is due Miss Marguerite Schuck and John Steiner for their earnest efforts to give the patrons an evening of genuine pleasure.

Good News.

Street Commissioner R. A. Meeker told a Daily Press reporter recently that the work of repairing Park avenue between the railroad bridge and Front street, would probably be commenced next week. The Plainfield wheelmen would rise up and call him blessed if he would only get the roads in good condition.

A Lecture on Italy.

An illustrated lecture on Italy will be given this evening in the parish building of Holy Cross church by Rev. T. Logan Murphy, under the auspices of the Willing Circle of King's Daughters. Refreshments will be served after the lecture.

How To Treat a Wife.

(From the Pacific Health Journal.)

First, get a wife; second, be patient. You may have great trials and perplexities in your business, but do not therefore, carry to your home a cloud or cloudy brow. Your wife may have trials, which, though of less magnitude, may be hard for her to bear. A kind word, a tender look, will do wonders in chasing from her brow all clouds of gloom. To this we woul add always keep a bottle of Chamberlain's Cough Remedy in the house. It is the best and is sure to be needed sooner or later. Your wife will then know that you really care for her and wish to protect her health. For sale by T. S Armstrong, druggist.

MRS. DREIER VINDICATED

WINS THE CASE BROUGHT AGAINST HER FOR ALLEGED FRAUD.

Craig A. Marsh Appears for Her in the Supreme Court and After Considering the Case the Jury Found Her Not Guilty

Mrs. Augusta Dreier and her husband came home from Court at Jersey City yesterday feeling proud of the vindication which they had received from Supreme Court Justice Lippincott in the suit brought against them by Richard Bernhardt and wife.

Nearly a year ago, the Dreiers bought a large quantity of furniture from the Bernhardts and took a bill of sale for it. Two or three months ago the Bernhardts offered back the money and demanded back the furniture, claiming that the transaction was merely a loan, and that the bill of sale was obtained by fraud. The Dreiers indignantly denied the charge of fraud, and retained Craig A. Marsh as counsel to defend them in the threatened suit.

Mr. Stuhr, a Jersey City lawyer of prominence, brought suit for the Bernhardts for $3,000 damages, and the suit has been going on for the past two days in Jersey City. After the evidence was all in, Mr. Marsh insisted that, even under the evidence of the plaintiffs themselves, there had been no fraud or imposition of fraud of any character, and that it was their right to have the Court direct the jury to bring in a verdict in favor of the defendants. Mr. Stuhr opposed the motion and the argument over the matter was long and heated, but at its conclusion, the Court, in an elaborate opinion delivered orally from the bench, sustainined every proposition advanced by Mr. Marsh and directed the jury to render their verdict in favor of the defendants.

FOR MIND AND BODY.

Entertainment Given at the Sunday-School Reception at Vincent Chapel.

Entertainment for mind and body was provided at the reception given to the Senior department of the Sunday-school of the First M. E. church last evening at Vincent chapel and a very pleasant evening was enjoyed by all. During the first part of the evening a delightful programme was rendered as follows: Devotional exercises, address of welcome by Superintendent J. W. Jackson, "Like the Woodland Roses," Fred Mair, by the quartette, Charles H. Angleman, Lewis H. Bond, Fred J. Pope and Raymond A. McGee; baritone solo, Fred J. Pope; remarks by Rev. G. H. Whitney, D. D.; "Pickaniny Lullaby," J. C. Macy, by the quartette; piano solo, Miss May Whitney; "Sleep On and Rest," C. E. Leslie, by the quartette. The singing of the quartette was excellent, the well trained voices blending harmoniously together, and they were obliged to give an encore to each selection. Miss Whitney's piano solo was excellently rendered and evoked hearty applause.

At the conclusion of the mental entertainment a bountiful supply of ice cream and cake was passed and all indulged in a period of general sociability.

The reception and entertainment committtee that arranged the very pleasant evening consisted of J. R. Joy, chairman, Miss Ida Angleman, Miss Elsie Horne and Robert Davis. The refreshment committee was made up of Miss Gertrude Sharpe, Miss Minnie Sharpe, Miss Susie Jackson, and Miss Eva Jenkins.

MARY MANNING'S WILL IS VALID.

It Was Said That She Willed Property Which Did Not Belong to Her.

Judge McCormick has decided that the will of Mary Manning is valid. Mrs. Manning died at the hospital as the result of an operation which it was feared might result fatally. The only attack made on her will was on the ground that she left her husband a house and lot which was not hers to leave, but which had always belonged to the husband. All the rest of her property she left to other friends and relatives. Craig A. Marsh for the husband contended that the wife was evidently laboring under a delusion which ought to destroy the will. Harry Runyon and Augustus Brunson maintained that Mrs. Manning was in the full possession of all her faculties and had made a similar will long before. Mr. Runyon was himself one of the subscribing witnesses to the will and a nurse from the hospital was the other. Their testimony was uncontradicted and the court sustained the will. The question is a nice one and the case is likely to be appealed for that reason.

—Rev. Father Miller, of St. Joseph's R. C. church, who has just returned from an extended trip through California and Mexica, will give a talk Sunday evening at the church on Mexico.

LIVES A LIFE OF FEAR

STARTLING STORY OF CRUELTIES TOLD BY A COLORED WOMAN.

Mrs. Francis Wilson Says That Samuel Johnson Appropriated Her Money and is Abusing and Keeping Her Confined.

The quietude of City Judge DeMeza's office was interrupted this morning by a colored woman, whose startling story of cruelty and abuse promises, if true, to make things lively for Samuel Johnson, the colored proprietor of the little restaurant on Madison avenue between Front and Second streets.

Roundsman Mattox was riding past the postoffice on his wheel this morning at about 10:30 o'clock when he heard screams coming from the direction of Madison avenue. On investigating he found that they came from Johnson's restaurant. When he entered the place Johnson explained that it was only a little quarrel and that he had his hand over the mouth of Mrs. Francis Wilson, who looks after the kitchen, to prevent her from screaming.

Mrs. Wilson managed to escape on the entrance of Roundsman Mattox and went to Judge DeMeza's office where she told a different story.

Mrs. Wilson kept an intelligence office on Richmond street and managed to lay aside a little money. She finally decided to start in business. she told her interested listeners at Judge DeMeza's office, and consented to let Johnson run a restaurant under his name while she put up the money. Mrs. Wilson looked after the cooking and assisted in serving the customers. This plan has been in operation since last October and Mrs. Wilson says that Johnson has kept her in perfect misery ever since. He has, she says, beaten her, kicked her, and ill-treated her in all manner of ways and, of late, has not allowed her to leave the house but kept her there as in a prison. Her indignation rose to such a pitch that it was with difficulty that she could tell of the trials that she had undergone.

Mrs. Wilson is known to the police as a very quiet and orderly colored woman and is well known among the people of this city, as she has been employed in many Plainfield residences. Johnson is not known very well except through his recent scrap with Lemuel Perry, the North avenue barber. Mrs. Wilson declares that his real name is not Johnson and that he is a desperate character. She was confined to her bed for about a week a month ago by a terrible blow Johnson gave her in the eye.

Mrs. Wilson made a formal complaint and a warrant was issued and given to Patrolman McCue to serve.

A CO-OPERATIVE GROCERY.

A Committee Was Appointed to Form a Permanent Organization.

An enthusiastic meeting was held in Red Men's Hall last night for the purpose of organizing a co-operative association. The meeting was called to order by S. R. Struthers, and Robert Gow was called to the chair. The first business taken up was the reading and adopting of articles of organization.

The objects of the association are to form a company, each member taking a number of shares. The number of shares is limited, to prevent monopoly. The company will purchase groceries wherever they can be bought the cheapest, and conduct a business of its own on the same plan as a grocery store. Everything will be spot cash. The prices will be the same as in other stores and there will thus be no competion. Every three months the profits will be divided. Not according to the number of shares held, but on the amount of the purchases. The more a person's purchases are, the more his income.

The following committee was appointed on organization: Messrs. James Bell, David Bowden, W. F. Oliver, S. R. Struthers. Robert Gow, W. G. Gray, H. C. Nomer, James Chamberlain and Henry VanMiddlesworth.

The committee appointed to draw up by-laws was: W. F. Oliver, James Bell, W. G. Gray. S. R. Struthers and Robert Gow.

The meeting then adjourned.

Mr. D. P. Davis, a prominent liveryman and merchant of Goshen, Va., has this to say on the subject of rheumatism: "I take pleasure in recommending Chamberlain's Pain Balm for rheumatism, as I know from personal experience that it will do all that is claimed for it. A year ago this spring my brother was laid up in bed with inflammatory rheumatism and suffered intensely. The first application of Chamberlain's Pain Balm eased the pain and the use of one bottle completely cured him. For sale by T. S. Armstrong, druggist.

GETTING RIGHT TO WORK.

Town Improvement Association Will Be No Nonentity.

The word slow is not included in the dictionary of the Town Improvement Association and there promises to be no delay in the carrying out of their plans. The executive committee met this morning and listened to the reports of several committees. The outlook committee reported as did the committee on cruelty to animals. The action of ex-Marshal Pangborn in having Barry arrested, and the unfavorable criticism it has caused, was discussed and the following resolution was passed:

Resoved, That the Town Improvement Association extend their appreciation and approbation to those humane citizens who considered it their duty to make an arrest in North Plainfield, when the laws or the Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Animals were violated.

Mrs. Eaton, as chairman of the railroad committee, made an interesting report. They suggested that stations be kept in better order.

The North Avenue station was reported to be in bad condition, while the condition of the Netherwood station was highly commended. The Grant Avenue station and the street railway strtion were both reported to be in good order. The chairman of the committee was authorized to write to the officials of the Jersey Central Railroad to call their attention to the condition of the North Avenue station, and the height of the steps of the cars, which are so high as to be very difficult for women to mount.

Another interesting report came from the committee on parks, trees, and natural beauties, and the chairman, Mrs. McCarthy, call especial attention to the ravages of the elm tree beetle and reported having consulted Prof. Smith, of New Brunswick, State Entomologist, who recomended taking the matter in hand as once.

It was reported that vines would be placed on the stonework of the railroad bridges as soon as the required permission could be obtained. The placing of the soldiers' monument and a memorial fountain in front of the Crescent Avenue church was suggested, as was the arrangement of a little park at the intersection of LaGrande and Putnam avenues and Franklin place.

A public meeting will be held next Friday.

BATTLE WITH SNAKES.

Two Scotch Plains Lads Succeed in Killing Two Big Reptiles.

John Sell and Archie Davie, two boys who reside in Scotch Plains, had a fierce battle with two large black-snakes yesterday at the foot of the mountains back of Netherwood. The boys were roaming through the woods when they were suddenly set upon by the snakes. The boys bravely stood their ground and after a battle which lasted half an hour they managed to kill the reptiles. One of the snakes measured five feet nine inches in length and the other six feet two inches.

Liberal Women Here.

The annual meeting of the New York League of Unitarian and other Liberal Christian Women, is being held today in All Souls church, this city. The meeting is exclusively for women and representatives are present from New York, Brooklyn, Orange, Passaic, Rutherford and this city. The church is very neatly decorated with a profusion of apple blossoms. At the morning session two papers were read on the subject "Service Which Rational Religion Demands," by Mrs. W. I. Nichols, of Brooklyn and Mrs. R. H. Davis, of New York. An informal discussion followed. The meeting will close this afternoon.

Horses Fight.

B. F. Crane, the Park avenue butcher, was obliged to kill a valuable horse this morning. The horse broke his halter strap during the night and walked into the stall where another horse was standing. The latter horse did not like his visitor and to show his dislike kicked him. The result was that a leg was broken off near the upper joint. When Mr. Crane went to the stables this morning he discovered the fracture. He sent for Dr. Herbert, who upon investigation thought it best to kill the animal, which was done.

For every quarter in a man's pocket there are a dozen uses; and to use each one in such a way as to derive the greatest benefit is a question every one must solve for himself. We believe, however, that no better use could be made of one of these quarters than to exchange it for a bottle of Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhœa Remedy, a medicine that every family should be provided with. A SPINSTER GERMAN.

DELIGHTFUL EVENT GIVEN BY THE LADIES IN THE CASINO.

New and Novel Figures Arranged for the Pleasure of the Guests.—Decorations of the Ballroom Were Very Superb.

Society saw the Casino at its prettiest last evening and at the same time enjoyed one of the most novel and delightful Germans that have been held in this city. It was a subscription "Spinster" German, gotten up by the ladies. The ballroom of the Union County Country Club is charming in itself, but when the ladies had finished with it, it was transformed in appearance and scarcely recognizable.

A screen of lattice work, intertwined with sprays of apple, cherry and dogwood blossoms, was stretched across the end of the room by the large fireplace, making the pleasantest little reception room imaginable. Easy chairs and fancy tables were placed around this room. Soft rugs covered the floor, while the dainty white apple blossoms, greens and luxurious hangings hid the walls from view. Bluedelf ware conformed with the general color of the decorations, while potted plants, screens and all the little fancy articles that beautify the home, were arranged artistically about this reception room.

An opening in the middle of the latticed partition formed an entrance to the remaining portion of the ballroom. The white blossoms were fastened about the walls in tasteful array, while in a far corner was the favor table, hidden in a latticed bower, covered with the prevailing apple and cherry blossoms. The front of the stage was hung with white bunting which was almost hidden by greens and branches of apple blossoms, while potted plants and ferns were arranged along the edge so that the musicians were almost hidden from view. The general effect was certainly very beautiful and it was pronounced the prettiest manner in which the Casino has ever been decorated.

The German itself was a great success. The music was excellent, the favors dainty and original and the figures novel and pleasing. Among the new figures was the golf figure. Each of the ladies were provided with a numbered golf club and a numbered ball. They gathered at one end of the room and drove the golf balls to the other end where the gentlemen were waiting. Each of the gentlemen secured a ball and danced with the lady holding the golf club of the same number. The target figure was also something new. Three targets, with hearts as bulleyes, were placed in position and three gentlemen chosen, to representative a target. Then two ladies, armed with blowpipes, blew little darts at each target and the one coming nearest to the heart in the centre enjoyed the next dance with the gentleman representing her target, while her less skillful opponent retired to the settees. In the leap year figure, each gentleman was provided with a fancy red heart and a red mitten. Then two of the ladies asked him to dance and he was forced to show his preference by giving his chice the heart and the other one the mitten. The screen figure was another novel one. Six of the ladies were inclosed behind a colored paper folding screen of six divisions, the colors corresponding to those of the different colleges. Six of the gentlemen kneeled before the screen, each in front of a different division. At a given signal, the ladies burst through the paper screen and danced with the gentleman kneeling in front. There were a number of other pleasing figures, all of which passed off very successfully.

During the evening the gentlemen were escorted to supper by the ladies and the other leap year features of this very successful German were carried out without hitch.

The German was led by Mrs. Lewis G. Timpson. The favors were given out by Mrs. J. W. Reinhart, Mrs. O. T. Waring and Mrs. D. T. VanBuren. The others present were the Misses Wilson, Wharton, Waring, Reinhart, Walz, Evans, Yates, Baker, Sprague, Murphy, Shepard, Hyde, Smalley and Clark; Miss Phillips, of Pittsburg; Miss Barber, of New York; the Messrs Waring, Shepard, West, Runyon, VanBuren, McGee, Murphy, Frost, Peck, Dr. Hedges, Dr. Ard; Mr. Hunghart, of Pittsburg; the Messrs Blagden, of New York; Mr. and Mrs. Clifton Wharton, Jr., L. G. Timpson, Fred. W. Yates, Evarts Tracy, John Doull Miller, E. M. VanBuren, Alfred Streuli, Ferdinand Streuli, M. S. Ackerman, J. Frank Raymond.

The music was furnished by Rogers. Max Wiertz served the supper.

—A special meeting of the Young Men's Association of the Monroe Avenue chapel will be held this evening.

M'KINLEY'S VICTORY

His Illinois Followers Have a Great Celebration at Springfield.

SENATOR CULLOM'S DEFEAT CRUSHING

Even the Ohio Man's Friends Surprised at the Magnitude of Their Success at the Illinois Convention Yesterday.

Springfield, Ill., May 1.—The McKinley supporters had undisputed possession of this city last night celebrating with bands and banners, glee clubs, torches, red fire and songs of triumph their great victory over the Cullomites in convention yesterday afternoon, and indeed it was a victory to be proud of. It was late in the afternoon when the opponents of the Ohio man capitulated before a terrific onslaught of the friends of ex-Gov. McKinley. By a majority of 329 in a total vote of 1,335—a majority as unexpected to the supporters of the Ohioan as it was staggering to Senator Cullom and his friends—the republican state convention instructed the four delegates-at-large from Illinois to the St. Louis convention, not merely to vote for and support the Ohio candidate, but actually "to present his name to that body as the candidate and choice of Illinois for the presidential nomination."

Crushing Defeat for Senator Cullom.

It is true that the form in which the resolution was adopted—the substitution of McKinley's name in the Cullom resolution—was due to the over-zeal of a delegate who anticipated the regular McKinley indorsement which was to have been presented by the spokesman of his following—but in the enthusiasm and uproar that attended the contest between the two factions it was lost to consideration and as a result by the record as it stands, the Illinois delegation to St. Louis may, should it see fit to carry out its instructions to the letter, claim a share with the Buckeyes in presenting to the convention the favorite son of Ohio. That the outcome was a crushing defeat for Senator Cullom and the Chicago element that for years has held the republican party fast in its iron grip is conceded alike by vanquished and victors. All that good generalship, influence and trading of votes for the various candidates on the state ticket could do was done by the defeated faction to defeat a free expression of McKinley element. It captured the committees and dictated the principal nominations and up to within an hour of the crucial test even the McKinleyites were almost willing to confess that their fight had been a losing one.

Stampede for McKinley.

The turning point came when the candidate for auditor, who was especially championed by an anti-Catholic organization and to whom the machine pledged its full support, was defeated by a one-armed veteran of the war by less than a baker's dozen of votes. The sentiment attached to the old blue uniform had more to do with the result than any other consideration. But the friends of the defeated candidate, and they ran up into the hundreds, charged treachery upon the machine. From the moment that the result of the ballot was declared it was evident the opposition had lost its grip, and when the opportune moment arrived not only did the delegates who had received instructions or indorsements stand to their guns, but the uninstructed brigades poured broadside after broadside into the anti-McKinley ranks. Before the last county had recorded its vote the majority of the opposition was tumbling over itself in its eagerness to secure seats in the band wagon.

MODEL CITY POWER.

Celebration of the Resumption of Work on the Niagara River Canal.

Niagara Falls, N. Y., May 1.—Two thousand people gathered at Model City yesterday afternoon to celebrate the resumption of work on the canal which is to develop from Niagara river water 140,000 horse power for manufacturing and other purposes in the new industrial city. Among those present were representatives of monied interests from Chicago, Hartford, Springfield, Mass.; Cleveland, Pittsburg, Philadelphia, New York, Boston, Albany, Bay City, Mich.; Toronto, and other places of lesser importance throughout the country. The undertaking, which is being carried on by the Niagara Power & Development company, excels in magnitude any similar enterprise on the American continent. The company possesses the broadest charter ever granted in this state, and in addition to the right to take unlimited water for power from the Niagara river, it controls all the municipal franchises. A feature of Model City is that it will be strictly a total abstinence town, every deed prohibiting the sale of liquors on the premises.

Great Things Proposed.

President Love, the original of the Model City scheme and head of the Niagara Power & Development company, said to a representative of the United Press to-day: "We propose to create the greatest manufacturing city in the world here, and to do it quickly by giving away thousands of acres of ground free for factory sites, and free power for forty years to every factory employing one man for each horse power donated. Over $4,000,000 worth of Model City property is now controlled by capitalists and individuals throughout the country. Work has been commenced on a school house and on a hotel. Liberal subscriptions have also been made for the erection of a Methodist church. We propose to furnish immediate employment to 1,000 laborers who are heads of families on condition that they locate here, but we want only sober, worthy men, who will establish a home for themselves in our city, the company aiding them to do so. We have already a large number people in our employ and with the additional help needed to carry on our canal and other works, and the merchants to suply their wants, we will soon have a good sized city."

KRUGER'S PRISONERS

Rumors as to the Punishment To Be Inflicted.

FINES AND BANISHMENT EXPECTED

The Cipher Dispatches Brought Out at the Trials Regarded as a Matter of Serious Concern—Hammond in Ill Health.

London, May 1.—A dispatch from Pretoria this morning says that all kinds of rumors as to the probable sentences that the condemned reform union leaders will receive are in circulation. Mrs. Kruger, wife of the president, has sent messages of sympathy to the families of the condemned men, and the belief grows that the ultimate decision of the executive council will be to impose heavy fines on the four important prisoners and banish them from the Transvaal. One rumor current is that President Kruger has decided to impose the penalty of five years' penal servitude, with banishment at the end of that term of imprisonment, on Hammond, Rhodes and the other reform committee leaders whose sentence of death was remitted.

Hammond in Ill Health.

London, May 1.—A dispatch to the Times from Pretoria, dated April 29, says that the health of John Hays Hammond is in such a state as to cause great anxiety to his friends. J. S. Curtis, the mining engineer of New York, is confined to his room with an affection of the brain. The leaders who were condemned to death are confined in one small room, where they are visited by crowds of their relatives and friends.

Petitions for Full Pardons.

Johannesburg, May 1.—The Diggers' News says that influential burghers from all parts of the Transvaal have flocked to Pretoria to petition the government for total abolition of the sentences of imprisonment imposed upon the members of the reform committee condemned by the high court at Pretoria.

A Matter of Serious Concern.

London, May 1.—The British press, generally, commenting on the series of cipher telegrams that were entered as evidence at the trial of the reform committee at Pretoria, which it is claimed showed beyond any doubt that the raid of Dr. Jameson was the outcome of a carefully prearranged plan on the part of certain members of the South Africa company to seize a part of the Transvaal, considers the disclosures a matter of serious concern, and one paper declares that England will have to face a demand for the revocation of the South Africa company's charter.

WORK OF SPOTTERS.

Charges Preferred Against Fifteen Boston Letter Carriers.

Boston, May 1.—There has been received from the postmaster general's office at Washington letters addressed to fifteen carriers in this district notifying them that charges had been preferred against them by the special agents, inspectors or "spotters" who have been in this district for the past six weeks. The letters were addressed personally to the carriers, and it is not known at present who received them. That there are fifteen, however, is known. As far as can be learned the charges are considered trivial, but whether or not the carriers will be summarily removed from their positions will not be known until after they have forwarded their replies to Washington.

Speedy Conviction and Sentence of Several Philadelphia Traction Employes.

Philadelphia, May 1.—James Campbell, Wallace McGee, Joseph Dinsmore and Nicholas Walther, motormen of the Union Traction company who were arrested on Saturday night for assaulting non-union employes, and who were quickly indicted, were arraigned before Judge Yerkes in the quarter sessions court yesterday. Campbell was tried first and the jury convicted him without leaving the box. He was sentenced to two years' imprisonment in the Eastern penitentiary. Walther pleaded guilty but he was ill and for this reason the court postponed sentence until Monday. McGee and Dinsmore also pleaded guilty. Thomas Pillion, who was also indicted, was not tried.

BILIOUS PILLIOUSNESS.

Why Some Bilious People Take Pills and Others Don't.

Biliousness is much misunderstood. So many people have it, that 'tis worth understanding, the more so as it is easy enough, if you begin right.

Liver secretes a fluid called bile. Bile goes to the intestines, where it performs important work in digestion. Sometimes bile passages in liver get clogged. This is biliousness.

"Pilliousness" is the idea that by taking a pill which stimulates the liver, we may cure biliousness. It is only an idea.

Pill-taking relieves but does not cure it. The cure can only come through the stomach.

Why?

Biliousness is caused by the poison of undigested food, irritating the liver. To cure biliousness, these poisons must be got out of the stomach. The only sure way to do this is with Shaker Digestive Cordial.

Shaker Digestive Cordial is a pleasant, tonic aid to digestion, prepared from roots, herbs and wine by the Shakers of Mount Lebanon. It helps the stomach to digest its food, and sweeps out of the system all dangerous poisons.

In this way it cures biliousness, headache, nausea, dizziness, bad taste, stomache, fever, flatulence, constipation, loss of appetite, etc., when other remedies only give temporary relief.

All druggists. Ten cents for a trial bottle.

IT WAS DYNAMITE

The Explosion at the Palace in Havana Not an Accident.

WEYLER IN A STATE OF TERROR

The Work Now Attributed to Friends of the Insurgents—Gomez with a Strong and Well-equipped Force Advancing.

Havana, May 1.—A dynamite bomb caused the explosion in the captain-general's palace Tuesday, and not a gas engine as reported. The noise was tremendous and caused intense excitement in the palace and vicinity. The generals and officers rushed about giving orders. Even Weyler left the room greatly excited. Only one person was hurt. The others escaped miraculously. The whole palace shook by the force of the explosion. Clouds of dust blinded all persons inside. The bomb destroyed two safes. The bomb was placed in a closet at the southeast corner of the palace. It is believed to be the work of laborers in sympathy with the insurgents. The government says anarchists did it. The police are making a diligent search. Strong measures will be adopted to prevent a repetition of similar acts, as all the officials, including Weyler himself, are in a state bordering on terror.

Gomez, with a Strong Force, Advancing.

Gomez's advance is confirmed. It is now reported he has entered Matanzas provinces with a strong force of ten or twelve thousand men, five pieces of artillery and plenty of ammunition. It is presumed an attack on the trocha on both sides in combination with Maceo will follow and hot fighting is expected. News of a bloody battle near Zanja, province of Santiago de Cuba, has been received. Gen. Munez tried to prevent Gen. Calixto Garcia from crossing the Canto river. Munez organized a strong land column and ordering gunboats to proceed to Co-operate, left Manzanille to intercept Garcia. The latter, with Rabi's column, made a junction with the forces of Maria Rodriguez from Camaguey. The combined insurgent forces attacked Munez as he was advancing and defeated him. Munez lost over 200 killed and 400 wounded. But for the gunboats, Munez's column would have been destroyed. Munez retreated to Manzanillo, and Garcia is now operating without opposition.

News from Government Sources.

Havana, May 1.—Col. Ardanaz has arrived at Holguin. He reports that his command had two engagements with rebels near Zanja and Caibaguan. The insurgents had many killed and wounded. The troops had three men killed and two officers and fifteen privates wounded. Capt. Pozo, commanding the Palma guerrillas, who captured two men belonging to the Laborde expedition, had a hot fight with rebels near Rio Blanco. Capt. Pozo was seriously wounded. A lieutenant was slightly wounded and one of the guerrillas was killed. The rebels lost seven killed and many wounded. A rebel band commanded by Bundera attacked the town of Artemisa, which is situated on the military line across the island. They burned a few huts and the neighboring canefields. The garrison repulsed the attack from the trenches, using artillery. The troops had two wounded. News reaches here of an important battle on Friday last between Col. Segura's command and rebels under Robau, Nunez and Zayas about four leagues southwest of Sagua la Grande. No details have been made public. Consul General Williams yesterday visted Captain-General Weyler and the marine authorities on behalf of the Americans alleged to have been captured on the filibustering schooner Competitor, which was seized on Tuesday off the nort coast of the province of Pinar del Rio. Mr. Williams refused to say what the result of his interview was, declaring that the consulate was no news agency.

Bourke Cockran's Injuries.

New York, May 1.—At Bourke Cockran's residence this morning it was stated that he was feeling a little less pain from the effects of his bicycle accident than he suffered last night. Mr. Cockran's physician said that his patient's hip was badly bruised and that the tendons of the leg were sprained. He also said that Mr. Cockran would be able to attend to his usual duties in about a week or two.

ARMENIAN RELIEF.

Report of Hospital Work at Oorfa—8,000 People Killed.

New York, May 1.—The following report, under date of March 22, of relief work at Oorfa has just been received by the national Armenian relief committee in this city: "The hospital which we have opened is in a house of five rooms that have been newly built with good carpentry, glass windows, etc. It was completely wrecked, every room battered and blood bespattered—all the inmates were killed. Our patients are doing well. But only a small part of those who apply can be received. From our distributing house over 6,000 articles, such as dishes and pieces of clothing, have been given out. Our committee this week learned of a family of forty-one members belonging to six brothers, of which every member was wiped out. It is simply terrible to listen to the accounts of the massacre; what must it have been to witness them? The faces of the women with their helpless little ones, tell volumes. Many have no more tears to shed, are calm, but their sorrow has a depth which God grant we may never know. The hardest of all is to refuse work for the many women who beg for it. We can only employ about 300 making cloth in our industrial deparment. The number killed here has been given too few, in the desire of not overstating. It is now clear that 7,000, if not 8,000, were killed in Oorfa."

In Aid of Suffering Armenians.

New York, May 1.—In view of the great and continued suffering in Turkey and the critical condition of the relief work, Rev. B. Fay Mills, the well known evangelist, has consented, at the request of the national Armenian relief committee, to hold a series of meetings in the interest of relief cause in a number of the larger cities, beginning about the middle of this month.

EARL GREY IN BULUWAYO.

No Further Danger of an Attack by the Matabeles.

Buluwayo, Matabeleland, May 1.—Earl Grey, co-administrator with Cecil Rhodes of the territory of the British Chartered South African company, has arrived here with a strong escort. The recent actions with the insurgent Matabeles have resulted in inflicting such severe loss upon them that Buluwayo is looked upon as being practically relieved, and it is no longer likely that the natives will attack the town in force, although they still number more than 15,000 armed men in this vicinity. A Matabele deserter who reached here yesterday stated that acute dissension prevailed among the hostiles and that the rest of the tribe threaten to wipe out the Sekuti, Imbezu and other regiments. The Imbezus, it is said, are threatening their "God" for not having fulfilled his promise to turn the bullets of the whites into water.

THE PHILADELPHIA STRIKE.

Not Many Men Out—The City Quiet This Morning.

Philadelphia, May 1.—The srrike leaders claim that many more men are out than the Union Traction company officials admit and assert that more will go out when the official notices are posted in the division headquarters. At present the Traction company people assert that not more than 250 men have recognized the call. Along the lines of the different roads all is quiet, and no disturbances are reported this morning from any quarter.

Democratic Primaries.

The Democratic voters of North Plainfield Borough will meet in the basement of the School House on Saturday evening, May 2d, at 8 o'clock to elect 2 delegates to attend the State Convention at Trenton, May 7th. The voters in the Township of North Plainfield will meet at Demler's Hotel at 3 o'clock in the afternoon of same day, May 2d, to elect delegates to attend the same convention.

The calls for the city Democratic primaries will be printed in The Press tomorrow.

Reed is a silent factor in New Jersey. But one voice has been heard for him, and that is Senator Pitney.

The bicycle is no respecter of persons when it comes to giving the rider a tumble. The Hon. Burke Cochran, of New York, went to the hospital for repairs because of this fact.

Some of the most useful patents exhibited in the department at Washington are the product of New Jersey genius. In the field of invention, as in the other great professions of the age, Jersey brains are far and away in advance.—New York Press.

After one of the most stormy sessions ever recorded, in which the Republicans ruled with a high hand and a ponderous majority, the New York Legislature adjourned sine die yesterday. Boss Platt has smiled all the while and still grins. He is a great man in New York.

The board of directors of the Brunswick Traction Company have decided to allow the members of the fire department in New Brunswick the free use of the trolley cars in cases of fire. This has long been the rule of the Plainfield Street Railway Company, the members of the department being allowed free tranportation for a half hour after the fire is extinguished.

The primaries in Union county for the election of delegates to the Democratic State Convention will be held Tuesday evening. The results of the last election in various municipalities of the State gave evidence that the Democrats are coming home to roost. This feeling ought to bring out a large attendance of members of the party at the primaries who will take the first steps towards making a Democratic Presidential candidate.

The policy of cheap Johnness which characterizes the News made Editor Runyon the laughing stock of the whole city the first of the week. Sometime ago this "enterprising" publisher arranged for a special artist, albeit a cheap boiler-plate service, to furnish cartoons for his paper. Monday the "artist" run amuck and a Democratic cartoon appeared in the News. The eyes of Editor Runyon were too busy watching his $3.50 a week printers to discover the ridicule he was casting on his own party, but after the cartoon had been printed he hastened to make an apology in direct contradiction of his boasted sentiments of independence.

UP TO DATE NOVELTIES.

Women For Clowns and Ringmasters in the Big Circus.

For the first time in America a woman clown will be seen in a circus—two of them in fact. For the first time, also, there will be women ringmasters and object holders. All these novelties are in Barnum & Bailey's Greatest Show on Earth, which will exhibit here on May 6th. These are not all the unique features by any means that patrons of the circus will be treated to, for besides the regular three equestrian rings, there are three stages, a race track, and lots of aerial appliances. Among the equestrian novelties are three, which are performed simultaneously—the new woman on horseback in bloomers and the skirt and serpentine dancers—all of which are known as long-skirt acts and are executed concurrently on bareback horses in three rings. The number of actual novelties that will be seen this season in this show, is very great, of which the Ethnic exhibition called Oriental India with lots of strange living people, is a most picturesque and charming one, and the twenty-four elephants, Johanna, the giantess gorilla, and the giraffe are conspicuous features. One hundred acts will be given in what is equivalent to seven arenas—that is three circus rings, three elevated stages, and the hippodrome racing track, so that the lovers of the circus will have a feast of displays this year that will prove both new and startling. To transport the vast material of the show requires sixty-four railroad cars and actually 400 horses are necessary to haul the 100 cages and chariots, while the monster free street parade is simply overwhelming, and so far ahead of all others as positively to blot them out of existence when a comparison is made. This is the only show ever exhibiting in New York city, the only show whose advertisements are taken in all the religious papers, and whose coming causes a thrill of pleasure to prevade the community.

There is more catarrh in this section of the country than all other diseases put together, and until the last few years was supposed to be incurable. For a great many years doctors pronounced it a local disease, and prescribed local remedies, and by continually failing to cure with local treatment, pronounced it incurable. Science has proven catarrh to be a constitutional disease and therefore requires constitutional treatment. Hall's Catarrh Cure, manufactured by F. J. Cheney & Co., Toledo, Ohio, is the only constitutional cure on the market. It is taken internally in doses from 10 drops to a teaspoonful. It acts directly on the blood and mucous surfaces of the system. They offer one hundred dollars for any case it fails to cure. Send for circulars and testimonials. Address F. J. Royal Baking Powder

ABSOLUTELY PURE

FOR TEMPERANCE.

Editor O'Brien, of New York, Extols Its Benefits.

During the past winter St. Mary's T. A. B. Society have given several entertainments, the object being to further the cause of temperance, and last evening a good-sized audience asembled at eight o'clock to hear J. W. O'Brien, of New York, editor of the Sunday Union and Catholic Times, deliver a temperance lecture. The subject is naturally a dry one, but Mr. O'Brien made it very interesting, his remarks being interspersed by many anecdotes, and he held the close attention of his hearers to the end of his address. Mr. O'Brien has had large experience in temperance matters, having been National Secretary of the Catholic Temperance Union for many years. He told of the benefits of temperance, and cited many examples to prove his assertions. A great many people, he said, think ale and beer contain strengthening properties, but according to a test made by Prof. Doremus, a loaf of bread has more nutriment than a barrel of ale. The speaker said that Stanley, the African explorer, told him he always took men on exploring expeditions who did not drink liquors, as they stood the heat better. The same rule also applied to those in the Arctic regions. Fathers Smyth and Murphy also made a few remarks. The temperance society and cadets were present and renewed their pledge. St. Mary's Temperance Society was organized May 19th, 1872, is in a flourishing condition and a credit to the church and city.

TO VOTE TO-MORROW

House Will Then Decide the Fate of the Bankruptcy Bill.

THREE ELECTION CASES DECIDED

Populist Senator Allen Predicts Collapse of Both the Democratic and Republican Parties—No Progress on the Naval Bill.

Washington, May 1.—The house is to-day still engaged in the consideration of the bankruptcy bill, a vote on the passage of which is to be taken to-morrow. Yesterday's debate consumed fully five hours, the principal speakers being Messrs. Dearmon, dem., Mo.; Tawney, rep., Minn., and Bailey, dem., Tex., against the bill and Messrs. Burton, rep., Me.; Culberson, dem., Tex., and Ray, rep., N. Y., in favor of the bill. The latter two admitted their conversion from an attitude of opposition to a bill containing the involuntary feature. The discussion developed the fact that the house was practically unanimous in favor of a bill providing for voluntary bankruptcy—the difference in opinion was as to the incorporation of the involuntary feature. The house has disposed of the three contested election cases from Mississippi, adopting the resolutions reported from the elections committee confirming the title of the sitting members, Messrs. Allen, Williams and Spencer, democrats, to their seats. The contestants in these cases based their claims for the seats upon an alleged violation of the federal law regulating the representation of Mississippi in congress by the constitution of that state. The committee declined to make a declaration on that question. A bill was passed increasing the pension of Gen. Wm. Grose of Indiana from $20 to $75 a month.

In the Senate.

No progress has been made upon the naval appropriation bill beyond the exclusion, on a point of order, of Senator Quay's amendment to increase the number of battleships from four to six. Mr. Gorman's amendment to reduce the number to two was the proposition before the senate when it met to-day. Speeches were made by Mr. White, dem., Cal., in favor of coast defense rather than of an increase of the navy; by Allen, pop., Neb., predicting the collapse of the democratic and republican parties—the former within three months and the latter by the 4th of March, 1901, and by Gorman, dem., Md., in enforcement of his views as to the necessity of more economy in appropriations.

GERMANY AND JAPAN.

A New and Liberal Commercial Treaty Signed by the Two Countries.

Washington, May 1.—The United States ambassador at Berlin informs the state department that a new commercial treaty to continue twelve years has been signed by the representatives of Germany and Japan. The text of the treaty is not yet made public, but the ambassador says it is reported that Japan has granted material reductions in duties upon manufactured articles imported from Germany, while Germany accords Japan the treatment of the "most favored nations." It is stipulated, it is said, that the commercial part of the treaty may be changed in 1904, when the treaties with Austria and Russia terminate. A convention is also said to have been made in regard to patents, trade marks and on the subject of consular jurisdiction, to go into effect in 1899.

MAY TRY TO OVERRIDE IT.

A Total Disability Pension Veto Considered by House Committee.

Washington, May 1.—The house committee on invalid pensions has considered the message of the president vetoing the bill increasing to $50 per month the pension of a totally disabled soldier named Francis E. Hoover, formerly of Sixty-fourth Ohio volunteers. Though no definite conclusion has been reached the indications were that the bill would be returned to the house with recommendations that it pass, the president's veto notwithstanding.

Spring Shoot at Newburgh.

Newburgh, N. Y., May 1.—The three days' spring tournament of the West Newburgh Gun and Rifle association began here yesterday and noted shots were present from New York, Rochester, Syracuse and other cities. Ten events were shot off at clay birds and the same number is scheduled for to-day. To-morrow there will be three events with live pigeons.

Ninger Indicted in New Jersey.

Trenton, May 1.—Emanuel Ninger, the counterfeiter now in custody in New York, has had two bills of indictment found against him for making counterfeit money at Slagtown, Somerset county, New Jersey. The indictments charge him with making bills of $20 and $50 denominations.

O'Leary Takes the Oath of Office.

Albany, May 1.—Daniel O'Leary of Glens Falls, the new state factory inspector, took the oath of office shortly after his confirmation by the senate yesterday afternoon. The new assistant factory inspector, Capt. Joseph H. Parker of New York city, was also sworn in.

Probably of Incendiary Origin.

Worcester, Mass., May 1.—It is believed that the fire which destroyed ex-Deputy Sheriff Swallow's house and barn yesterday in Brookfield, causing a loss of $3,000, was of incendiary origin.

Cardinal Galimberti Seriously Ill.

Rome, May 1.—Cardinal Luigi Galimberti, prefect of the pontifical archives, is seriously ill in this city.

Just a Little Blind Boy.

A little Cincinnati boy, who was an inmate of the state institution for the blind, was placed in the carpenter shop the other day for the purpose of learning the trade. The boy was given his first lesson, and he worked very industriously until the teacher came around again, when he said:

"Did you say that God knows everything?"

The teacher said: "Yes."

"Do you think He sees everything that is made?" the boy asked.

"Yes," was the answer.

"Then I bet He'll laugh when He sees this stool."—Cincinnati Tribune.

The Young Doctor Ahead.

Joker—I suffer from cold feet at night.

Dr. Glynn—Is your general health good?

"Perfectly."

"Good appetite?"

"First rate."

"Sleep under blankets?"

"Yes."

"Take plenty of out-door exercise?"

"Lots."

"Very strange!"

"The cold feet I suffer from are my wife's."

"Ah! Get a divorce. Two dollars please."—N. Y. Weekly.

One Convert.

"For marriage choose your opposite."
At first I thought that rash;
But I shall choose my opposite—
I want a girl with cash.

—Judge.

A CRUEL DISAPPOINTMENT.

Pat—Yez know thot wake Oi tould yez Oi wor goin' t' invoite yez t'?

Mike—Yis.

Pat—Well, it graves me heart t' disapp'int yez, but th' docthor sez now thot me woife will git well.—Judge.

Evolution.

He had a high and haughty mien,
His shoes an agressive squeak:
But that was when he'd a salary
Of seven dollars a week.
He moves about quite meekly now,
He shrinks into his collar;
But now each hour of his life
His income is a dollar.

—Cincinnati Tribune.

A Perverted Philosopher.

"An ounce of prevention is worth a pound of cure, ain't it?" said Meandering Mike.

"Of course it is," replied Plodding Pete.

"Well, dat's de reason I don't accept no job from nobody. Ef I was workin' I might be tempted ter go on a strike. An' den see de trouble I'd be in?"—Washington Star.

To Save Time.

Collector—You would oblige me very much if you would straighten up this little account to-day.

Mr. Meeks—You will have to see my wife; she always attends to those matters.

Collector—I know she does, but I came to you to economize time, and I'll throw off forty per cent. in the start.—Pittsburgh Dispatch.

First Aid to the Injured.

"What was that explosion I heard a few moments ago?" asked the head of the house.

"One of Miss Charlotte's pneumatic sleeves was blown up too tight and burst, sir," replied the servant. "I've just telephoned for two surgeons, the ambulance and seven reporters."—Judge.

It made my blood run wildly. But Diane did not come back. Strange! And Bezers too was unmoved. He stood between the poor woman and the door, and by a gesture bid Mirepoix and the priest pass out before him. "Madame," he said—and his voice, stern and hard as ever, expressed no jot of compassion for her, rather such an impatient contempt as a puling child might elicit—"you are safe here. And here you will stop! Weep if you please," he added cynically, "you will have fewer tears to shed to-morrow."

His last words—they certainly were odd ones—arrested her attention. She checked her sobs, being frightened, I think, and looked up at him. Perhaps he had spoken with this in view, for while she still stood at gaze, her hands pressed to her bosom, he slipped quickly out and closed the door behind him. I heard a muttering for an instant outside, and then the tramp of feet descending the stairs. They were gone, and we were still undiscovered.

For madame, she had clean forgotten our presence—of that I am sure—and the chance of escape we might afford. On finding herself alone she gazed a short time in alarmed silence at the door, and then ran to the window and peered out, still trembling, terrified, silent. So she remained awhile.

She had not noticed that Bezers on going out had omitted to lock the door behind him. I had. But I was unwilling to move hastily. Some one might return to see to it before the vidame left the house. And, besides, the door was not over strong, and if locked would be no obstacle to the three of us when we had only Mirepoix to deal with. So I kept the others where they were by a nudge and a pinch, and held my breath a moment, straining my ears to catch the closing of the door below. I did not hear that. But I did catch a sound that otherwise might have escaped me, but which now riveted my eyes to the door of our room. Some one in the silence, which followed the trampling on the stairs, had cautiously laid a hand on the latch.

"You are safe here, and here you will stop."

The light in the room was dim. Mirepoix had taken one of the candles with him, and the other wanted snuffing. I could not see whether the latch moved; whether or not it was rising. But watching intently, I made out that the door was being opened—slowly, noiselessly. I saw some one enter—a furtive gliding shadow.

For a moment I felt nervous—then I recognized the dark hooded figure. It was only Mme. d'O. Brave woman! She had evaded the vidame and slipped to the rescue. Ha, ha! We would defeat the vidame yet! Things were going better!

But then something in her manner—as she stood holding the door and peering into the room—something in her bearing startled and frightened me. As she came forward her movements were so stealthy that her footsteps made no sound. Her dark shadow, moving ahead of her across the floor, was not more silent than she. An undefined desire to make a noise, to give the alarm, seized me.

Half way across the floor she stopped to listen, and looked around, startled herself, I think, by the silence. She could not see her sister, whose figure was blurred by the outlines of the curtain; and no doubt she was puzzled to think what had become of her. The suspense which I felt, but did not understand, was so great that at last I moved, and the bed creaked.

In a moment her face was turned our way, and she glided forwards, her features still hidden by the hood of her cloak. She was close to us now, bending over us. She raised her hand to her head—to shade her eyes, as she looked more closely, I supposed, and I was wondering whether she saw us—whether she took the shapelessness in the shadow of the curtain for her sister, or could not make it out—I was thinking how we could best apprise her of our presence without alarming her — when Croisette dashed my thoughts to the winds! Croisette, with a tremendous whoop and a crash, bounded over me on to the floor!

She uttered a gasping cry—a cry of intense, awful fear. I have the sound in my ears even now. With that she staggered back, clutching the air. I heard the metallic clang and ring of something falling on the floor. I heard an answering cry of alarm from the window; and then Mme. de Pavannes ran forward and caught her in her arms.

It was strange to find the room lately so silent become at once alive with whispering forms, as we came hastily to light. I cursed Croisette for his folly, and was immeasurably angry with him, but I had no time to waste words on him then. I hurried to the door to guard it. I opened it a hand's breath and listened. All was quiet below; the house still. I took the key out of the lock and put it in my pocket and went back. Marie and Croisette were standing a little apart from Mme. de Pavannes, who, hanging over her sister, was by turns bathing her face and explaining our presence.

In a very few minutes Mme. d'O seemed to recover, and sat up. The first shock of deadly terror had passed, but she was still pale. She still trembled and shrank from meeting our eyes, though I saw her, when our attention was apparently directed elsewhere, glance at one and another of us with a strange intentness, a shuddering curiosity. No wonder, I thought. She must have had a terrible fright—one that might have killed a more timid woman!

"What on earth did you do that for?" I asked Croisette, presently, my anger certainly not decreasing the more I looked at her beautiful face. "You might have killed her!"

In charity I supposed his nerves had failed him, for he could not even now give me a straightforward answer. His only reply was: "Let us get away from this horrible house!" and this he kept repeating, with a shudder, as he moved restlessly to and fro.

"With all my heart!" I answered, looking at him with some contempt. "That is exactly what we are going to do!"

But all the same his words reminded me of something which in the excitement of the scene I had momentarily forgotten, and that was our duty. Pavannes must be saved, though not for Kit; rather to answer to us for his sins. But he must be saved! And now that the road was open, every minute lost was reproach to us. "Yes," I added, roughly, my thoughts turned into a more rugged channel, "you are right. This is no time for nursing. We must be going. Mme. de Pavannes," I went on, addressing myself to her, "you know the way home from here—to your house?"

"Oh, yes!" she cried.

"That is well," I answered. "Then we will start. Your sister is sufficiently recovered now, I think. And we will not risk any further delay."

I did not tell her of her husband's danger, or that we suspected him of wronging her, and being, in fact, the cause of her detention. I wanted her services as a guide. That was the main point, though I was glad to be able to put her in a place of safety at the same time that we fulfilled our own mission.

She rose eagerly. "You are sure that we can get out?" she said.

"Sure," I replied, with a brevity worthy of Bezers himself.

And I was right. We trooped downstairs, making as little noise as possible; with the result that Mirepoix only took the alarm, and came upon us when we were at the outer door, bungling with the lock. Then I made short work of him, checking his scared words of remonstrance by flashing my dagger before his eyes. I induced him in the same fashion—he was fairly taken by surprise— to undo the fastenings himself; and so, bidding him follow us at his peril, we slipped out one by one. We softly closed the door behind us. And lo! we were at last free—free and in the streets of Paris, with the cool night air fanning our brows. A church hard by tolled the hour of two; and the strokes were echoed, before we had gone many steps along the ill-paved way, by the solemn tones of the bell of Notre Dame.

We were free and in the streets, with a guide who knew the way. If Bezers had not gone straight from us to his vengeance, we might thwart him yet. I strode along quickly, Mme. d'O by my side, the others a little way in front. Here and there an oil lamp, swinging from a pulley in the middle of the road, enabled us to avoid some obstacles more foul than usual, or to leap over a pool which had formed in the kennel. Even in my excitement, my country-bred senses rebelled against the sights, and smells, the noisome air and oppressive closeness of the streets.

The town was quiet, and very dark where the smoky lamps were not hanging. Yet I wondered if it ever slept, for more than once we had to stand aside to give passage to a party of men, hurrying along with links and arms. Several times, too, especially towards the end of our walk, I was surprised by the flashing of bright lights in a courtyard, the door of which stood half open to right or left. Once I saw the glow of torches reflected ruddily in the windows of a tall and splendid mansion, a little withdrawn from the street. The source of the light was in the forecourt, hidden from us by a low wall, but I caught the murmur of voices and stir of many feet. Once a gate was stealthily opened and two armed men looked out, the act and their manner of doing it, reminded me on the instant of those who had peeped out to inspect us some hours before in Bezers' house. And once, nay twice, in the mouth of a narrow alley I discerned a knot of men standing motionless in the gloom. There was an air of mystery abroad, a feeling as of solemn stir and preparation going on under cover of the darkness, which awed and unnerved me.

But I said nothing of this, and Mme. d'O was equally silent. Like most countrymen I was ready to believe in any exaggeration of the city's late hours, the more as she made no remark.

Flashing my dagger before his eyes.

I supposed—shaking off the momentary impression—that what I saw was innocent and normal. Besides, I was thinking what I should say to Pavannes when I saw him—in what terms I should warn him of his peril, and cast his perfidy in his teeth.

We had hurried along in this way—and in absolute silence, save when some obstacle or pitfall drew from us an exclamation—for about a quarter of a mile, when my companion, turning into a slightly wider street, slackened her speed, and indicated by a gesture that we had arrived. A lamp hung over the porch, to which she pointed, and showed the small side gate half opened. We were close behind the other three now. I saw Croisette stoop to enter, and as quickly fall back a pace. Why?

In a moment it flashed across my mind that we were too late—that the vidame had been before us.

And yet how quiet it all was.

Then I breathed freely again. I saw that Croisette had only stepped back to avoid some one who was coming out—the coadjutor, in fact. The moment the entrance was clear, the lad shot in, and the others after him, the priest taking no notice of them, nor they of him.

I was for going in, too, when I felt Mme. d'O's hand tighten suddenly on my arm, and then fall from it. Apprised of something by this, I glanced at the priest's face, catching sight of it by chance just as his eyes met hers. His face was white—nay, it was ugly with disappointment and rage, bitter, snarling rage, that was hardly human. He grasped her by the arm roughly and twisted her round without ceremony, so as to draw her a few paces aside; yet not so far that I could not hear what they said.

"He is not here!" he hissed. "Do you understand? He crossed the river to the Faubourg St. Germain at nightfall—searching for her. And he has not come back! He is on the other side of the water, and midnight has struck this hour past!"

She stood silent for a moment, as if she had received a blow—silent and dismayed. Something serious had happened. I could see that.

"He cannot recross the river now?" she said, after a time. "The gates—"

"Shut!" he replied, briefly. "The keys are at the Louvre."

"And the boats are on this side?"

"Every boat!" he answered, striking his one hand on the other with violence. "Every boat! No one may cross until it is over."

"And the Faubourg St. Germain?" she said, in a lower voice.

"There will be nothing done there. Nothing!"

CHAPTER VII.

A YOUNG KNIGHT-ERRANT.

I would gladly have left the two together, and gone straight into the house. I was eager now to discharge the errand on which I had come so far; and apart from this I had no liking for the priest or wish to overhear his talk. His anger, however, was so patent, and the rudeness with which he treated Mme. d'O so pronounced that I felt I could not leave her with him unless she should dismiss me. So I stood patiently enough — and, awkwardly enough, too, I daresay—by the door, while they talked on in subdued tones. Nevertheless, I felt heartily glad when at length, the discussion ending, madame came back to me. I offered her my arm to help her over the wooden foot of the side gate. She laid her hand on it, but she stood still.

"M. de Caylus," she said; and at that stopped. Naturally I looked at her, and our eyes met. Hers brown and beautiful, shining in the light of the lamp overhead, looked into mine. Her lips were half parted, and one fair tress of hair had escaped from her hood. "M. de Caylus, will you do me a favor?" she resumed, softly, "a favor for which I shall always be grateful?"

I sighed. "Madame," I said, earnestly, for I felt the solemnity of the occasion, "I swear that in ten minutes, if the task I now have in hand be finished, I will devote my life to your service. For the present—"

"Well, for the present? But it is the present I want, Master Discretion."

SPORTS

CYCLING COMMENT.

Miss Annie Slevin, of Franklin place, has received a new Erie wheel.

Two Dayton wheels were received by the F. L. C. Martin Cycle Company yesterday.

The Plainfield wheel can now be seen at the H. J. Martin agency on Park avenue. It is finished in two colors.

The new road books of the New York State Division of the L. A. W., will not be ready for distribution before the middle of May.

It is probable that the bicycle carnival to be held at Madison Square Garden early in June will be under the auspices of the Metropolitan Association of Cycling Clubs.

Among the members of the team which will represent the Bushwick Wheelmen in the Irvington-Millburn road race on May 30th will be the Berger brothers and Gurnett.

That well-known organization, the Kings County Wheelmen, has adopted crimson as the club color. The new uniform of the club will consist of maroon trousers, sweater and cap.

"The people are aiding the bicyclists in a way," says Chief Consul Gentle, "that will make New Jersey a wheelman's paradise within a few years, if, indeed, it does not come pretty near owning that title today.

Carl Von Lengerke, of the Atalanta Wheelmen, and Frederick Keer, of the Hudson County Wheelmen, will be among the pace-makers on the century run of the Associated Cycling Clubs of New Jersey on June 20th.

The new racing rules, which reduce the prize limit in amateur races to $35, will be a big aid to race promoters this year. The first club to make up its list of prizes is the Crescent Wheelmen, of Plainfield, who will hold a tournament on May 30th.—Morning Advertiser.

A "cyclers' rest," modeled after European temperance saloons, will be opened in the near future near Seventieth street and Riverside Drive, New York. It will be conducted under the auspices of the Church Temperance Society. If the venture proves a success others like it will be established in different parts of that city.

The Racing Board of the League of American Wheelmen has decided not to interfere with the road races, which the League discountenances, until after an understanding can be had with the Century Road Club of America, which controls such competitions; therefore the Irvington-Millburn road race, May 30th, will be run as announced.

This week's bulletin of the Racing Board of the L. A. W. transfers a number of well known riders to the professional class. Among them are Otto Ziegler, Jr., E. C. Bald and P. J. Bliss. A number were suspended for riding in unsanctioned races. Several sanctions were granted among which was one for the Hammonton A. C., of Hammonton, N. J.

It seems probable that race-promoting clubs will be compelled to purchase prizes this season, as the bicycle trade seems determined to stop the practice of distributing prizes for race meets. The Cycle Board of Trade of Chicago at a recent meeting adopted a resolution agreeing not to give money or merchandise to a club to be used as prizes unless the organization shall have received a sanction from the Board of Directors.

Single pacemakers, says the New Sun, will be used to a considerable extent on the bicycle racing circuit this year. Many race meet promoters believe that by offering substantial prizes for pacemakers they can secure speedy riders who will set the racers a pace fast enough to suit the demand of the public for fast riding and no loafing. It is said that several well-known professionals will follow the circuit for the sake of acting as pacemakers.

A press committee has been appointed for the New Jersey Division of the L. A. W. by Chief Consul Robert Gentle. It comprises Richard R. Chiswell, Press, Paterson; Dr. Albert J. Wright, Herald, Montclair; and Peter Wurfflein, True American, Trenton. The representatives and Local Consuls particularly are requested to do all in their power to aid this committee, and, if called upon, either to furnish local news or secure some good man that will do it.

In discussing the proper weight of bicycles for road riding the Belfast Cycling Journal says: "The lightest machine is not necessarily the fastest, and is particularly noticeable in the case of path racing mounts. We have tried racing machines scaling 20 pounds and less which were not nearly so fast as others weighing 22 pounds and over, owing to their lack of life and rigidity. It is only firms who employ the highest class workmen, and who have had long experience, who can turn out really serviceable light weight machines. Avoid cheap, light-weight jiggers."

A total absence of signboards on the Hudson County Boulevard makes that sandpapered rideway a puzzle to wheelmen desiring to reach the ferries. The deficiency was noted some time ago by the officials of the New Jersey Division and they set to work to supply the signs needed. These will soon be ready to be placed. The unruly crowd of boys which have made the Boulevard dangerous to cyclists with their special efforts to annoy the riders, will be less in evidence in the future. Michael Coyle, the Superintendent of the Boulevard, having requested the police to exercise more vigilance in keeping the drive clear of obstructions.

The New York Evening Post suggests the following novel remedy to bicyclists: "Should the front wheel of a bicycle become disabled and a rider be accompanied by a good-natured friend, one remedy is to remove the front wheel from the forks, unscrew the burrs which clamp the back forks of the wheel to the rear axle, spring the front forks over the back forks of the other bicycle, the ends of the axle entering the holes in bottom part of front fork where the axle of the broken down bicycle rested, replace the burrs, and the result is a three-wheel tandem, which, unless both riders are very heavy men, will carry both safely and rapidly. It may be necessary to bend the front forks of the disabled wheel a little, but this is easily corrected by a repairer and is considerably better than a long walk home."

Here are a couple of tables, condensed within a small space, which tell more about bike gears at a glance than a long string of explanation. The gearing of the bike is an operation of extreme importance. One of these tables tells about the gear and the other tells how far a particular gear will carry you, and how many revolutions are necessary to carry you over a mile of road. As almost every bicycle is fitted with 28-inch wheels, the following table is based on that size of wheel:

TO COMPUTE THE GEAR.

Teeth in sprocket.	Gear.
16x6	74
16x7	64
16x8	56

22x8	77

Another table which is quite interesting is the following, which shows the distance covered at each turn of the pedals and the number of revolutions made in a mile:

LAWN TENNIS.

The Loizeaux tennis courts on Westervelt avenue are being put into condition for play.

A special meeting of the Board of Governors of the Hillside Tennis and Golf Club will be held at the clubhouse of the Union County Country Club tomorrow evening.

The Hobokus Valley Lawn Tennis Club will hold the New Jersey State championship tournament at Ridgewood on June 3d. The present champion, Fredrick N. Jessup, of South Orange, will defend his title and the challenge cup against all comers, among whom will be Albert P. Simmonds, Thomas U. Smith and probably Carl Walz, of this city. The club has also decided to establish a State championship for women, and the first tournament for the title will be held during the week of June 3d. A new challenge cup to be won three years, not necessarily in succession, and two other prizes will be offered.

The prospects for a lively tennis season at Dunellen this year are very rosy as the Dunellen Tennis Club has taken an energetic start. A meeting was held last Monday night at which the outlines for the summer's work were planned. The increasing membership made all in favor of increasing the number of courts to three. They will all be dirt courts and will be put in excellent condition at once. A series of teas will be held during the summer and the friends of the players invited to come and see the courts. The first of these will be held on Decoration Day when the courts will be formally opened. Another meeting of the club will be held Monday evening at the residence of J. Hazelwood Craig, of Dunellen avenue, to complete the arrangements and initiate several new members.

GOLF.

The New Jersey Athletic Club has excellent nine-hole links at the club's grounds at Bergen Point.

The Essex County Country Club is laying out an eighteen-hole golf course on its grounds. Alexander Finlay, the expert of the Meadowbrook, has the matter in charge and is also coaching the players.

The informal opening of the Morris County Golf Club links at Morristown will take place tomorrow. Their old course will be used, as they have decided not to play upon the new course until the new addition to the club house has been built. This will not be completed until the latter part of May or the first of June.

The following are the essential points of the rules which will govern the playing on the golf course of the Hillside Tennis and Golf Club:

First—No player shall play from the tee until the party in front has played their fourth stroke, nor play to the putting green until the party in front have holed out and moved away.

Second—No player shall pass another, except when the party in front is looking for a lost ball, or a two match may pass, or three or more playing together.

Third—Turf cut or displaced by a stroke, must be at once replaced.

Fourth—All caddies must be engaged from the green keeper, or in his absence the caddie must have a numbered badge for the day. A violation of this rule will debar the caddie from the course.

Fifth—United States Golf Association rules shall govern the play on this course when not conflicting with the above rules.

VARIOUS SPORTS.

The annual election of officers of the Elizabeth Athletic Club will be held on Saturday evening. There is but one ticket in the field this year. The annual meeting will take place on Monday evening.

President James E. Sullivan, of the Metropolitan Association of the Amateur Athletic Union, has issued a mail vote to the board of governors in relation to the coming championship meeting of the Metropolitan Association. It is now the intention to hold the championship meeting on the grounds of the New Jersey Athletic Club, Saturday, Aug. 1st.

The interest in athletics at the High School this year is unusually great and a number of those who never took part in the field games before are steadily training for the athletic meet of the Plainfield High School Athletic Association which will be held at the Crescent Oval on Saturday, May 9th. The list of events is as follows: One hundred yard dash, putting the shot, two hundred and twenty yard dash, pole vault, four hundred and forty yard run, running high jump, one-quarter mile bicycle race, throwing the hammer, one mile bicycle race, and two mile bicycle race. All the events, except the last, are open only to members of schools in the New Jerey Interscholastic Association. The two mile bicycle race will be open to all school boys in the United States. Among the entries for the latter is that of W. M. McCutchen, the speedy rider from Leal's school. Secretary Smith has already received a large number of entries for the different events and is very confident as regards the success of meet. The High School boys have always been great favorites with the Plainfield public and deserve their heartiest support. The admission, including grand stand, has been placed at twenty-five cents so as to allow all to attend. Stages will run to the Oval before the games and convey all who wish to the grounds in ample time.

The Farmer Orator Limps.

James E. Martine has been unfortunate enough to run a nail in his foot, and as a result he suffers considerable pain. He is able to be about, however.

—While cleaning up a vacant lot adjoining his home in Westfield Wednesday, Charles F. Courtney uncovered two big puffing adders and, procuring an axe, killed them. The adders were of the common hognose variety, but were nearly four feet long, and are said to be among the largest ever seen in New Jersey.

UNIFORMS FOR THE COPS

AFTER DISCUSSION BOROUGH SOLONS DECIDE TO BUY THEM.

Much Talk About Street Improvement—Petition That a Street Be Vacated—Reports of the Clerk and Collector.

The only member absent from the May meeting of the Borough Council last night was Mr. Peck. After the minutes were read and approved Clerk Arnold presented the following report:

	Balance.	Deficit.
Borough	$1,145.03
Fire department	249.93
Light	775.49
Roads	510.99
	$2,681.44
Poor	92.58	92.58
	$2,598.86 total balance.
Collected from fines and licenses		$155.00

Tax Collector H. N. Spencer presented his monthly report, which was as follows:

Board of Health	$ 2.31
Special school tax	38.50
	$ 40.81
County, State, etc	169.91
Total tax	$ 210.72
Previously reported	37,954.99
Total for 1895	$38,165.91
County tax	$32.34
State School	20.79
Borough	15.40
Light	17.71
Road	15.40
Fire Department	10.78
Poor	5.39
Poll	4.00
Dog	2.00
Sidewalks	46.10
	$169.91

Both reports were received and filed.

Two petitions were received from D. A. Mills and others asking that Summit avenue be macadamized; also that water mains be laid through the avenue. They were referred to the proper committees. The resignation of Patrick Kellegher as engineer of Warren Engine Company, No. 1, was received and accepted. A. E. Faber, Jr., and others, asked that an electric light be placed at the corner of Howard and Grove streets, also that Howard street be repaired. The matter was referred to the proper committees.

Mr. Riker, of the Street Railway Company, communicated with the Council regarding the narrowing of the gauge of the tracks in the borough and asked that permission be granted as early as possible. In regard to the complaints made about the poor condition of Somerset street, Mr. Riker stated that it would be more satisfactory if the borough would do the entire work and let the company pay their proportionate share for the work which they were willing to do. The communication was referred to the street committee.

Mrs W. J. Roome petitioned the Council to vacate Sycamore avenue from Myrtle avenue to the brook. The map shows a street on the above property and as Mrs. Roome owns one half and the White estate the other half. The petition is made for the reason that a street is not wanted and it is the desire to secure the property in such a state that it can be used for building lots. The petition was received and filed. Later in the evening Mr. McLaughlin offered a resolution that May 15th be set as the time to hear any objections to the vacation of the property. The resolution prevailed. After the presentation of the usual batch of claims, they were audited and ordered paid. Clerk Arnold started to read the report of the Watchung avenue commissioners, but on motion of Mr. MacLughlin the reading was suspended. This was the last heard of the report.

Mr. Loundsbury stated that a year ago it was ordered that summer uniforms for the marshals be purchased. This was not done, but it was now his intention of renewing the resolution, also that a wardrobe be placed in the lockup, which can be used by the marshals to keep their clothing, etc., in.

Mr. McLoughlin raised the objection that the marshals should purchase their own uniforms. Dr. Cooley, who was in the lobby, also protested against it. He said that when the borough first began paying for the uniforms the marshals received $37 a month, now they were getting $60. Mr. Lounsbury stated that during William N. Pangborn's first term as marshal he collected a sufficient amount to secure the clothes and then the borough re-imbursed him. This he thought was not proper. Mr. Valiant said their salaries were not lucrative and the borough ought to purchase the uniforms. Continuing Mr. Lounsbury said that the borough should be ashamed to think that they ever paid their marshals $37 a month. He thought it was beneath the dignity of the borough to only pay enough to keep body and soul together. It is not easy work that the marshals perform. Mr. McLoughlin stated further that many men were working harder and getting less money, and yet purchased their own clothes. On a vote the resolutions prevailed, Mr. McLoughlin voting no. The cost of uniforms is not to exceed $60.

Mr. Valiant offered an ordinance repealing the ordinance regulating the use of bicycles in the borough, and offered another ordinance in its place to conform to the State law. The ordinance was repealed and the other one adopted on its second reading and laid over the required length of time for its third reading.

Mr. Valiant called up the ordinance which provides for the re-numbering of Westervelt avenue. It was passed on its third reading, and will go into effect May 18th.

Mr. Schutt offered a resolution that the clerk be instructed to draw a warrant for $25, the amount appropriated for the Memorial Day observance, the same to be payable to W. W. Coriell, of the G. A. R. committee. It was so ordered. Mr. Lounsbury offered a resolution that as the Watchung avenue commsssioners had made assessments for damages and duly filed their report, that Friday evening, May 15th be set as the time to hear any objection to their report. The resolution prevailed. Mayor Hegeman appointed W. T. Newman as engineer in the place of Peter Kellogher, resigned. The appointed was confirmed. At this time Mr. Woolston called for the bids for furnishing crushed stone, flagging and crosswalks. J. Y. Wilson presented the only bid for crushed stone. He offered slab No. 2, at 95 cents per ton No. 1 dust at $1 per ton. John T. Thickstun offered five, four, and three feet flagging at 90, 66 and 50 cents per lineal foot. Mr. Lazzie's bid was flagging two feet and five inches at 85 cents and two feet and four inches at 45 cents per lineal foot. H. C. Johnson bid 48 cents for flagging and 49 cents for crosswalks. The bids were all referred to the committee with power. Mr. Lounsbury offered a resolution that Geo. Kirch be given permission to erect a shed in front of his building on Somerset street, providing that he will take it down if requested to by the Council. Mr. Schutt offered a resolution that Mercer avenue, between Duer and Grove streets, be macadamized under the direction of the Street Committee. The resolution was adopted. Following in the same line Mr. Woolston offered a resolution that the petition of T. R. Silvers and other residents of Westervelt avenue, asking that the street be macadamized, be granted.

He stated that the residents had contributed $60 and the cost would be $480.

Mr. McLaughlin objected and thought that it would be establishing a bad precedent to grant such a request when so small amount had been raised toward the work.

Mr. Valiant thought the taxpayers should not be called upon to pay for macadamizing, as it was a public and general improvement.

Mr. Lounsbury said he thought they should pay for the benefits, and he ventured the assertion that where the property was not improved the owners wanted such enormous prices for their property that it would be impossible to improve it.

Mr. Valiant said that if the assessment on property was not sufficient the fact reflected on the assessor and something should be done.

Mr. Cooley stated that he had paid for macadamizing streets when it had been injurious to his business, owing to the increase in travel. He did not care whether Westervelt avenue was macadamized or not so long as the street was made passable.

Mr. McLaughlin's motion that the resolution lay on the table was lost and by vote the resolution was adopted, Mr. McLaughlin alone voting no.

On motion of Mr. Valiant, Council then went into executive session.

Mr. McLaughlin moved that the Council meet Friday evening, May 8th, when the petition from the street railway will be considered.

A New Baptist Church.

The Westfield Baptists have decided to build a new church. Some of the members advocate selling the property on Elm street, either to the Episcopalians or Lutherans, and building on the south side. A few years ago the late Chauncey B. Ripley offered the society the gift of a lot, and they still incline to build in that section. Other members think best either to enlarge the present edifice or to remove it to the rear of the lot and build on the old site. A church meeting is to decide as to what action will be the best.

Operation on the Eye.

The many friends of Mrs. Cornelius Schenck, who has been suffering for a week with terribly inflamed eyes, will be glad to learn that she obtained relief this morning through the skill of Dr. F. C. Ard, who discovered a small particle of foreign substance in one of her eyes.

MUCH IN PERRY'S FAVOR

SAM'L JOHNSON WAS THE AGGRESSOR IN A SCRAP WITH THE BARBER.

Evidence Showed That the Man of Razors and Shears Restrained Himself and Only Fought After Aggravation—Discharged.

It took the city court over an hour to hear the testimony and the arguments of the lawyers in the case of Lemuel Perry, the proprietor of the Hotel Grenada barber shop, and Samuel Johnson, who runs the little restaurant on Madison avenue, near West Front street. They were both accused of quarrelling and fighting in Perry's barber shop on April 7th. The story told by the different witnesses was substantially the same as that told by Perry. Johnson's version differed considerably. The circumstances were mentioned in The Press at the time. Johnson went into Perry's shop and tried to collect a bill. Perry stated that he did not have the money then, but agreed to pay in a week. This did not just suit Johnson and he began to get abusive and indecent in his language. Perry requested him to leave the place but Johnson refused and continued his abuse. At last Perry started to lead the excited restaurant keeper to the door. Johnson tried to punch Perry but the latter ducked and countered heavily upon Johnson's eye. Johnson's glasses were broken in the scrap and the glass is supposed to account for the cut below his eye. Johnson next made a dive for Perry's pedal extremities and succeeded in upsetting him. Perry had just risen and the fight grown exciting when Roundsman Mattox appeared and arrested both of the colored men.

The testimony in the city court this morning was very much in favor of Perry and showed that he had restrained himself remarkably well. Ex-Judge W. A. Coddington and Lawyer Charles J. McNabb represented Perry and made a very strong plea in his behalf. Sentence was suspended on him.

Johnson testified that Perry struck the first blow and then tried to brain him with a chair, which accounted for Johnson's jumping at Perry's legs. Assemblyman W. R. Codington was counsel for Johnson and, admitting that the men did quarrel, asked for mercy on the ground that the circumstances were extenuating. After censuring Johnson severely, Judge DeMeza suspended sentence.

Epworth League at Work.

The Westfield Epworth League reformers have undertaken to extend their Sunday-closing crusade to the suburban speak-easies. Complaint is made of two unlicensed places on the county road, near Garwood, one near the Fanwood line, and one in the borough. Evidence has been collected against them all, and the League has requested them to observe the law. The offenders have followed the example of the candy shop and fruit stand keepers, and promised to cease their operations. Like them, they will doubtless continue to keep open, and the young people of the League will carry out their threats of prosecution.

A Tramp Highwayman.

A gang of tramps has been infesting Mountainside woods for several days. While on her way home from Westfield, the little daughter of Mr. Meyer was stopped by one of the tramps, and asked to give up all the money she had. When the child replied by denying that she had money, the fellow made her turn out her pocket. Satisfied that she told the truth he contented himself with swearing to emphasize his disappointment.

—Mrs. Winters will lead the morning meeting in the W. C. T. U. rooms tomorrow.

EXONERATES MR. DEMEZA

LAWYER HANCE DECLARES THE JUDGE DID NOTHING IMPROPER.

He Says That Mr. DeMeza's Actions are Entirely Free From Moral Culpability—The $700 Mortgage is Due to the Judge.

The charges brought against City Judge DeMeza by Irenaus P. Allen in reference to a mortgage were of a very serious nature. Last night Hiram O. Hance, attorney for Mr. Allen, signed the following statement which is a complete exoneration of Jude DeMeza from any implication of wrong doing:

In Chancery of New Jersey.

Between

Irenaus P. Allen, Comp't vs. G. W. DeMeza, Defend't | On Bill

The defendant in this cause having submitted to the inspection of counsel for complainant, the original chattel mortgage duly cancelled; and all the original cancelled checks of said defendant given by him and used by the complainant or his wife in other transactions and also a detailed statement of all transactions and accounts between the parties to this suit; and said counsel for complainant from such examination of the original documents being fully satisfied and convinced that said chattel mortgage was in fact cancelled by defendant prior to November 28, 1895, and endorsed with a complete authorization to the County Clerk to cancel the same of record; and said counsel for complainant from such examination of original documents and accounts being further satisfied and convinced that the whole amount of the $750 real estate mortgage made by the complainant's wife and complainant to said George W. DeMeza, March 1st, 1895, is justly due and owing to said DeMeza, and that the whole conduct of said George W. DeMeza has been entirely free from moral culpability of any kind, and that the most that can be charged against him in the premises is mere delay in delivering up the mortgage after being in fact cancelled and rendered of no value to him, and without power of doing harm to his client the complainant and said counsel for complainant having delivered to said George W. DeMeza a receipt in full of all demands of complainant upon being convinced as aforesaid and receiving said mortgage, this is to testify that said George W. DeMeza is entitled as a matter of right to be vindicated from all charges of wrong, unjust, illegal, unprofesional or other improper conduct, and the above entitled cause is hereby on motion of complainant ordered dismissed with costs to be paid to said George W. DeMeza by the complainant.

DISTRICT MEETING OF PYTHIANS.

A Large Number of Lodgemen are the Guests of Perseverance.

The district meeting of the Knights of Pythias held in the rooms of Perseverance Lodge, No. 74, K. of P., last evening was one of the most enjoyable and successful ever held. Grand Chancellor Hithcock, of Jersey City, called the meeting for the purpose of talking over the district work and laying plans for the coming year. In addition to the Grand Chancellor the following grand lodge officers were present: Grand Vice-Chancellor Rockafellow, of Somerville; Grand Master of Finance J. H. Conger, of New Brunswic; Past Grand Chancellor Walter F. Hayhurst, of Lambertville; Deputy Grand Chancellor Sloan, of Newark.

It was reported that during the past three months the net increase in membership had been 700. After a general discussion of topics of interest to the order and the reports from the various lodges had been received, those present were invited into another room where the Rathbone Sisters had provided an excellent repast. The committee on refreshments and entertainment included Morgan Turton, C. W. Lines and Charles Foster.

Excise Violator's Case Postponed.

The case of John Scott, who was arrested on the charge of selling liquor without a license, which was to appear in the city court today, has been adjourned until two weeks from today. Ex-Judge W. A. Coddington represented him in court.

Volunteers to Visit.

The Bound Brook Post of Volunteers will visit the Plainfield Post in Reform Hall this evening. Captain Mimms, who has been resting during the week, will be present. An old-fashioned hallelujah time is anticipated.

—At the regular meeting of Perseverance Lodge, No. 74, K. of P., held last evening, one application was received and one suspended member was reinstated.

MENTAL TRIP THROUGH ITALY.

Rev. T. Logan Murphy Gave an Interesting Lecture Last Night.

A very interesting and instructive lecture on Italy was given last evening in the Holy Cross parish building by Rev. T. Logan Murphy under the auspices of the Willing Circle King's Daughters. There was a good attendance. The first pictures thrown upon the screen were of the scenery and buildings. Italy is just as noted today for its glorious scenery, sculptures and paintings, as it was ages ago.

Views of all the principal cities were shown, including Naples, Genoa, Milan, Verna, Venice, Florence, Pompeii and Rome. In each of the cities the wonderful architecture of the buildings, all of which were built thousands of years ago, were eulogized by the speaker in an eloquent manner. In each city, the buildings which were the most interesting and wonderful in regard to architecture and history, were picked out. Venice and its streets of water, the buried city of Pompeii and the wonders of ancient and modern Rome were talked of. The speaker said a great many people have an idea that the latter place is not up to the other cities in Europe in regard to modern improvements, but he wished to say that he saw more electric light to the square inch in Rome than in any city in this country. Several fine views of the wonderful statuary of ancient Italy which have been discovered, were also given. The lecture closed with a picture of the altar and choir boys of Holy Cross church. The lantern which was used belonged to the Camera Club and was operated by members of the club. Refreshments were served after the lecture.

A COW WITH A REPUTATION.

It Has Been Arrested a Number of Times—In Court This Morning.

There is no animal in town better known in the annals of the city court than Mrs. Mary Burke's cow. It has cost the police no end of worry and kept the City Judge busy settling the cases that it has caused. This poor cow has the very bad habit of straying away and wandering about the streets which is in direct violation of the city ordinance. The creature has been arrested several times and severely reprimanded by the Judge, but the cow continues to placidly chew its cud and follow on in its evil ways. Mrs. Burke, the owner of the cow, was arrested some time ago for allowing her cow to stray about the streets and the case was set down for this morning.

Mrs. Burke and her counsel, ex-Judge W. A. Coddington, were present and tried to prove it was another cow that was committing the misdeeds this time. It was shown, however, that the hero of the previous trials had been out after all, although another cow had really been on the scene. The Judge suspended sentence and sent a warning to the cow to never do so any more.

ENTERTAINED THE EUCHRE CLUB.

The Misses Barrett Afford a Pleasant Time for Their Young Friends.

The Young People's Progressive Euchre Club, of Dunellen and North Plainfield was delightfully entertained by the Misses Barrett, of North Plainfield, last evening. As usual, an exciting game of euchre occupied the first part of the evening. The first prizes were won by Miss Carlottta Williams and Fred Haynes. Miss Edith McArthur and Miss Sadie Barrett tied for the second ladies' prize, while Robert Giddis and Charles Coriell were tie for the second gentlemen's prize.

A donkey party followed and kept the guests in a continual roar with its amusing incidents. Miss Blanche Marlow was the most successful one in locating the correct position for the tail. Dancing and refreshments followed, and every one declared that the evening had been a very pleasant one.

Epworth League Election.

The annual business meeting of the Epworth League of the First M. E. church was held last evening in Vincent chapel. The annual election of officers was held. Robert Davis was re-elected president for the coming year; Thomas McDonald, first vice-president and chairman of the devotion committee; Miss Emma Smalley, second vice-president and chairman of the mercy and help committee; Miss Ida Angleman, third vice-president and chairman of the literary committee; Miss Elsie Horne, fourth vice-president and chairman of social committee; James A. Stafford, secretary; D. S. Dunavan, treasurer. It was decided by the society to have dues of 5 cents a month beginning the first of May. A committee will be appointed sometime in the near future to furnish an entertainment, the proceeds to be given to the Ladies' Aid Society for the carpet fund.

LIBERAL WOMEN ELECT.

FEMININE MEMBERS OF THE UNITARIAN CHURCH IN SESSION HERE.

Papers Read on the Service Which Rational Religion Demands—Most of the Delegates From New York and Brooklyn.

Mrs. F. W. Hooper, of Brooklyn, President of the New York League of Unitarian Women, presided at the annual meeting held in All Souls church yesterday. Mrs. Florence Howe Hall made a most excellent address of welcome to the visiting women. Mrs. W. I. Nichols, who delivered one of the papers at the morning session, is the wife of General Secretary W. I. Nichols of the Brooklyn Bureau of Charities. A talk followed by Mrs. Burden, of Brooklyn. The subject "Service Which Rational Religion Demands" was discussed by Mrs. Chadwick, of Brooklyn, and Mrs. Hall. A short paper prepared by Mrs. B. Ward Dix, president of the National Alliance, was read by the secretary, after which a delightful hour was spent at lunch.

The first buoines of the afternoon session was the election of officers. The result was as follows: President, Mrs. C. E. Lowe, Brooklyn; vice-presidents, Mrs. C. T. Catlin, Brooklyn, and Mrs. R. H. Davis, New York; recording secretary, Mrs. A. Wendell Jackson, New York; corresponding secretary, Mrs. Whiting, Brooklyn; treasurer, Mrs. C. C. Knowlton, Brooklyn. This was followed with excellent reports from the various branches, after which the meeting adjourned.

There were about one hundred women present, mostly from Brooklyn and New York, and they very eagerly sought branches of the apple blossoms and dogwood, which formed the decorations, to take home as souvenirs of their visit to Plainfield.

The following women of this city composed the committees having in charge the reception and entertainment of the visitors, and the decorations of the church: Reception committee, Mrs. Hobart Clark, Mrs. Ruth Leonard and other members of the executive board; refreshment committee. Mrs. S. R. Krom, Mrs. Ruth Leonard, Mrs. F. H. Hebard, Mrs. Arthur Kerr; decoration committee, Miss Caroline Haviland, Miss Anna Haviland, Miss Edith Leonard; waitresses, Mrs. Edgar B. Smith, Mrs. Edgar Munford, Miss Eva Pierce, Miss Curry and Miss Stephanie Krom.

Altogether the meeting was very successful, and this being the first time it has been held in this city the Plainfield women hope it will not be the last.

A WORTHY CASE.

Organized Aid Association Make an Appeal That Should Be Responded To.

The Organized Aid Association appeal to the public in behalf of a woman in the direst need. She was found in a small dark room, helplessly sick, suffering from pain and neglect. She has been moved to more comfortable surroundings and has been attended by the city physician and two nurses. It is necessary now to seek a home for her where she will have constant care and good food. Such a home has been found and part of the money necessary for her support has been assured, but it is impossible to give her the comforts of the new home until money has been raised. We therefore appeal to the charitable of Plainfield for assistance, feeling that it is only necessary to state these facts to secure for a woman deseased in body and feeble in mind, the few comforts which it is possible to give her.

Money may be given to Mrs. Woodruff, at the office of the Association, 544 West Front street, or to either of the undersigned. W. L. Saunders, Chairman Printing Committee.
G. Kennedy Newell,
Chairman District Committee.

Writ of Attachment Issued.

B. R. Cain, owner of the house and property located at 413 East Second street, went before Lawyer Hetfield last evening and secured a writ of attachment on the goods belonging to Wilson F. Fulper, to satisfy a debt amounting to a month's rent. The writ was placed in the hands of Constable J. W. VanHorn. Before he could get around to the house the goods were moved away to New York on Bailey's trucks. It is understood that Mr. Fulper and his family are stopping on Vine street at present. Just what will be done in the matter is not known.

Successful Second Night.

The second night of the Festival of Violets at Trinity Reformed church was attended by a large crowd last night, who admired and patronized the many features of the affair. The Schubert Ladies Orchestra rendered a number of selections in an artistic manner, and pleased the large audience.

DOMESTIC BUSINESS

Its Volume for April Averaged $154,000,000 Daily.

LESS GAIN THAN WAS EXPECTED

Evidence of Inadequate Consumption—General Range of Prices Somewhat Lower—Scarcity of Money Not a Factor—Stocks and Trusts.

New York, May 2.—Dun's weekly review of the state of trade will to-day say: As the season advances there is more business, but advices indicate that on the whole the prevalent feeling is that the gain is less than there was reason to expect. While retail trade has been active enough to materially lessen stocks and obligations, and thus to prevent a great many threatened embarrassments it has not yet brought enough new business to mills or factories to prevent decrease of unfilled orders and closing of some works. Substantially the same state of things exists in all the great industries notwithstanding the strong combinations in some, and evidence of inadequate consumption appears in the fact that the general range of prices for commodities, farm and mine as well as manufactured products, is nearly 1 per cent. lower that it was April 1, and the lowest ever known, the decline since October, 1892, being 16.7 per cent. Nor can this be attributed to scarcity of money, which is easier and more abundant as the liquidation of many dealers lessens outstanding obligations.

Stocks, Railroads and Trusts.

But for net receipts of about $2,500,000 from the interior this week, the withdrawl of foreign lenders, and the advance of sterling exchange to the gold exporting point, with the call on depository banks to pay $3,000,000 more into the treasury, might have prevented weakening of rates on commercial loans. But acceptable paper offered is not equal to the demand for it, though there has been some difficulty in placing some kinds of paper. Foreign operations have been of no influence in American securities, but shipments of silver have again been large. Stocks have remained practically without change; railroads and trusts both average a shade lower than a week ago; and railroad earnings in April have been 3.1 per cent. larger than last year, but 9.6 per cent. smaller than in 1093. The gain over last year is due to an increase of 15.5 per cent. in Granger roads reporting. Eastbound shipments from Chicago are largely by water, but by rail in April were 272,186 tons, against 238,739 last year, and 259,244 in the same week of 1893.

Cotton and Wool.

Speculation has raised the price of cotton an eighth, though receipts and crop prospects still favor lower prices, and accumulated stocks of unsold goods are very large. Wool is weaker, the wool year closing with the greatest quantity of wool on hand ever carried at this season. April sales were smaller than in any month since June, 1894. Exports continue both of domestic and foreign wool, and sales by manufacturers who lack orders to continue production. Woolen goods have not improved in demand, and flannels have opened 5 to 15 per cent. lower than last year, though the material decrease of production has given to other men's goods a rather stronger tone. Dress goods are helped by the restriction of foreign imports, but the association reports that, on the whole, wool machinery is not more than half employed. Some cotton mills have ceased production, including one large printing establishment, and stocks on hand still increase, though for brown goods there has been a better legitimate demand, and great quantities of gingham have been moved by drives at prices low beyond all precedent. The decrease in shipment of woolen goods from Europe has been quite marked, and stocks in warehouses are large and increasing. There is fair demand in boots and shoes, though not enough to prevent gradual exhaustion of orders unfilled, but the only change in prices has been a slight advance in some qualities. Leather is weaker, with very narrow demand, and quotations average a shade lower, as do prices of hides.

Volume of Domestic Business.

The volume of domestic business shown by clearings has been 154 millions daily in April, against 153 last year, 136 in 1894, 181 in 1893 and 188 in 1892. These figures show a greater shrinkage than appeared in recent months, and indicate that improvement is slow. Liabilities in failures for the twenty-three days of April have been $9,218,616, against $9,536,960 in twenty-five days last year, and $8,826,862 in four weeks of 1894. Manufacturing were $4,602,655 against $3,614,736 last year, and $3,687,220 in 1884, while trading were $4,379,330 against $5,705,650 last year, and $4,677,[illegible]99 in 1894. Failures for the week have been 238 in the United States against 231 last year, and 31 in Canada against 34 last year.

Insane Convicts.

Hartford, May 2.—Doctors Edgerton and Calef of Middletown and Hallock of Cromell, the lunacy commission recently appointed by Gov. Coffin, have found three convicts at the state prison insane and one is a United States government prisoner and will be sent to a government insane hospital.

Death Due To Natural Causes.

New Haven, Conn., May 2.—Coroner Mix has decided to abandon his investigation into the cause of the death of John Rogers. Medical Examiner White said that the autopsy disclosed that Rogers' death was caused by pneumonia and heart disease.

THOMPSON LIBEL SUIT.

Senator Rogers Testifies That He Was Offered a $75,000 Bribe.

Camden, N. J., May 2.—There was a flutter of sensation in the vice-chancellor's chamber yesterday afternoon during the testimony in the libel suit of William J. Thompson against the Philadelphia Press Publishing company. Senator Maurice A. Rogers was the first witness called for the defendants. After the senator had testified relative to a race track being conducted at Gloucester, before racing was legalized by the New Jersey legislature, Senator Rogers was asked if he had ever been approached by Thompson and asked to vote for the race track act. Senator Rogers said he was approached only once. "It was in the spring of 1891," he said. "I was at the Windsor at Trenton. One morning in February the hotel clerk told me that Thompson had called to see me at 2.30 in the morning, but he (the clerk) refused to awaken me. I was at the breakfast table when Thompson's card was sent in to me. After breakfast we went to my room, where Thompson said that there was much money invested in race tracks in the state and owners would do anything to have a racing act passed. He said that Gov. Abbett had said he would not sign a race track bill unless three republicans voted for it. Thompson then offered me $75,000 if I would procure those three votes. I told him I would not vote for the bill for the state of New Jersey, nor would I get votes for him. He never spoke to me on the subject again."

VERMONT SOLID FOR M'KINLEY.

Senator Proctor Denies That He Telegraphed Manley to the Contrary.

Rutland, Vt., May 2.—The Herald will print to-day the following communication from Senator Proctor: "It seems needless to deny the report in your paper that I had telegraphed Mr. Manley that the Vermont delegates at St. Louis would vote for Mr. Reed, notwithstanding the action of the convention. I have seen the same report in the Boston Journal, although I wired that paper from Montpelier that Vermont was now united for McKinley. I do not recall ever sending a telegram of any kind to Mr. Manley, certainly I have not for a year past, and every word I have written or spoken or wired since the convention has been to the same effect as my dispatch to the Journal. I shall do my utmost to secure the nomination of Major McKinley at St. Louis. I am happy to say, however that it looks as though not much work would be needed, that his nomination is already secured."

CHINESE EXCLUSION ACT.

Secretary Carlisle Petitions Congress To Amend the Law To Correct an Abuse.

Washington, May 2.—In view of the increase in the number of fraudulent application from Chinese for admission to this country on the ground that having been born here they are American citizens and of the difficulties experienced by officers of the treasury department in verifying or controverting the testimony of Chinese witnesses produced by such applicants to sustain their perjured affidavits, Secretary Carlisle has requested congress to enact such special legislation as will correct a practice which in his opinion nullifies in many particulars the intent of the law relating to the exclusion of Chinese.

Boston, May 2.—Judge Bond in the superior court has sentenced Richway A. Fredericks to the state prison for not less than eighteen and not more than twenty-five years, for felonious abuse of the 10-year-old girl, Matilda Devine. Fredericks is 24 years old.

GRESHAM'S REMAINS

Taken Back to Washington for Final Interment.

TO BE BURIED IN ARLINGTON

Mrs. Gresham and Her Son Accompanying the Body from Chicago.—President Cleveland and Cabinet To Attend the Obsequies.

Washington, May 2.—At the request of Otto Gresham, son of the late secretary of state, acting in behalf of his mother and himself, Secretary Lamont has designated a site in the Arlington National cemetery for the interment of the remains of Secretary Gresham. The site is a prominent one, near the graves of Gen. Sheridan and Admiral Porter and in front of the historic mansion. It overlooks the city of Washington and the Potomac river. The arrangements for the transfer of the body from a vault in Oakwood cemetery near Chicago have not been completed, nor has the date been fixed. Secretary Gresham died on May 28 last and was placed in the Oakwood vault two days later. When Secretary Gresham realized that his death might result from his long illness, he expressed a wish that his remains might be interred at Arlington among the soldiers of the union. The arrangements for the temporary deposit of his body at Oakwood were made hurriedly, but Mrs. Gresham has had the wish of her husband in mind, and recently decided that it should be carried out. The remains of the late secretary of state were removed from the receiving vault of Oakwood cemetery, Chicago, yesterday, and are due in Washington this afternoon, Mrs. Gresham and her son Otto, accompanying them. The final obsequies will be attended, as were the first, by the president and his cabinet.

RAINES LIQUOR LAW.

An Interesting Phase of the New Excise Measure Developed at Dunkirk.

Albany, May 2.—An interesting phase of the liquor tax law has developed in connection with the city of Dunkirk. The parties who made the state enumeration of that city in 1892 returned for it a population of a little over 10,000. Now the state commissioner of excise has been notified that these same parties are ready to swear that the figures included people living in outlying territory. The city authorities naturally desire to have the enumeration corrected in order to gain a lower rate of tax. If it is proven that the city has a population under 10,000 the tax will be $100 for the old style storekepeers license. If the city has a population over 10,000 the tax will be $200. It is not thought likely that the excise department will do anything in the matter.

DERVISHES DEFEATED.

Suffered Much Loss in a Sharp Engagement with Egyptian Troops.

Cairo, May 2.—The Egyptian troops under the command of Col. Murdoch have had a sharp skirmish with a force of 1,200 dervishes near Akasheh. The dervishes were defeated with much loss.

Electric Power from Niagara.

Niagara Falls, N. Y., May 2.—The Western Union Telegraph company has begun putting up the wires to carry the Niagara electric current to the Electrical exhibit in New York next week. The current will go over two copper wires from the power house to the New York Central depot, thence over an iron wire to Buffalo, and then over two copper wires to New York, where models of the Niagara development will be operated by it.

Yale-Harvard Debate.

New Haven, Conn., May 2.—The annual Yale-Harvard debate last night in the College Street hall, at Yale, was won by Yale. The debate was close, the points of Harvard, upon which fell the burden of proof, being sharply combatted by Yale. The subject of the debate was: "Resolved, That a Pernament Court of Arbitration Should Be Established between the United States and Great Britain." Harvard championed the negative.

Receiver for New York Times.

New York, May 2.—Serious differences have arisen among the stockholders regarding the future policy of the New York Times, and certain financial arrangements which have been completed it was found impossible to carry out without legal proceedings. A receiver was therefore asked for by the directors of the company, to preserve the equities of all concerned. Alfred Ely was appointed by Justice Andrews.

In combination, proportion and process Hood's Sarsaparilla is peculiar to itself, and unequalled in true merit.

No other medicine ever possessed so much curative power, or reached such enormous sales, or made such wonderful cures, as Hood's Sarsaparilla.

It is undoubtedly the best medicine ever made to purify, vitalize and enrich the blood.

That is the secret of its success.

Read this statement:

"When my son was 7 years of age, he had rheumatic fever and acute rheumatism, which settled in his left hip. He was so sick that no one thought there was any help for him. Five sores broke out on his thigh, which the doctor said were sores. We had three different doctors. Pieces of bone came out of the sores. The last doctor said the leg would have to be cut open and the bone scraped, before he could get well. Howard became so low that he would eat nothing, and one doctor said there was no chance for him.

"One day, a newspaper recommending Hood's Sarsaparilla was left at our door. We decided to try this medicine. Howard commenced taking it the last of February, after having been sick for a year and a half. He hadn't taken it a week before I saw that his appetite began to improve, and then he gained rapidly. I gave him five bottles, when the sores were all healed and they never broke out again. The crutches he had used for four years were laid aside, as he had no further use for them. I give all the credit to Hood's Sarsaparilla." MRS. ADA L. MOODY, Fay Street, Lynn, Mass.

DEATH OF THE SHAH

Persia Greatly Excited over the Assassination.

QUIET REIGNS; NO TROUBLE FEARED

Sketch of the Late Ruler's Career—Humane and a Great Lover of America—Message of Condolence from President Cleveland.

Teheran, May 2.—The assassination of the shah yesterday afternoon has naturally caused the greatest excitement throughout Persia, but there has been no disorder and no trouble is apprehended. The shrine of Shah Abdulazim, where the ruler was shot down by the religious fanatic, is about six miles from the city of Teheran and is reached by a narrow gauge railway, the only railway in Teheran. On Fridays, the Musselmans' Sabbath, it is visited by tens of thousands of pilgrims. The shrine is on the spot of the old city Rhea, which is mentioned in the Bible.

NASR-ED-DIN.

Career of the Persian Ruler Who Was Assassinated Yesterday.

The shah, whose name is Nasr-ed-Din, was born in 1830, and ascended to the throne in 1848, occupying by a strange train of circumstances a position somewhat similar to that held by James I. in English history—that is, all the old royal lines are supposed to unite in him by descent. But this is not proved, and the recent claim that he is also a desendant of Cyrus and Darius has nothing to support it. He was crowned at Teheran Oct. 25, 1848, and his valiahd, or heir apparent, is his eldest son, Muzaf-er-ed-din who was born March 25, 1853, and who has four sons and fifteen daughters. The general statement about the filthiness of Orientals does not apply, of course, to the various princes and nobles of India, Siam and western Asia generally, who have visited western Europe; they have generally displayed both elegance and refinement, while that branch of the Turanians which overran Persia and Asia Minor appear destitute of both and humanity as well. The late princes of Persia are of the Mongol stock, and the Persian branch of it has shown all the bravery of the race, but few of the redeeming qualities of the Mongols in China and India.

Waged Three Terrible Wars.

Nasr-ed-Din has waged three terrible wars, two with Russia and one with England: in the first two he lost a third of his territory, and the latter ended in 1857 by his granting all that England asked. In 1873 he made a grand tour of Europe, leaving behind him a trail of stench and vermin. It cost $150,000 to do so. The surprising fact to western people about many Orientals is that they do not abhor dirt and deformity. For the latter they actually have a sort of unnatural affection. Those monstrous distortions of humanity which are kept out of sight in Christian countries are made much of in Turkey and Persia. They like to see animals slaughtered and skinned and dressed; the sight and smell of warm, flowing blood and offal is agreeable to them.

The Most Persian of Persians.

Nasr-ed-Din was in all these respects the most Persian of Persians. On his first visit to Europe he had the sheep for his cookery slaughtered in the reception halls of the palaces in which he was lodged. And this was rather the least offensive of his domestic performances. In England some of the clergy and ladies tried to impress on him their ideas of the proper dignity of women; he could not even understand what they were talking about. When the Princess of Wales was present in court dress, he laid his hand on her bare shoulder and said she was fit for her place. At Berlin he asked Emperor William why he did not "cut off that ugly woman's head and get a young princess to be the mistress of the harem."

AS MINISTER FOX KNEW HIM.

A Humane Man with a Peculiar Love for America.

New York, May 2.—William C. Fox, former United States consul at Teheran and who perhaps more that other man in this city is conversant with Persian affairs, expressed deep regret over the news of the assassination of the shah when seen to-day by a correspondent of the United Press: "Nasr-ed-Din, the defender of the religion, is the Arabic title by which the shah of Persia was known. I remember him three years ago when I was in charge of the United States legation at Teheran. The actual age of Musselmans is never known, but I should judge that the ruler of the land of the lion and the sun was at that time 64 years of age. I had the honor to be received by him on several occasions in official audience. He impressed me as being every inch a man and a king. The last occasion upon which I saw him was the time when he sent for me to personally thank me as the United States official representative for the great work which had been done by the American missionaries in relieving the distress and in healing the sick during the terrific cholera epidemic of 1892. The shah was very much moved and great big tears stood in his eyes as he referred to the humane work of the American doctors, as he called the missionaries.

His Life Threatened for Years.

"He always had a peculiar love for America, probably owing a great deal to the fact that it was the land beyond the sea. The Persians called the United States 'Yange Donya,' which means the new world. And it is facetiously said that our own 'Yankee Doodle' is derived therefrom. During the time that I was officially in Persia an incident occurred which shook the very throne of Persia and almost lost the shah his life. While I do not know the details of yesterday's tragedy I am constrained to believe that never since that incident has the life of the shah been safe. I refer to the riots brought about by the English tobacco monopoly. The shah entered into a bargain with certain Englishmen, which was not only unjust to the people, but degrading to them. A number of British capitalists seeing the amount of money to be made by monopolizing the tobacco interests of Persia bribed the shah to give them such a monopoly. All Asia and the Slavonic provinces of Europe and Egypt use the narghille—the water pipe. The very best tobacco—called Tumbacku—for this purpose comes from Ispahan, Persia. The Persian people, as Musselmans, detests the Christians and consider them unclean. They were perfectly exasperated, therefore, that the article tobacco, which enters so closely into their social relations—every man, woman, boy and girl using it from the time they are seven years of age—should be handled by the dogs of Christians. A riot resulted over the tobocca monopoly and an attack was made by a mob who shouted their determination to kill the shah. The palace guards fired on the crowd, killing many and putting the remainder to flight."

LIBERALITY AND JUSTICE.

Two of the Prominent Traits in the Character of the Late Shah.

Washington, May 2.—The records of the state department contain many communications attesting the late shah of Persia's leanings towards liberality and justice. In one particular instance where an Armenia Christian under the protection of American missionaries was shot at Oroomrah, Persia, in 1893, the shah sent his son and heir apparent to investigate the matter, on the complaint of United States Minister McDonald. The Persian prime minister subsequently informed Mr. McDonald that imperative orders had been issued to have exemplary punishment inflicted upon those who had committed the deed and to take every possible measure for the protection of other Christians who might be in danger. Mr. McDonald forwarded the entire correspondence to Secretary Gresham, stating that it was the request of the American missionaries that the shah's assuring letter should be published for the benefit of their friends at home.

Minister to Washington Disappears.

Persia is not represented in the United States in a diplomatic or consular capacity and probably will not be until an incident that caused some embarrassment in the relation of the two countries is forgotten. Eight years ago the shah who was killed yesterday decided to send a diplomatic representative to Washington and the government was notified of the intention. The new minister was Hadji Hassan Ghouli Khan Matamed el Vessare. One day the state department received a number of trunks and other baggage bearing the name of Hassan addressed to its care. Time passed and nothing was heard from the expected diplomat. Finally the department sent a telegraphic inquiry to its minister at Teheran requesting information as to the Persian minister's whereabouts and the surprising answer was returned that Hadji Hassan had left Persia months before and was supposed to be in the United States. It was later discovered that he was in Persia having a good time under an assumed name.

Threw Up His Job.

The newspapers published this story very generally and the paragraphers made humorous comments on Hadji Hassan's long name and his mysterious disappearance from public view. These things offended the minister greatly. He was also chagrined over the attention attracted by his peculiar dress and appearance. He wrote to the secretary of state complaining of these matters and withdrew his suite, returning to Persia.

President Cleveland's Condolence.

Washington, May 2.—Shortly after the receipt of the news of the assassination Secretary Olney sent a cable message to Minister McDonald, saying that the president directed that sincere condolence be tendered and abhorence of the crime expressed to the government of Persia and the family of the shah.

Held for Shooting Her Lover.

Lancaster, Pa., May 1.—Bertha McConnell of Coatesville, who shot her lover, Harry Thompson, and subsequently attempted suicide, was brought here yesterday on the charge of felonious assault and battery. Being unable to secure bail she was sent to a hospital where she will be detained until she fully recovers her health. Thompson is recovering from his injuries. He has a wife and children.

Salvation Army Property.

New York May. 2.—Ballington Booth has formally transferred to the Salvation army all of the property in the United States formerly held by him. There was no unpleasantness in the matter, and the property in question includes the splendid Fourteenth street headquarters and other buildings.

Erie Canal Opening.

Troy, N. Y., May 2.—When the Erie canal opened for the season yesterday there were about 250 boats in the levels between West Troy and Cohoes. Fewer boats will pass up the canal at the opening of this year than in some years before.

Acquitted of Wife Murder.

Greenfield, Mass., May 2.—The jury in the case of Levi M. Fournier, charged with manslaughter in causing the death of his wife by strangulation, reached a verdict of acquittal last night after being out six hours.

DEMOCRACY'S DUTY

Senators Tillman and Hill Disagree in Their Ideas.

FORMER ATTACKS THE PRESIDENT

The New Yorker Defined the Party's Position and Said He Did Not Believe Cleveland Was a Candidate for Renomination.

Washington, May 2.—The senate today, Senator Gorman's proposition to reduce the number of battleships from four to two having been adopted, will vote on another amendment to the naval appropriation bill, offered by Senator Chandler, providing for the construction of twenty torpedo boat destroyers at a cost of $4,000,008. The speeches delivered by Senators Tillman and Hill yesterday aroused a great deal of interest among the members and visitors in the galleries. Senator Tillman—wearing in his necktie an emblem of his last speech in the senate, a miniature gold pitchfork—strode up and down in the rear of the back seats on the democratic side of the chamber gesticulating forcibly and inveighing against the president, the secretary of the treasury and the bankers and money lenders of Wall street, and threatening the withdrawal of his state, South Carolina, from the democratic column if the Chicago convention should not declare in favor of free silver at 16 to 1. Senator Hill's reply was dignified and sarcastic. He, too, spoke of the Chicago convention; declared that he did not believe the president was a candidate for the nomination; said that he was not pledged to him or to any member of his cabinet; eulogized Secretary Carlisle for his public services, while criticizing him for his interference against the re-election of Senator Blackburn, and closed a long speech by declaring that the policy of the democratic party should be "in essentials, unity; in non-essentials, liberty; in all things, charity."

House of Representatives.

The house to-day will vote on the passage of the bankruptcy bill, but as there are several amendments to be first voted upon, it will probably not occur until late in the afternoon. The letter from ex-President Harrison on the subject, which was read in the house yesterday, will, it is expected, have considerable influence on the vote. It is as follows: "I think the impression that some of our western boards of trade had upon the bankruptcy question was that, by reason of the nearness of our merchants to their customers, they had an advantage with the failing debtor over the distant creditor, and that this would be surrendered under a bankruptcy bill. It seems to me to be a short-tighted view of the question."

THE HILDRETH TRIAL.

Interesting Testimony Elicited from the Boy Train Wrecker's Sweetheart.

Rome, N. Y., May 2.—The testimony elicited from Celia Perryn, the sweetheart of Hildreth, was the most interesting that has yet been given at the trial of the boy train wrecker. She was an unwilling witness, so unwilling that the judge reprimanded her, saying that he wanted no quibbling. She said she had known Hildreth three years. When he came to her house on the morning of the wreck she noticed that his nose was scratched. She said she had a conversation with him, but it required a great deal of questioning to obtain from her the gist of what was said. She finally said he told her that the fast mail had been wrecked and, as his hat was missing, he might be suspected and arrested. He told her he had led the other boys to where the wreck occurred. He asked her to send a telegram to his father, and she did so. Finally, but only little by little, she substantially admitted all the salient points in Hildreth's confession to her.

Connecticut Spiritualists.

Hartford, May 2.—The tenth annual meeting of the Connecticut Spiritualists' association is being held at Unity hall to-day, and will continue to-morrow. Officers will be elected and addresses will be made by President C. E. Bingham of Willimantic; A. J. Maxham, J. Frank Baxter of Chelsea, Mass.; Mrs. Jennie H. Jackson and J. D. Stiles, a medium.

American Vessels Exempted.

Washington, May 2.—Word has been received here by telegraph, unofficially, that Canadian government has adopted an order in council exempting American vessels from entry and clearance charges at Canadian ports. This action is the result of extended diplomatic intercourse between the state department and Great Britain.

Booth-Tucker Leaves for California.

New York, May 2.—Commander Booth-Tucker of the Salvation army left for California last night to bring back his wife, who was seriously ill a few days ago, but is now much improved.

Society Sons of American Revolution.

Hartford, May 2.—The annual meeting of the Connecticut Society Sons of the American Revolution will be held in Jewell hall, Y. M. C. A. building, on the 11th inst.

SEDAN MONUMENT.

To Be Erected in Memory of French Soldiers Who Fell There.

Sedan is to be commemorated by a monument from the hand of M. Croisy, the French sculptor. It is the figure of Fame seated above a dead soldier and placing upon the drooping head a wreath of bay leaves. On the pedestal runs the inscription: "Gloire a seux qui meyrent pour la Patrie." The composition of the whole monument is exceedingly florid, from the wing of the mythical figure to the wreath which is suspended above the soldier's head. Of course, so fine a sculptor as

FRENCH MONUMENT FOR SEDAN.

M. Croisy is permitted to have his own ideas of the appearance of Fame, and she is certainly depicted as a very pretty girl. She is also French; and there is no doubt that had the sculptor been German or Italian Fame would have been German or Italian. It may be, however, that an injustice is done to M. Croisy's ideal by the inspection of a mere reproduction that faces the eye upon a horizontal level. There is marked disproportion, from this point of view, between the size of the figure of Fame and that of the soldier. The monument will be placed upon a pedestal ten meters high, a position which will not only give elasticity and a sense of poise to the winged figure, but will also reduce its apparent size in the resulting perspective.

INEXPENSIVE X RAYS.

Pittsburgh Scientist Describes a Simple Way of Producing Them.

A very simple method of illustrating the theory of Roentgen regarding the collection of light may be made in the following manner, as a Pittsburgh scientist says:

Fold a piece of white paper of ordinary thickness into the form of a cone, closing the small end tightly, so as to exclude the light. Place this cone over the globe of an incandescent light, folding the edges around the same in such a manner as to prevent any rays from escaping which do not penetrate the paper.

Then darken the room as much as possible, excluding all the light save that furnished by the covered globe, and place your hand, with fingers extended, within two or three inches of the latter. The accompanying picture shows the process before the lamp has been entirely enveloped in the small end of the cone.

CHEAP X RAYS.
They can be produced without electric apparatus.

After holding it in this position for a minute or a little longer you will be astonished at the result. Not only can the circulation be plainly seen, but even the outlines of the bones will be discernible.

In the absence of an electric light a common lamp may be used with good results.

Agent Succeeded in Selling.

Yankee hustle has perhaps never been better exemplified than in the case of a sewing machine agent who is exploiting the vicinity of Dover, Me. A week ago he tackled a house in which lived an old bachelor who hadn't a sewing machine. The agent was persistent and the bachelor obdurate, until finally the latter said he positively wouldn't buy a machine unless a woman to run it was also provided. Then the agent hunted around, and in six weeks had found an elderly but excellent maiden lady who had been waiting for some good man to speak out to her, and actually succeeded in getting her married to the bachelor. Then he made a sale of a machine, though it might seem that he ought to have given one to the bride as a present. This story is vouched for by the Maine papers.

The Horse Chestnut.

Etymologically speaking, the word horse chestnut has nothing whatever to do with horses. A Frenchman, however, has made the discovery that horse chestnuts are an undoubted cure for broken-winded animals.

Ohio has followed the custom of New York and hereafter electrocution will prevail instead of hanging. How long will it be before New Jersey follows suit? It is the only proper capital punishment.

Congress has fixed the salary of the United States Marshal and District Attorney of New Jersey at $3,000 each. The House fixed the figure at $2,000 and the Senate at $4,000. The $3,000 was fixed as a compromise.

Our up-Jersey Democratic friends are hopeful of victory this fall, and this reminds us that the South Jersey Democrats should get together and make a long and strong pull for victory this fall.—Camden Democrat.

Miles Ross denied the statement that he was a candidate for delegate-at-large to the National Democratic Convention in Chicago, yesterday. He stated he was not a candidate, and would not accept the appointment. His health would prevent him from attending to the duties of delegate, even if he had no other objections.

The Shah of Persia has been killed. He was worth a good many millions, and leaves a thousand or more wives. It is reasonable to presume that they will draw straws to see who will act as chief mourners. If reports be true, the Shah was a tyrant and cruel man, and civilized people can express but little sympathy for him.

Poor New Brunswick. Dirty, slow and wicked she is. The only commendable things she ever has come as gifts. Now Congressman Howell has had Congress pass an act making a gift to the soldiers' and sailors' association of the squatty old town. The present is four condemned cannon and thirty balls, and they will be used to decorate the war monument which has recently been put up in that city.

City Judge DeMeza yesterday retained Craig A. Marsh in the chancery suit brought against him by Irenaus P. Allen, about which the New York dailies yesterday printed serious charges against the Judge. In less than twenty-four hours time, Mr. Marsh has secured the complete exoneration of Judge DeMeza and had the suit dismissed with costs. The Judge's many friends in this city will be glad to hear of his vindication.

ANOTHER CONGRESSMAN.

Paine's Celery Compound, the Great Spring Remedy, Made Him Well.

A congressman is a public servant in the full sense of the word.

He is responsible to his constituents to his party, to himself—the honorable office is full of hard, thankless work, and heavy responsibility.

Congressman William W. Grout is grateful to the friend who directed him to Paine's celery compound, when prolonged official work had well nigh exhausted his health and strength. His letter reads:

Committee on Expenditures the War Department.

House of Representatives, U. S.

Washington, D. C., Feb. 28, 1896.

I found relief in Paine's celery compound for insomnia. Its action on the circulation and digestion was also beneficial.

Very truly yours, William W. Grout.

There is something wrong when one feels "tired all the time." It is contrary to every condition of good health.

There ought to be no necessity of drumming into the ears of tired men and women who feel they are broken in health, and are every day losing in weight and strength, the urgent need of taking Paine's celery compound, now 'tis spring, to restore their spent nerve force and purify their blood.

Some of the earliest good results noticed from taking Paine's celery compound during these spring days is a regularity of the bowels, a better appetite, sound sleep, and good digestion. A healthy blood supply is regulated by the nerves, and when these vital tissues become fatigued and badly nourished, the bad effect is seen in falling digestion, distressing, ringing sounds in the ears, dizzy spells, depression, neuralgia and lassitude. Spring days afford every one the opportunity for shaking off old weaknesses and persistent disorders.

Physicians of every school have been from the start urged to inquire into the formula of Paine's celery compound, that they might satisfy themselves of its wonderful power of making the sick well. Prof. Edward E. Phelps, M. D., LL. D., as soon as he presented Paine's celery compound to his fellow physicians, was always anxious to have the invigorator tried in cases that had resisted the usual methods of treatment, that he might prove the truth of every claim made for his newly discovered formula for Paine's celery compound. The great remedy always gave relief, and in 99 cases out of 100 made people well.

Paine's celery compound cannot be judged by the standard of any ordinary medicine, sarsaparilla or nerve tonic. It is a great modern scientific discovery, singularly unlike any remedial agent that has ever aimed to effect a similar purpose—to make people well.

Paine's celery compound is the one real spring remedy known today that never fails to benefit. Get Paine's celery compound, and only Paine's celery compound if you wish to be well.

The House of the Wolf

BY STANLEY J. WEYMAN

WITH PICTURES BY FRANK VER BECK.

"I must see M. de Pavannes! I am pledged to it," I ejaculated.

"To see M. de Pavannes?"

"Yes."

I was conscious that she was looking at me with eyes of doubt, almost of suspicion.

"Why? Why?" she asked, with evident surprise. "You have restored—and nearly frightened me to death in doing it—his wife to her home; what more do you want with him, most valiant knight-errant?"

"I must see him," I said, firmly. I would have told her all and been thankful, but the priest was within hearing—or barely out of it; and I had seen too much pass between him and Bezers to be willing to say anything before him.

"You must see M. de Pavannes?" she repeated, gazing at me.

"I must," I replied, with decision.

"Then you shall. That is exactly what I am going to help you to do," she exclaimed. "He is not here. That is what is the matter. He went out at nightfall seeking news of his wife, and crossed the river, the coadjutor says, to the Faubourg St. Germain. Now it is of the utmost importance that he should return before morning—return here."

"But is he not here?" I said, finding all my calculations at fault. "You are sure of it, madame?"

"Quite sure," she answered, rapidly. "Your brothers will have by this time discovered the fact. Now, M. de Caylus, Pavannes must be brought here before morning, not only for his wife's sake—though she will be wild with anxiety—but also—"

"I know," I said, eagerly, interrupting her, "for his own, too! There is a danger threatening him."

She turned swiftly, as if startled, and I turned, and we looked at the priest. I thought we understood one another. "There is," she answered, softly, "and I would save him from that danger; but he will only be safe, as I happen to know, here! Here, you understand! He must be brought here before daybreak, M. de Caylus. He must! He must!" she exclaimed, her beautiful features hardening with the earnestness of her feelings. "And the coadjutor cannot go. I cannot go. There is only one man who can save him, and that is yourself. There is, above all, not a moment to be lost."

My thoughts were in a whirl. Even as she spoke she began to walk back the way we had come, her hand on my arm; and I, doubtful and in a confused way unwilling, went with her. I did not clearly understand the position. I would have wished to go in and confer with Marie and Croisette; but the juncture had occurred so quickly, and it might be that time was as valuable as she said, and—well, it was hard for me, a lad, to refuse her anything when she looked at me with appeal in her eyes. I did manage to stammer: "But I do not know Paris. I could not find my way, I am afraid, and it is night, madame."

She released my arm and stopped. "Night!" she cried, with a scornful ring in her voice. "Night! I thought you were a man, not a boy! You are afraid!"

"Afraid," I said, hotly; "we Caylus' are never afraid."

"Then I can tell you the way, if that be your only difficulty. We turn here. Now, come in with me a moment," she continued, "and I will give you something you will need—and your directions."

She had stopped at the door of a tall, narrow house, standing between larger ones in a street which appeared to me to be more airy and important than any I had yet seen. As she spoke, she rang the bell once, twice, thrice. The silvery tinkle had scarcely died away the third time before the door opened silently; I saw no one, but she drew me into a narrow hall or passage. A taper in an embossed holder was burning on a chest. She took it up, and, telling me to follow her, led the way lightly up the stairs, and into a room, half parlor, half bedroom—such a room as I had never seen before. It was richly hung from ceiling to floor with blue silk, and lighted by the soft rays of lamps shaded by Venetian globes of delicate hues. The scent of cedarwood was in the air, and on the hearth in a velvet tray were some tiny puppies. A dainty disorder reigned everywhere. On one table a jewel case stood open, on another lay some lace garments, two or three masks and a fan. A gemmed riding whip and a silver-hilted poniard hung on the same peg. And, strangest of all, huddled away behind the door, I espied a plain, black-sheathed sword and a man's gauntlets.

She did not wait a moment, but went at once to the jewel case. She took from it a gold ring—a heavy seal ring. She held this out to me in the most matter-of-fact way—scarcely turning, in fact. "Put it on your finger," she said, hurriedly. "If you are stopped by soldiers, or if they will not give you a boat to cross the river, say boldly that you are on the king's service. Call for the officer and show that ring. Play the man. Bid him stop you at his peril!"

I hastily muttered my thanks, and she as hastily took something from a drawer, and tore it into strips. Before I knew what she was doing she was on her knees by me, fastening a white band of linen round my left sleeve. Then she took my cap, and with the same precipitation fixed a fragment of the same stuff in it, in the form of a rough cross.

"There," she said. "Now, listen, M. de Caylus. There is more afoot to-night than you know of. These badges will help you across to St. Germain, but the moment you land, tear them off. Tear them off, remember. They will help you no longer. You will come back by the same boat, and will not need them. If you are seen to wear them as you return, they will command no respect, but on the contrary will bring you—and perhaps me—into trouble."

"I understand," I said, "but—"

"You must ask no questions," she retorted, waving one snowy finger before my eyes. "My knight-errant must have faith in me, as I have in him; or he would not be here at this time of night and alone with me. But remember this also. When you meet Pavannes do not say you come from me. Keep that in your mind; I will explain the reason afterwards. Say merely that his wife is found, and is wild with anxiety about him. If you say anything as to his danger he may refuse to come. Men are obstinate."

I nodded a smiling assent, thinking I understood. At the same time I permitted myself in my own mind a little discretion. Pavannes was not a fool, and the name of the vidame—but, however, I should see. I had more to say to him than she knew of. Meanwhile she explained very carefully the three turnings I had to take to reach the river, and the wharf where boats most commonly lay, and the name of the house in which I should find M. de Pavannes.

"He is at the Hotel de Bailli," she said. "And there, I think that is all."

"No, not all," I said hardily. "There is one thing I have not got. And that is a sword!"

She followed the direction of my eyes, started, and laughed—a little oddly. But she fetched the weapon. "Take it, and do not," she urged, "do not lose time. Do not mention me to Pavannes. Do not let the white badges be seen as you return. That is really all. And now good luck!" She gave me her hand to kiss. "Good luck, my knight-errant, good luck—and come back to me soon!"

She smiled divinely, as it seemed to me, as she said these last words, and the same smile followed me downstairs; for she leaned over the stairhead with one of the lamps in her hand, and directed me how to draw the bolts. I took one backward glance as I did so at the fair stooping figure above me, the shining eyes, and tiny out-stretched hand, and then darting into the gloom I hurried on my way.

I was in a strange mood. A few minutes before I had been at Pavannes' door, at the end of our journey; on the verge of success. I had been within an ace, as I supposed at least, of executing my errand. I had held the cup of success in my hand. And it had slipped. Now the conflict had to be fought over again; the danger to be faced. It would have been no more than natural if I had felt the disappointment keenly; if I had almost despaired.

But it was otherwise—far otherwise. Never had my heart beat higher or more proudly than as I now hurried through the streets, avoiding such groups as were abroad in them, and intent only on observing the proper turnings. Never in any moment of triumph in after days, in love or war, did anything like the exhilaration the energy, the spirit, of those minutes come back to me. I had a woman's badge in my cap—for the first time—the music of her voice in my ears. I had a magic ring on my finger; a talisman on my arm. My sword was at my side again. All round me lay a misty city of adventure, of danger and romance, full of the richest and most beautiful possibilities; a city of real witchery, such as I had read of in stories, through which those fairy gifts and my right hand should guide me safely. I did not even regret my brothers, or our separation. I was the eldest. It was fitting that the cream of the enterprise should be reserved for me, Anne de Caylus. And to what might it not lead? I fancy I saw myself already a duke and a peer of France—already I held the baton.

Yet while I exulted boyishly, I did not forget what I was about. I kept my eyes open, and soon remarked that the number of people passing to and fro in the dark streets had much increased within the last half hour. The silence in which, in groups or singly, these figures stole by me was very striking. I heard no brawling, fighting or singing, yet if it were not too late for these things, why were so many people up and about? I began to count presently, and found that at least half of those I met wore badges in their hats and on their arms, similar to mine, and that they all moved with a business-like air, as if bound for some rendezvous.

I was not a fool, though I was young, and in some matters less quick than Croisette. The hints which had been dropped by so many had not been lost on me. "There is more afoot to-night than you know of!" Mme. d'O had said. And having eyes as well as ears I fully believed it. Something was afoot. Something was going to happen in Paris before morning. But what, I wondered. Could it be that a rebellion was about to break out? If so I was on the king's service, and all was well. I might even be going—and only 18—to make history! Or was it only a brawl on a great scale between two parties of nobles? I had heard of such things happening in Paris. Then—well I did not see how I could act in that case. I must be guided by events.

I did not imagine anything else which it could be. That is the truth, though it may need explanation. I was accustomed only to the milder religious differences, the more evenly balanced parties of Quercy, where the peace between the Catholics and the Huguenots had been welcome to all save a very few. I could not gauge therefore the fanaticism of the Parisian populace, and lost count of the factor, which made possible that which was going to happen—was going to happen in Paris before daylight as surely as the sun was going to rise! I knew that the Huguenot nobles were present in the city in great numbers, but it did not occur to me that they could as a body be in danger. They were many and powerful, and as was said, in favor with the king. They were under the protection of the king of Navarre—France's brother-in-law of a week, and the prince of Conde; and though these princes were young, Coligny, the sagacious admiral, was old, and not much the worse I had learned for his wound. He at least was high in royal favor, a trusted counselor. Had not the king visited him on his sick-bed and sat by him for an hour together?

Surely, I thought, if there were danger, these men would know of it. And then the Huguenots' main enemy, Henri le Balafre, the splendid duke of Guise, "our great man," and "Lorraine," as the crowd called him—he, it was rumored, was in disgrace at court. In a word, these things, to say nothing of the peaceful and joyous occasion which had brought the Huguenots to Paris, and which seemed to put treachery out of the question, were more than enough to prevent me forecasting the event.

If for a moment, indeed, as I hurried along towards the river, anything like the truth occurred to me, I put it from me. I say with pride I put it from me as a thing impossible. For God forbid—one may speak out the truth these 40 years back—God forbid, say I, that all Frenchmen should bear the blood-guiltiness which came of other than French brains, though French were the hands that did the work.

I was not greatly troubled by my forebodings therefore; and the state of exaltation to which Mme. d'O's confidence had raised my spirits lasted until one of the narrow streets by the Louvre brought me suddenly within sight of the river. Here faint moonlight bursting momentarily through the clouds was shining on the placid surface of the water. The fresh air played upon, and cooled my temples. And this, with the quiet scene so abruptly presented to me, gave check to my thoughts, and somewhat sobered me.

At some distance to my left I could distinguish in the middle of the river the pile of buildings which crowd the Ile de la Cite, and could follow the nearer arm of the stream as it swept landwards of these, closely hemmed in by houses, but unbroken as yet by the arches of the Pont Neuf which I have lived to see built. Not far from me on my right—indeed, within a stone's throw—the bulky mass of the Louvre rose dark and shapeless against the sky. Only a narrow open space—the foreshore—separated me from the water; beyond which I could see an irregular line of buildings, that no doubt formed the Faubourg St. Germain.

I had been told that I should find stairs leading down to the water, and boats moored at the foot of them, at this point. Accordingly I walked quickly across the open space to a spot, where I made out a couple of posts set up on the brink—doubtless to mark the landing place.

I had not gone ten paces, however, out of the shadow, before I chanced to look round, and discerned with an unpleasant eerie feeling three figures detach themselves from it, and advance in a row behind me, so as the better to cut off my retreat. I was not to succeed in my enterprise too easily, then. That was clear. Still I thought it better to act as if I had not seen my followers, and collecting myself, I walked as quickly as I could down to the steps. The three were by that time close upon me—within striking distance almost. I turned abruptly and confronted them.

"Who are you, and what do you want?" I said, eyeing them warily, my hand on my sword.

They did not answer, but separated more widely, so as to form a half-circle; and one of them whistled. On the instant a knot of men started out of the line of houses, and came quickly across the strip of light towards us.

The position seemed serious. If I could have run, indeed—but I glanced round, and found escape in that fashion impossible. There were men crouching on the steps behind me, between me and the river. I had fallen into a trap. Indeed, there was nothing for it now but to do as madame had bidden me, and play the man boldly. I had the words still ringing in my ears. I had enough of the excitement I had lately felt still bounding in my veins to give nerve and daring. I folded my arms and drew myself up.

"Knaves!" I said, with as much quiet contempt as I could muster, "you mistake me. You do not know whom you have to deal with. Get me a boat, and let two of you row me across. Hinder me, and your necks shall answer for it—or your backs!"

A laugh and an oath of derision formed the only response, and before I could add more the larger group arrived, and joined the three.

"Who is it, Pierre?" asked one of these in a matter-of-fact way, which showed I had not fallen amongst mere thieves.

The speaker seemed to be the leader of the band. He had a feather in his bonnet, and I saw a steel corselet gleam under his cloak, when some one held up a lanthorn to examine me the better. His trunk-hose were striped with black, white, and green—the livery, as I learned afterwards of monsieur the king's brother, the duke of Anjou, afterwards Henry the Third; then a close friend of the duke of Guise, and later his murderer.

The captain spoke with a foreign accent, and his complexion was dark to swarthiness. His eyes sparkled and flashed like black beads. It was easy to see that he was an Italian.

"A gallant young cock enough," the soldier who whistled answered. "Not quite of the breed we expected." He held his lanthorn toward me and pointed to the white badge on my sleeve. "It strikes me we have caught a crow instead of a pigeon!"

"How comes this?" the Italian asked, harshly, addressing me. "Who are you? And why do you wish to cross the river at this time of night, young sir?"

I acted on the inspiration of the moment. "Play the man boldly!" madame had said. I would; and I did with a vengeance. I sprang forward and, seizing the captain by the clasp of his cloak, shook him violently, and flung him off with all my force, so that he reeled. "Dog!" I exclaimed, advancing, as if I would seize him again. "Learn how to speak to your betters! Am I to be stopped by such sweepings as you? Hark ye, I am on the king's service!"

He fairly spluttered with rage. "More like the devil's!" he exclaimed, pronouncing his words abominably, and fumbling vainly for his weapon. "King's service or no service, you do not insult Andrea Pallavicini!"

I could only vindicate my daring by greater daring, and I saw this even as, death staring me in the face, my heart seemed to stop. The man had his mouth open and his hand raised to give an order which would certainly have sent Anne de Caylus from the world, when I cried, passionately—it was my last chance, and I never wished to live more strongly than at that moment—I cried passionately: "Andrea Pallavicini, if such be your name, look at that! Look at that!" I repeated, shaking my open hand with the ring on it before his face, "and then hinder me, if you dare! To-morrow, if you have quarterings enough, I will see to your quarrel! Now send me on my way or your fate be on your own head! Disobey—ay, do but hesitate—and I will call on these very men of yours to cut you down!"

It was a bold throw, for I staked all on a talisman of which I did not know the value! To me it was the turn of a die, for I had had no leisure to look at the ring, and knew no more than a babe whose it was. But the venture was as happy as desperate.

Andrea Pallavicini's expression—no pleasant one at the best of times—changed on the instant. His face fell as he seized my hand and peered at the ring long and intently. Then he cast a quick glance of suspicion at his men, of hatred at me. But I cared nothing for his glance, or his hatred. I saw already that he had made up his mind to obey the charm; and that for me was everything. "If you had shown that to me a little earlier, young sir, it would, maybe, have been better for both of us," he said, a surly menace in his voice. And cursing his men for their stupidity, he ordered two of them to unmoor a boat.

Apparently the craft had been secured with more care than skill, for to loosen it seemed to be a work of time. Meanwhile I stood waiting in the midst of the group, anxious and yet exultant, an object of curiosity, and yet curious myself. I heard the guards whisper together, and caught such phrases as: "It is the Duc d'Aumale."

"No, it is not D'Aumale. It is nothing like him."

"Well, he has the duke's ring, fool!"

"The duke's?"

"Ay."

"Then it is all right, God bless him!" This last was uttered with extreme fervor.

I was conscious too of being the object of many respectful glances; and had just bidden the men on the steps below me to be quick, when I discovered with alarm three figures moving across the open space towards us, and coming apparently from the same point from which Pallavicini and his men had emerged.

In a moment I foresaw danger. "Now be quick there!" I cried again. But scarcely had I spoken before I saw that it was impossible to get afloat before these others came up, and I prepared to stand my ground resolutely.

The first words, however, with which Pallavicini saluted the newcomers scattered my fears. "Well, what the foul fiend do you want?" he exclaimed, rudely; and he rapped out half a dozen corpos before they could answer him. "What have you brought him here for, when I left him in the guardhouse? Imbeciles!"

"Capt. Pallavicini," interposed the midmost of the three, speaking with patience—he was a man of about 30, dressed with some richness, though his clothes were now disordered as though by a struggle—"I have induced these good men to bring me down—"

"Then," cried the captain, brutally interrupting him, "you have lost your labor, monsieur."

"You do not know me," replied the prisoner with sternness—a prisoner he seemed to be. "You do not understand that I am a friend of the prince of Conde, and that—"

He would have said more, but the Italian again cut him short. "A fig for the prince of Conde!" he cried; "I understand my duty. You may as well take things easily. You cannot cross, and you cannot go home, and you cannot have any explanation; except that it is the king's will! Explanation?" he grumbled, in a lower tone, "you will get it soon enough, I warrant! Before you want it!"

"But there is a boat going to cross," said the other, controlling his temper by an effort and speaking with dignity. "You told me that by the king's order no one could cross; and you arrested me because, having urgent need to visit St. Germain, I persisted. Now, what does this mean, Capt. Pallavicini? Others are crossing. I ask what this means?"

"Whatever you please, M. de Pavannes," the Italian retorted, contemptuously. "Explain it for yourself!"

I started as the name struck my ear, and at once cried out in surprise: "M. de Pavannes!" Had I heard aright?

Apparently I had, for the prisoner turned to me with a bow. "Yes, sir," he said, with dignity, "I am M. de Pavannes. I have not the honor of knowing you, but you seem to be a gentleman." He cast a withering glance at the captain as he said this. "Perhaps you will explain to me why this violence has been done to me. If you can I shall consider it a favor; if not, pardon me."

I did not answer him at once for a good reason—that every faculty I had was bent on a close scrutiny of the man himself. He was fair, and of a ruddy complexion. His beard was cut in the short pointed fashion of the court; and in these respects he bore a kind of likeness, a curious likeness, to Louis de Pavannes. But his figure was shorter and stouter. He was less martial in bearing, with more of the air of a scholar than a soldier. "You are related to M. Louis de Pavannes?" I said, my heart beginning to beat with an odd excitement. I think I foresaw already what was coming.

"I am Louis de Pavannes," he replied, with impatience.

I stared at him in silence; thinking—thinking— thinking. And then I said, slowly: "You have a cousin of the same name?"

"I have."

"He fell prisoner to the Vicomte de Caylus at Moncontour?"

"He did," he answered, curtly. "But what of that, sir?"

Again I did not answer—at once. The murder was out. I remembered in the dim fashion in which one remembers such things after the event, that I had heard Louis de Pavannes, when we first became acquainted with him, mention this cousin of the same name; the head of a younger branch. But our Louis living in Provence and the other in Normandy, the distance between their homes, and the troubles of the times, had loosened a tie which their common religion might have strengthened. They had scarcely ever seen one another. As Louis had spoken of his namesake but once during his long stay with us, and I had not then foreseen the connection to be formed between our families, it was no wonder that in the course of months the chance word had passed out of my head, and I had clean forgotten the subject of it.

Here, however, he was before my eyes, and, seeing him, I saw too what the discovery meant. It meant a most joyful thing! a most wonderful thing which I longed to tell Croisette and Marie. It meant that our Louis de Pavannes—my cheek burned for my want of faith in him—was no villain after all, but such a noble gentleman as we had always until this day thought him! It meant that he was no court gallant bent on breaking a country heart for sport, but Kit's own true lover! And—and it meant more—it meant that he was yet in danger and still ignorant of the vow that unchained fiend Bezers had taken to have his life! In pursuing his namesake we had been led astray, how sadly I only knew now! And had indeed lost most precious time.

"Your wife, M. de Pavannes"—I began in haste, seeing the necessity of explaining matters with the utmost quickness. "Your wife is—"

"Ah, my wife!" he cried, interrupting me, with anxiety in his tone. "What of her? You have seen her?"

"I have. She is safe at your house in the Rue St. Merri."

"Thank heaven for that!" he replied, fervently. Before he could say more Capt. Andrea interrupted us. I could see that his suspicions were aroused afresh. He pushed rudely between us, and addressing me, said: "Now, young sir, your boat is ready."

"My boat," I answered, while I rapidly considered the situation. Of course I did not want to cross the river now. No doubt Pavannes—this Pavannes—could guide me to Louis' address. "My boat?"

"Yes, it is waiting," the Italian replied, his black eyes roving from one to the other of us.

"Then let it wait!" I answered haughtily, speaking with an assumption of anger. "Plague upon you for interrupting us! I shall not cross the river now. This gentleman can give me the information I want. I shall take him back with me."

"Yes, sir," he said; "I am M. de Pavannes."

"To whom?"

"To whom? To those who sent me, sirrah!" I thundered. "You do not seem to be much in the duke's confidence, captain," I went on; "now, take a word of advice from me! There is nothing so easily cast off as an over-officious servant! He goes too far—and he goes like an old glove—an old glove," I repeated grimly, sneering in his face, "which saves the hand and suffers itself. Beware of too much zeal, Capt. Pallavicini! It is a dangerous thing!"

He turned pale with anger at being thus treated by a beardless boy, but he faltered all the same. What I said was unpleasant, but the bravo knew it was true.

I saw the impression I had made, and I turned to the soldiers standing round.

"Bring here, my friends," I said, "M. de Pavannes' sword!"

One ran up to the guard-house and brought it at once. They were townsfolk, burgher guards or such like, and for some reason betrayed so evident respect for me, that I soberly believe they would have turned on their temporary leader at my bidding. Pavannes took his sword, and placed it under his arm. We both bowed ceremoniously to Pallavicini, who scowled in response; and slowly, for I was afraid to show any signs of haste, we walked across the moonlit space to the bottom of the street by which I had come. There the gloom swallowed us up at once. Pavannes touched my sleeve and stopped in the darkness.

"I beg to be allowed to thank you for your aid," he said, with emotion, turning and facing me. "Whom have I the honor of addressing?"

"M. Anne de Caylus, a friend of your cousin," I replied.

"Indeed?" he said. "Well, I thank you most heartily," and we embraced with warmth.

"But I could have done little," I answered, modestly, "on your behalf, if it had not been for this ring."

"And the virtue of the ring lies in—"

"In—I am sure I cannot say in what!" I confessed. And then, in the sympathy which the scene had naturally created between us, I forgot one portion of my lady's commands, and I added, impulsively: "All I know is that Mme. d'O gave it to me; and that it has done all and more than all she said it would."

"Who gave it to you?" he asked, grasping my arm so tightly as to hurt me.

"Mme. d'O," I repeated. It was too late to draw back now.

"That woman!" he ejaculated, in a strange, low whisper. "Is it possible? That woman gave it to you?"

I wondered what on earth he meant, surprise, scorn and dislike were so blended in his tone. It even seemed to me that he drew off from me somewhat. "Yes, M. de Pavannes," I replied, offended and indignant. "It is so far possible that it is the truth; and more, I think you would not so speak of this lady if you knew all; and that it was through her your wife was today freed from those who were detaining her, and taken safely home!"

"Ha!" he cried, eagerly. "Then where has my wife been?"

"At the house of Mirepoix, the glover," I answered, coldly, "in the Rue Platriere. Do you know him? You do. Well, she was kept there a prisoner, until we helped her to escape an hour or so ago."

He did not seem to comprehend even then. I could see little of his face, but there was doubt and wonder in his tone when he spoke. "Mirepoix, the glover," he murmured. "He is an honest man enough, though a Catholic. She was kept there! Who kept her there?"

"The abbess of the Ursulines seems to have been at the bottom of it," I explained, fretting with impatience. This wonder was misplaced, I thought; and time was passing. "Mme. d'O found out where she was," I continued, "and took her home, and then sent me to fetch you, hearing you had crossed the river. That is the story in brief."

"That woman sent you to fetch me?" he repeated again.

"Yes," I answered, angrily. "She did, M. de Pavannes."

"Then," he said, slowly, and with an air of solemn conviction which could not but impress me, "there is a trap laid for me! She is the worst, the most wicked, the vilest of women!" If she sent you, this is a trap! And my wife has fallen into it already! Heaven help her—and me—if it be so!"

CHAPTER VIII.

THE PARISIAN MATINS.

There are some statements for which it is impossible to be prepared; statements so strong and so startling that it is impossible to answer them except by action—by a blow. And this of M. de Pavannes was one of these. If there had been anyone present, I think I should have given him the lie and drawn upon him. But alone with him at midnight in the shadow near the bottom of the Rue des Fosses, with no witnesses, with every reason to feel friendly towards him, what was I to do?

As a fact, I did nothing. I stood, silent and stupefied, waiting to hear more. He did not keep me long.

"She is my wife's sister," he continued, grimly. "But I have no reason to shield her on that account! Shield her? Had you lived at court only a month I might shield her all I could, M. de Caylus, it would avail nothing. Not Mme. de Sauves is better known. And I would not if I could! I know well, though my wife will not believe it, that there is nothing so near Mme. d'O's heart as to get rid of her sister and me—of both of us—that she may succeed to Madeleine's inheritance! Oh, yes, I had good grounds for being nervous yesterday, when my wife did not return," he added, excitedly.

"But there at least you wrong Mme. d'O!" I cried, shocked and horrified by an accusation which seemed to me much more dreadful in the silence and gloom—and withal so much less preposterous than it might have seemed in the daylight. "There you certainly wrong her! For shame! M. de Pavannes."

He came a step nearer, and laying a hand on my sleeve peered into my face. "Did you see a priest with her?" he asked, slowly. "A man called the coadjutor—a down-looking dog?"

I said—with a shiver of dread, a sudden revulsion of feeling, born of his manner—that I had. And I explained the part the priest had taken.

"Then," Pavannes rejoined, "I am right. There is a trap laid for me. The abbess of the Ursulines! She abduct my wife? Why, she is her dearest friend, believe me. It is impossible She would be more likely to save her from danger than to—Humph! wait a minute." I did; I waited, dreading what he might discover, until he muttered, checking himself: "Can that be it? Can it be that the abbess did know of some danger threatening us, and would have put Madeline in a safe retreat? I wonder!"

And I wondered; and then—well, thoughts are like gunpowder. The least spark will fire a train. His words were few, but they formed spark enough to raise such a flare in my brain as for a moment blinded me and shook me so that I trembled. The shock over, I was left face to face with a possibility of wickedness such as I could never have suspected of myself. I remembered Mirepoix' distress and the priest's eagerness. I recalled the gruff warning Bezers—even Bezers, and there was something very odd in Bezers giving a warning!—had given Mme. de Pavannes when he told her that she would be better where she was. I thought of the wakefulness which I had marked in the streets, the signs of coming strife, and contrasted these with the quietude and seeming safety of Mirepoix' house; and I hastily asked Pavannes at what time he had been arrested.

"About an hour before midnight," he answered.

"Then you know nothing of what is happening?" I replied quickly. "Why, even while we are loitering here—but listen!"

And with all speed, stammering indeed in my haste and anxiety, I told him what I had noticed in the streets, and the hints I had heard, and I showed him the badges with which madame had furnished me.

His manner when he had heard me out frightened me still more. He drew me on in a kind of fury to a house in the windows of which some lighted candles had appeared not a minute before. "The ring!" he cried, "let me see the ring! Whose is it?"

He held up my hand to this chance light and we looked at the ring. It was a heavy gold signet, with one curious characteristic: it had two faces. On one of these was engraved the letter "H," and above it a crown. On the other was an eagle with outstretched wings.

Pavannes let my hand drop and leaned against the wall in sudden despair. "It is the duke of Guise's," he muttered. "It is the eagle of Lorraine."

"Ha!" said I softly, seeing light. The duke was the idol then, as later, of the Parisian populace, and I understood now why the citizen soldiers had shown me such respect. They had taken me for the duke's envoy and confidant.

But I saw no farther. Pavannes did, and murmured bitterly: "We may say our prayers, we Huguenots. That is our death warrant. To-morrow night there will not be one left in Paris, lad. Guise has his father's death to avenge, and these cursed Parisians will do his bidding like the wolves they are! The Baron de Rosny warned us of this, word for word. I would to Heaven we had taken his advice!"

"Stay!" I cried—he was going too fast for me—"stay!" His monstrous conception, though it marched some way with my own suspicions, outran them far! I saw no sufficient grounds for it. "The king—the king would not permit such a thing, M. de Pavannes," I argued.

"Boy, you are blind!" he rejoined, impatiently, for he now saw all and I nothing. "Yonder was the duke of Anjou's captain — monsieur's officer, the follower of France's brother, mark you! And he—he obeyed the duke's ring! The duke has a free hand tonight, and he hates us. And the river. Why are we not to cross the river? The king indeed! The king has undone us. He has sold us to his brother and the Guises. Va chasser l' Idole"—for the second time I heard the quaint phrase, which I learned afterwards was an anagram of the king's name, Charles de Valois, used by Protestants as a password—"Va chasser l' Idole has betrayed us! I remember the very words he used to the admiral: 'Now we have got you here we shall not let you go so easily!' Oh, the traitor! The wretched traitor!"

He leaned against the wall, overcome by the horror of the conviction which had burst upon him, and unnerved by the imminence of the peril. At all times he was an unready man, I fancy, more fit, courage apart, for the college than the field; and now he gave way to despair. Perhaps the thought of his wife unmanned him. Perhaps the excitement through which he had already gone tended to stupefy him, or the suddenness of the discovery.

At any rate I was the first to gather my wits together, and my earliest impulse was to tear into two parts a white handkerchief I had in my pouch, and fasten one to his sleeve, the other in his hat, in rough imitation of the badges I wore myself.

It will appear from this that I no longer trusted Mme. d'O. I was not convinced, it is true, of her conscious guilt, still I did not trust her entirely. "Do not wear them on your return," she had said and that was odd; although I could not yet believe that she was such a siren as Father Pierre had warned us of, telling tales from old poets. Yet I doubted, shuddering as I did so. Her companionship with that vile priest, the strange eagerness to secure Pavannes' return, her mysterious directions to me, her anxiety to take her sister home—home, where she would be exposed to danger, as being in a known Huguenot's house—these things pointed to but one conclusion; still that one was so horrible that I would not, even while I doubted and distrusted her, I would not, I could not accept it I put it from me, and refused to believe it, although during the rest of that night it kept coming to me and knocking for admission at my brain.

All this flashed through my mind while I was fixing on Pavannes' badges. Not that I lost time about it, for from the moment I grasped the position as he conceived it, every minute we had wasted on explanation seemed to me an hour. I reproached myself for having forgot even for an instant that which had brought us to town—the rescue of Kit's lover. We had small chance now of reaching him in time, misled as we had been by this miserable mistake in identity. If my companion's fears were well founded, Louis would fall in the general massacre of the Huguenots, probably before we could reach him. If ill-founded, still we had small reason to hope. Bezers' vengeance would not wait. I knew him too well to think it. A Guise might spare his foe, but the Vidame—the Vidame never! He had warned Mme. de Pavannes, it was true; but that abnormal exercise of benevolence could only, I cynically thought, have the more exasperated the devil within him, which now would be ravening like a dog disappointed of its victuals.

I glanced up at the line of sky visible between the tall houses, and lo! the dawn was coming. It wanted scarcely half an hour of daylight, though down in the dark streets about us the night still reigned. Yes, the morning was coming, bright and hopeful, and the city was quiet. There were no signs, no sounds of riot or disorder. Surely, I thought, surely Pavannes must be mistaken. Either the plot had never existed, that was most likely, or it had been abandoned, or perhaps—Crack!

A pistol shot! Short, sharp, ominous, it rang out on the instant, a solitary sound in the night! It was somewhere near us, and I stopped. I had been speaking to my companion at the moment. "Where was it?" I cried, looking behind me.

"Close to us. Near the Louvre," he answered, listening intently. "See! See! Ah, heavens!" he continued in a voice of despair, "it was a signal!"

It was. One, two, three! Before I could count so far, lights sprang into brightness in the windows of nine out of ten houses in the short street where we stood, as if lighted by a single hand. Before too I could count as many more or ask him what this meant, before, indeed, we could speak or stir from the spot, or think what we should do, with a hurried clang and clash, as if brought into motion by furious, frenzied hands, a great bell just above our heads began to boom and whirr! It hurled its notes into space. It suddenly filled all the silence. It dashed its harsh sounds down upon the trembling city, till the air heaved and the houses about us rocked. It made in an instant a pandemonium of the quiet night.

"We are doomed."

We turned and hurried instinctively from the place, crouching and amazed, looking upwards with bent shoulders and scared faces. "What is it? What is it?" I cried, half in resentment, half in terror. It deafened me.

"The bell of St. Germain l'Auxerrois!" he shouted in answer. "The Church of the Louvre. It is as I said. We are doomed!"

"Doomed? No! " I replied fiercely, for my courage seemed to rise again on the wave of sound and excitement as if rebounding from the momentary shock. "Never! We wear the devil's livery, and he will look after his own. Draw, man, and let him that stops us look to himself. You know the way. Lead on!" I cried, savagely.

ARBOR DAY READING

Investigations Conducted by the New York Forestry Commission.

Valuable Facts About the Black Spruce—Secretary of Agriculture Morton's Tree-Planting Idea Growing in Popular Favor.

An increasing interest is everywhere shown in Arbor day. Already in some states it is made a legal holiday, and parents and teachers in the public schools are recommended by official proclamation to encourage children to plant at least one forest shade tree on a public highway, or at their home or schoolhouse. The conviction is growing that the rapid denudation of the forests is the occasion of the prolonged droughts which are of periodical recurrence throughout the land, and that the lowering of the levels of the great lakes may be attributed to the same cause. The proceedings of the forestry commission of the Empire state's relations to the great park or reservation established in the heart of the Adirondack wilderness "for the free use of the people in the pursuit of health and pleasure," are therefore worthy of careful attention.

The commercial prosperity of the state being largely dependent upon the free and safe navigation of the Erie canal and the Hudson river, both of which are to a large extent dependent on the waters of Black river, the preservation of the Adirondack forests became a matter of prime importance; hence the action of the law-making body of the state creating the commission and placing under its care these immense preserves, with the duty of enforcing the laws designed to prevent the reckless waste of timber by fire and ax, and the wanton destruction of game. The benefits already accruing to the public from this policy are beyond computation; and this is especially true with respect to the measures adopted to guard against destructive fires, in the past one of the chief sources of waste. It is true that about one-third of the Adirondack forest is owned or controlled by private clubs, but these heartily cooperate with the state authorities in the enforcement of protective measures.

The novice, as well as the professional expert in the science of forestry, find much that is of interest in the recent investigation conducted by the commission concerning the Adirondack black spruce, the most important mercantile timber of the region. Its habitat is in New York, Vermont, New Hampshire, Maine and Canada—though it is sometimes found in Pennsylvania, and even as far west as Wisconsin. In the Adirondacks it commonly attains a height of about eight feet and a diameter of 18 inches. The maximum height is 105 feet, with a diameter of 36 inches. It is distributed pretty evenly throughout the region, forming something like 15 per cent. of the whole forest.

SECRETARY MORTON, THE ORIGINATOR OF ARBOR DAY.

The habits of the black spruce are quite erratic. When it grows in dense thickets its lower branches fall off, leaving a columnar, tapering shaft, sparsely and irregularly crowned with foliage; but in the open it forms a beautiful dark green pyramid, the branches extending from very near the ground to the apex.

The lumber taken from the black spruce forests of the Adirondacks in 1893 exceeded 240,000,000 feet. That it is not very much greater is chiefly due to two peculiar causes. One is the extraordinarily large number of seamy trees, so called from a crack which extends up the trunk from base to the lower branches of the crown, in most cases penetrating to the heart of the tree. This seam fills with a resinous substance which exudes and hardens, thus forming the spruce gum of commerce.

Some 25 years ago a destructing blight fell upon the black spruce forests. It attacked only mature trees, and the cause is still a puzzle to the foresters.

It is interesting to note that the clear butt logs of the Adirondacks black spruce is the principal source of supply for the manufacture of sounding boards for pianos. Choice timber is expensive, the minimum price being about $35 per 1,000 feet at the mill. In trade parlance these logs go as "fiddle butts."

To ascertain at what age the black spruce matures, the commission has made a most interesting investigation. Impressions were taken by its orders of the stumps, and of cross sections at various heights of the pole, of 1,000 trees, in various portions of the forest. By the use of a magnifying glass it was discovered that the tree which had a diameter of 36 inches at the stump showed an age of 350 years on a section at the base, and of 102 years at a height of 110 feet. The average age of 12-inch trees is 171 years; of 13-inch trees, 174 years; of 14-inch trees, 189 years; of 15-inch trees, 185 years.

Horses Cheaper Than Bicycles.

At a recent sale of the assets of a riding academy in New York city the saddle horses brought on an average less than $30 apiece. This is said to be the lowest price on record for horses of this description, and the fact was generally noted that in New York the market value of a horse is lower than that of a bicycle.

AGAINST THE DERVISHES.

Gen. Kitchener to Lead the Proposed Anglo-Egyptian Expedition.

Gen. Kitchener, who is in command of the Anglo-Egyptian expedition which is soon to start up the Nile, is an able soldier and well fitted to be head of the enterprise by which it is hoped to reconquer East Soudan, now under the rule of the mahdi. He is the sirdar of the Egyptian army, and the expedition will consist chiefly of Egyptian troops. The native forces will be strengthened by 1,200 British troops, which will be under the command of Gen. Henderson, staff major of the army of occupation. The native army will be commanded almost exclusively by British officers. The force will march up the Nile, passing through the two Dongolas (old and new) on their way to Berber, and there will be fighting unquestion-ably at Dongola, where the mahdi has been collecting a strong force, to which he will add in anticipation of the approaching trouble. After Dongola is captured it will be made the base of operations against Berber. Twelve thousand Egyptian troops are on the advance already, and there is need for some alarm, for the dervishes are reckless fighters and scorn danger, believing, as they do, that if they die fighting they will be at once translated to the paradise of the koran. It is said that the purpose of the expedition is to assist Italy by this diversion near Abyssinia, but this is not believed. On the contrary, there can be no doubt that the sole purpose of this great undertaking is to reestablish British supremacy in the domain of the fanatical successor of the late prophet. The territory sought to be reclaimed for Egypt comprises Darfur, Kordofan, Senaar, Taka, the Equatorial province and Bahr-el-Ghazal. It was, until 1882, under Egyptian rule. In that year the revolt of the mahdi made it free. After the mahdi's death one of his lieutenants succeeded, and, with Omdurman as his capital, has since ruled over most of the territory. The khalifa still holds several of the prisoners taken at Khartoum. Last year France was said to have sent an expedition to the Soudan, but nothing has been heard of it.

CONGRESSMAN STEELE.

Sketch of the Statesman Who Is Opposing Gen. Nelson A. Miles.

Congressman George W. Steele, who declares he will prevent congress from conferring the rank of lieutenant general on Gen. Miles, if such action is attempted, represents the Eleventh district of Indiana and has a fine war and army record himself. He is a native of Fayette county, Ind., and was educated in the common schools, and in the Ohio Western university, at Delaware, in that state. He practiced law in Hartford, Ind., until 1861, when he was mustered into the Twelfth Indiana regiment, and the Twelfth Indiana regiment, and served in this and in the One Hundred and First Indiana until the close of the war. He was with the Army of the Potomac and the Army of the Cumberland, and went with Sherman on his march to the sea. When he was mustered out, in 1865, he was lieutenant colonel. He was commissioned and served with the Fourteenth infantry from 1866 to 1876, in the west. He became a farmer and a pork packer. He was elected to the Forty-seventh congress, and was reelected three times. He was defeated for the Fifty-first congress and then went into business as a banker. He was the first governor of Oklahoma, laid out that territory and resigned after serving 20 months. He was elected to the Fifty-fourth congress as a republican. Mr. Steele established the First national bank of Marion, Ind., is the president of the Marion Commercial club, of the Philadelphia Land company and of the Indiana board of commerce. He is also a member of the board of managers of the national home for disabled volunteer soldiers.

No More Kissing in Austria.

It has hitherto been the custom of the children attending the public schools of Austria and Hungary to kiss the hands of the teacher on arrival and departure. This has now been forbidden by an order from the imperial board of education, which bases its action on the fact that sanitary investigation has shown that kissing is unhealthful, and should not be practiced when absolutely unnecessary.

THE BATTLE SHIP IOWA.

Will Be the Most Formidable Craft in Our New Navy.

Over a Thousand Tons Larger Than the Indiana and a Knot Faster—"Tumble Home" Sides a Feature of Its Construction.

About two years and a half ago the keel of the Iowa was laid, and within another year she will be completed and ready to join the North Atlantic squadron. She is now over 1,000 tons greater displacement than the sister ships Indiana, Oregon and Massachusetts, and several feet longer and broader.

One striking peculiarity of the vessel is her "tumble-home" sides, or incurved bulwarks, that makes the French warships so different in appearance from those of other navies. The old Constitution is one of the few ships that have ever been in the American navy with sides of this design. The object was to give a deflective side to shot and in the Iowa the idea carried out is to afford greater rapidity of fire and ease of manipulating the guns in her broadside sponsons. One great military mast with an interior spiral stairway leads to two fighting tops, where rapid fire guns are stationed and accommodations provided for a large number of sharpshooters. Her complement of men will be nearly 500, or greater than that of any preceding warship of the new navy.

The Iowa is constructed under the act of July 19, 1892, when provision was made for one "seagoing battleship of about 9,000 tons displacement," to cost, exclusive of armament and speed premiums, not more than $4,000,000. To Secretary Tracy, assisted by his advisers, Chief Constructor Wilson and Engineer-in-Chief George W. Melville, were left the details. Comparing the Iowa and the Indiana, the difference between their dimensions may be appreciated by the accompanying measurements:

	Indiana.	Iowa.
Length on load water line	348 feet	360 feet
Breadth, extreme	69 feet	73 feet
Displacement, normal draft	10,288 tons	11,296 tons
Mean draft at normal displacement	24 feet	24 feet
Freeboard forward	12 feet	19 feet
Normal coal supply	400 tons	625 tons
Total coal capacity	1,800 tons	2,000 tons
Maximum indicated horse power	9,000	11,000
Speed in knots per hour	15 knots	16 knots
Complement of officers and men	460	485

The comparison shows to the advantage of the new ship 1,100 tons more displacement, an increased length of

FIRST-CLASS BATTLESHIP IOWA.

12 feet, four feet more beam, seven feet four inches more freeboard forward, an increased coal capacity of 200 tons over either the normal or maximum coal supply of the Indiana, 2,000 more collective horse-power, and, as a result, one knot more of speed, together with a corresponding increase of sustained force of propulsion, which latter, rather than high speed, was what saved the English ship Calliope during the Samoan disaster.

The hull will be of steel, with a double bottom and close, watertight subdivision of about ten feet above the water line. The vessel will have one military mast, with fighting tops, but will carry no sail. The water line region of the hull is to be protected by a side belt of 14 inches of maximum thickness, with a main depth of 7½ feet. The transverse armor at the ends of the belt will be not less than 12 inches in thickness, with a main depth of 7½ feet. for the 12-inch guns will have armor not less than 15 inches thick. The ship's sides, from the armor belt to the main deck, will be protected by steel armor five inches thick, and coal is to be carried back of this five-inch casemate armor. An armored deck, not less than three inches thick, is to extend forward and aft from the ends of the armor belt, and over the side armor belt this steel deck will be 2¾ inches thick.

A conning tower, not less than ten inches thick, will have an armored communication tube not less than seven inches thick extending to the armor deck, and affording protection to speaking tubes, bell wires, etc.

The ship's battery is to consist of the following guns: Four 12-inch, eight 8-inch, and six 4-inch breech-loading rifles; twenty 6-pounders, four 1-pounders, four Gatlings, and one field gun.

Briefly, then, the Iowa, compared with the Indiana, has greater length, greater beam, more than 1,000 tons additional displacement, increased length of outer-belt line and greater coal endurance and speed, together with the ability to work the forward 12-inch guns in almost any condition of sea.

There will be six torpedo tubes, one bow, one stern and two on each broadside, one forward and one abaft the beam.

The propelling engines will be rights and lefts, placed in water-tight compartments and separated by a middle-line bulkhead. These engines will be of the vertical, inverted cylinder, direct-acting, triple-expansion type, each with a high-pressure cylinder 39 inches, an intermediate-pressure cylinder 55 inches and a low-pressure cylinder 85 inches in diameter, the stroke of all pistons being 48 inches. The collective indicated horse power of propelling, air pump and circulating pump engines will be 11,000 when the main engines are making about 112.5 revolutions per minute. The high-pressure cylinder of each engine will be forward and the low-pressure cylinder aft.

Chicago Stores Show a Rich Display of Dress Fabrics.

The New Tailor-Made Gown Is a Thing of Beauty as Well as Utility—Novelties in Millinery—Dainty Cycling Gown.

[Special Chicago Letter.]

To the woman who considers it one of the first duties of life to be well and suitably gowned there is no more interesting and more delightful shopping time in all the year than in the spring when the stores first show their new and most fetching styles.

She knows by past experience how unwise it is to wait until a garment is actually needed, and takes time by the forelock, as it were, and selects what will be necessary for late spring and early summer wear before the goods have been picked over and the best styles culled out.

She must needs keep her wits about her, though, for what at first glance might appear the redeeming feature of the situation is really the thing that bewilders most. And that is the variety of designs and materials to choose from. So gorgeous and varied is the array that she need be limited only by individual taste or the length of her purse strings.

The tailor-made gown in all its beauty and elegance of design will be the favorite costume for spring wear, and deservedly so, for nothing can be prettier or more chic than the well made and perfect-fitting tailor gown of this season.

Some of the large importing houses are showing models in this line that for beauty of material and elegance of style and finish have never been equaled. The severely plain tailor gown that was so trying and universally unbecoming is a thing of the past, I am happy to note. And in its stead we have a gown in which much attention is given to trimming and ornamentation, but never to the verge of being elaborate. In short the tailor-made gown of to-day is perfection, nothing less or nothing more.

The skirt of cloth gowns — and I might say the same of many of the new frock and other material—is cut somewhat narrower than any yet seen, with the fullness massed into a very small space in the back, similar to the bell skirt of a past season. The main point of beauty in this new skirt, and one never lost sight of by the experienced modiste, is to have it well cut and well hung even when made of inexpensive material. Indeed, the expense of the new gown seems to be solely in the cut and finish, for in some of the most costly ones the material used is remarkably cheap.

Black and white in combination seems to have lost none of its popularity with the fashion makers. Many of the handsomest gowns hailing from Paris are in this rather old yet pleasing combination. For instance, a handsome tailor-gown with chic and French written in every seam, was made of smooth-faced cloth in somber black. The jaunty little coat opened over a waistcoat of cream-tinted broadcloth. Black and cream white mixed braid was used most tellingly on the white vest and flaring cuffs of the coat.

Another one, in black and white material, had the short jacket faced back with black velvet with an embroidered shirt of white finished at the neck by a narrow black silk cravat.

Many of the new gowns boast a cravat of black or white, and the neck bands are elaborately frilled round the back. And it is in the waistcoat and the little finishing touches at the neck whereby the true artist in dress proclaims herself.

The actual style of a gown is easily copied by anyone, but to put just the right piece of lace in the most telling manner, to have the cravat tied in the proper way, and the knot of ribbon made to assume the proper position, are little tricks of taste understood by few.

In color or material for spring toilettes no particular one is paramount, unless perhaps I except blue alpaca in a rich, dark tone. It is favored alike by both home and foreign dressmakers and promises to reign supreme before the end of the season.

A stylish costume in this particular shade and material showed a distinctly novel mode of trimming. Every seam at the back of the waist was striped with jet embroidery which revealed a lining of tan-colored velvet. The fronts were decorated to match and partly cut away above the bust, showing a yoke of chiffon over which frills of black lace fell softly.

The sleeves were smaller than any I have seen, made to fall over the hands and utterly devoid of trimming save a very small puff at the elbow.

Of the change in the size of sleeves there is no longer any doubt. The knell of the large sleeve is surely sounded, and the one minus puffs, frills and furbelows is to reign in its stead. Fashion as represented in Paris has spoken the word and our sleeves, by the time summer is here, will be guiltless of fullness and as uncompromisingly plain as they were seven or eight seasons ago. It is really a social calamity, from my point of view, and I am sure many other women think the same, for whereas full sleeves in moderation were becoming to every figure the plain sleeve is to very few. But such abject slaves are we all to Dame Fashion that if she so decrees in three months' time the feminine world will swear by the plain sleeve.

The jackets this spring are exceedingly smart and fetching, and to the majority of women will prove almost irresistible. Fortunately they come in several different styles, so that stout and slender women can select just what is most becoming to their respective figures and still be in the fashion.

They are a trifle shorter than those worn last season and have very little, if any, fullness in the back. The coat with sack-back, while not exactly new, has still enough of the air of novelty to justify its popularity.

Some of the new capes are wonderfully pretty, and are enough to bankrupt the most resolute woman. They are far more dressy than those worn in the autumn and the prettiest, but not the most costly, are made of grenadine over a handsome colored silken lining. The most expensive models come made up in richest velvet and are entirely covered with exceedingly fine silk braid and invariably lined with white or pale tinted lining.

As this braiding is all supposed to be put on by hand it represents a vast amount of time, skill and labor, and the braiders ought to be making a fortune this year.

One thing is assured about our coming head-gear. It will be as bright, if not brighter than last season, but the color combinations, while daring, will not be crude.

Loose fancy braids and the new horsehair trimming seem to be the things for foundations. The millinery world is fairly going mad over tulle as a trimming, and every hat almost boasts three or more large rosettes of black or white tulle. It is used extensively for entire hats and bonnets—one love of a bonnet in particular being made of it, and its sole trimming consisting of a bunch of Parma violets placed cunningly at the side under a snow-white osprey. It was an adorable creation which might best be described as quietly chic.

The popularity of the poke bonnet is assured, and many are the Easter bonnets ordered in this novel shape. With its broad, projecting brim softly lined with lace and pretty flower face trimming it will prove a most bewitching frame to many youthful faces.

Green is much liked for millinery, and a charming hat I saw yesterday in this color might be called a study in green. It was a dark shot green straw covered with a variety of greenish brown flowers, with rosettes of pale green tulle on either side. At the back was an upstanding spray of leaves, held in place by a bunch of pale green roses.

With the first warm days of spring comes the desire to many women to exploit their cycling abilities; and, en passant, how truly awful, not to say disgusting, some of them look on wheels. The suitability, one might well say decency, of dress is not considered at all, and half an hour in any of the parks during the wheelwoman's parade—or exhibition—is enough to disgust any masculine creature, and has in itself done more to bring cycling for woman into ill-repute than anything else.

Many women would like to enjoy the pleasures of the wheel, but dare not venture forth in any of the so-called cycling costumes.

I think the one in the picture meets the requirements of the perfect wheeling dress, namely, genteel appearance and appropriateness.

It will not find favor in the eyes of the bloomer girl, although bloomers are worn under the plain, neat-fitting brown cloth skirt. KATE GARDNER.

MARQUETTE STATUE.

A Work of Art Which Has Caused Considerable Ill Feeling.

Wisconsin's statue of Pere Marquette, the French explorer and Jesuit priest, stands in Statuary hall in the capitol at Washington with no definite date set for its unveiling. The ceremony was to have been performed on February 29, but was then postponed and no other day has been fixed upon. The cause of this uncertainty and delay is the opposition raised by the American Protective association and other anti-Catholic interests as expressed in the resolutions of Congressman Linton, of Michigan, introduced recently in the house of representatives.

STATUE OF PERE MARQUETTE.

The statue is offered to the United States by Wisconsin under the law which permits each state to place a statue of one of its citizens in Statuary hall. For years Wisconsin's legislature had been trying to honor some one of its most distinguished citizens by taking advantage of this privilege and placing his statue in the national capitol, but was unable to agree upon anyone to be so honored until Father Marquette was proposed by George C. Ginty, then, in 1887, a state senator. The Catholic interests in the state at once gave the project their strongest support and raised the greater part of the $8,000 the statue has cost. The legislature of Wisconsin took the necessary official action and, in 1894, Gov. Peck made a contract with Trentanove to design and make the statue.

But Congressman Linton declares that the law which gives to the separate states of the union the privilege of erecting statues in Statuary hall provides that the statues shall be those of citizens of the states erecting them, who shall have performed civic or military service entitling them to distinction. Pere Marquette, he further says, was a Frenchman and not a citizen of Wisconsin or any other state of this union. However, the statue was accepted on behalf of the United States by a joint resolution passed in special session of the Fifty-third congress. Then Congressman Linton, as spokesman for the opposition, declares that the statue represents Marquette wholly in the character of a priest, and therefore does not conform to the intent of the resolution providing for its acceptance, and that it now occupies a place in Statuary hall in violation of the law. Mr. Linton's resolution, embodying this declaration and this claim, was referred to committee and cannot be brought before the house until he is recognized by the speaker.

GREAT CHESS CONTEST.

International Match, Played by Cable, Won by the Americans.

One more international triumph was added to America's long list March 14, when the gallant team of eight chess experts successfully upheld the country's honor on the checkered board and wrestled from the Britons the INTERNATIONAL CHESS TROPHY.

$800 trophy offered by Sir George Newnes, of London, by a score of 4½ to 3½.

The Yankees downed their British rivals after the most stubborn team chess match on record, every inch of the ground being fiercely contested. Wild excitement prevailed when the final score of 4½ games for the Americans and 3½ games for the British was announced. When play started it looked as though the British players would come out successful, but as the play advanced the Americans gained wonderfully and managed to win out. Following is the final score:

There is more catarrh in this section of the country than all other diseases put together, and until the last few years was supposed to be incurable. For a great many years doctors pronounced it a local disease, and prescribed local remedies, and by continually failing to cure with local treatment, pronounced it incurable. Science has proven catarrh to be a constitutional disease and therefore requires constitutional treatment. Hall's Catarrh Cure, manufactured by F. J. Cheney & Co., Toledo, Ohio, is the only constitutional cure on the market. It is taken internally in doses from 10 drops to a teaspoonful. It acts directly on the blood and mucous surfaces of the system. They offer one hundred dollars for any case it fails to cure. Send for circulars and testimonials. Address F. J. ABSOLUTELY PURE

AN EXQUISITE EXHIBITION.

A Number of Novel and Most Delightful Performances.

Barnum & Bailey Greatest Show on Earth is truly aesthetic. Style and tone are evidenced in every direction. No carelessness is visible anywhere; on the contrary, everything is done and everybody is dressed just the same as if they were members of the grand opera. In a word, the dressing of the show may be called perfect, and in bright and singular contrast to that of all others. In the matter of discipline one sees it in this show at its best, and, although rigid and strictly enforced, it is done quietly and effectively, and is never disobeyed. In the way of performances it stands equally as much alone. Every year the additions and improvements are of the most extensive, novel, and meritorious kind, and this year are better and grander than ever. There is a most wonderful performance in three rings, and a most varied and stupendously grand aerial display by no less than 50 of the greatest experts, and an equal number of male and female jockeys are seen upon the race track in desperate struggles. Three elevated stages are constantly occupied by an army of acrobats, who are succeeded again by the three circus companies in a spirited exhibition of somersaulting and leaping. Seven open dens of performing wild beasts, three herds of educated elephants, two droves of camels, the clown elephant, and many others all give evidence of having received the best instructions possible, and show their accomplishments at various times, all of which goes to make portions of the grand, general performance. When the odd and curious sights of the Midway and menageries are added, with the giant and pigmy creatures also, it ceases to be longer a wonder that this show captures the hearts of all classes. It is truly a most wonderful institution. All this will be here in its entirety on May 6th.

Mr. Wayne is a finished actor, and is well supported by his wife, the leading lady. Frank Bouman and Rosa Adelle gave a musical specialty which was well encored. BUD MADE UP THE FEUD.

A Touching Story of the Tennessee Mountains.

THOUGH Bud Prock had been in bed for several hours, he had scarcely slept at all. Midnight having passed, he was roused by a heavy tread in the next room and the sound of his father's voice.

"To-morrow night is the time," he heard his father say. "We must do the the job then. There'll be nobody there but Rube and his mother, and, mabbe, that there parson. I tell ye, Burge Spillman, it was Rabe Hawkins as had the reveno cut up my still three weeks ago. It was him and the rest as run your son off to the nation last winter, on charge of that shootin' scrape he got into down on Smoky Run. Now is a good time for us to get even."

"That young preacher you speak of and the Hawkinses are some kin, I reckon," remarked Burge Spillman. "Hit minds me, too, as he and your Bud seem to be master thick. I've seen them together more'n once. They was at the Borum gap to-day."

"Long with that Parson Sneed, was he? I'll wear him out if I hear any more such tales. I believe I'll wear him out anyhow."

At this point Bud became so agitated he knocked over an ox yoke that was leaning against the wall. Then Bud heard his father rise, open the door and approach the bed.

"Was you a-listenin'?"

"I couldn't hardly help it, when you talked so loud," returned Bud, whose fears would hardly carry him to the point of a downright lie. "Besides, I ain't deaf."

"Well, then, you've heard, and I reckon you know. But you 'tend to what I say." John Prock struck the table until the glasses on it rattled. "If I hear of you cheepin' a word to anyone—anyone, I say!—I'll wear the very hide off'n ye. D'ye hear?

"Hold up your head and look at me! Don't you be seen 'long with that Preacher Sneed no more. I'll baste you for that if it happens agin."

"You know I wish you well, father," he said. "I've nobody else to care for since mother was put away. But I wish you would give up this thing, father. You and them Hawkins' have been a-jowering for months. What good do it do?"

"What thing? Is the boy crazy?" Prock gazed at Spillman in simulated surprise.

"You know what, father." Bud hesitated, for he had heard nothing explicit.

"Listen at the little fool! He'll be makin' out next that his pap wants to kill somebody. Look here, Bud. You get to bed, and quit botherin' your head. I reckon I know what I'm about."

Bud had neither brothers nor sisters. Since his mother's death, owing to his lameness and sensitive temperament, he became a creature of retiring habits, having no intimates, and but few associates.

The morning following the events just related, John Prock shouldered his rifle and left the house with scarcely a word for Bud, who, growing lonely, wandered off into the woods later on.

Ought he to warn some one against something? Or was he in honor bound to hold his tongue? He was still debating the question in his mind, rather aimlessly, when the crack of a rifle was followed by the appearance of a gentle-faced, slender young man, carrying several dead squirrels and a gun on his shoulder.

"Why, Bud," said Parson Sneed, "I hardly expected to see you so far from home to-day."

Yet the boy held his peace, and after a time the young man strolled off. Bud, still undecided and more vaguely distressed than ever, dreaded to go home. He wandered yet farther away, until at sundown he was considerably nearer the Hawkins cabin than his own.

THE DOOR WAS BURST OPEN.

Instead of turning homeward, he lay down at a point where, through the gathering darkness, he could see the firelight within the open door of the Hawkins house. The road leading from his own home passed through the glen just below his position.

The stars came out and the night wind sighed gently. A new fear came over the lad. Perhaps his father might suspect, from Bud's prolonged absence, that the boy was up to "some mischief." Yet he waited on wearily.

As the moon rose higher it whitened the trail for a long distance. Looking down this he noticed a cluster of dark objects moving round a shoulder of a ridge in the direction of his own home.

The Hawkinses were his family enemies, yet Parson Sneed, his friend, was with them. The boy's sensitive heart revolted from the thought of violence and bloodshed.

He had nearly a mile the start of those crawling objects, and but half a mile to go in order to reach Hawkins' cabin. He scrambled down into the road and hastened onward with a vigor of which he would not have been capable in calmer moments.

Inside the Hawkins' house were Rabe Hawkins, his mother, the young divinity student and two half-grown girls, Rabe's sisters. Bud Prock entered, his thin face drawn and pale, and his usually sad eyes filled with a strange, eager light. Fixing his gaze on Mr. Sneed, he exclaimed:

"They're a comin' up the road, parson. They've got their guns, too. I wanted to give you warning to-day, but, somehow, I couldn't get the words out."

Rabe seemed to understand at once. He took down his rifle and produced a couple of revolvers from a bureau drawer, one of which he offered to Sneed, who refused it with a shake of the head, as he led Bud to the fire.

A sound of rapidly-approaching footsteps was now audible on both sides of the cabin. Then a door was violently burst open. In rushed John Prock, accompanied by three other men, one of whom was Burge Spillman.

The sight of Hawkins armed and apparently expecting an attack appeared to take them by surprise. Prock noticed Bud at the side of Mr. Sneed.

"I'll remember you for this, Bud, when we get back home," he said, in a fierce, grating tone that indicated volumes to the lad.

He threw up his rifle suddenly, but the young parson placed himself boldly before Rabe, who had also cocked his own weapon.

"Stranger," said Prock, "it's a good plan not to meddle in other people's consarns. But if you're for Hawkins, say the word."

"Father!" exclaimed Bud, hobbling forward and grasping his parent's arm boldly, "before you do harm to that man, take a good look at him. See if you ain't seen him somew here else. Have you fur got the log camp down at Grip's gorge, father?" urged Bud. "Father—you must not—I—I—you—"

"WHAT'S THE MATTER WITH THE KID, ANYWAY?"

"What!" at last Prock exclaimed, staring at Sneed. "It can't be him. Yes—seems like you favor him powerful."

"Right you are, Mr. Prock. I am the man who nursed you when you had the smallpox that winter. I should have made myself known to you before, but for the unfortunate state of feeling between you and my Cousin Rabe here."

Prock, who had been gulping down his amazement as if a lump were sticking in his throat, turned to his followers excitedly.

"The feller's right," said he. "I owe my life to him, I reckon. He stood by me in camp, when every one else as knowed me run. If he says quit, our job is over for to-night, boys. That's all I've got to say."

"Father," pleaded Bud, "shake hands with Mr. Sneed and Rabe."

"Here you are again!" shouted Prock, not sorry to find some object on which to vent his baffled wrath. "Always a puttin' in your oar!"

He shook his son roughly and pushed him away.

Next morning Bud did not rise as usual to prepare the breakfast after the father had made the fire. Prock called him, but, receiving no reply, went into Bud's room and shook the boy, whose flesh felt cold.

Prock bent down. Bud's eyes were half closed and the pupils set unnaturally. His thin face looked wan and death-like.

"Wake up, Bud. What's the matter with the kid, anyhow?"

All at once it dawned upon him that Bud might be dying. He rushed into the other room and roused Spillman, who had remained there that night.

"Run!" he exclaimed. "Fetch somebody. Tell the neighbors to run over. Hurry! Don't you see Bud's dyin'?"

Spillman left the house at a run. John Prock gathered his son's light figure in his arms and rocked to and fro. A vivid consciousness of his own brutal neglect and Bud's truthfulness and affection had come over his hard nature.

Minutes that seemed like hours passed before Spillman came back with Parson Sneed and Rabe Hawkins, whom he had met, and, in his anxiety, had persuaded to accompany him back.

Sneed examined Bud carefully and pronunced him to be seriously though not dangerously ill. Hawkins surveyed his old enemy with gradually softening features.

At last Bud's respirations grew easy and regular. His lips lost their death-like hue, his skin grew warm, and finally his eyes opened. When he saw Hawkins and his father both bending over him anxiously, he made a feeble movement as if to join their hands.

The two men divining Bud's meaning looked at each other, then Prock suddenly reached forth his hand.

"Let's shake, Rabe," said he. "I've just found out what a son is, by seein' Bud in this here fix. If Bud wants me to be friends with you I'm willin' now. And more'n that I'll get down on my knees to prove it, if necessary."

And, thus peace was permanently made.—William Perry Brown, in Boston Globe.

MR. GLADSTONE AT WORK.

A Busy Man with a Passion for Saving the Minutes.

Three writing tables stand in the Hawarden castle library, and not one of them is for show. At one table Mrs. Gladstone writes many of her letters; the second, standing between two windows, is Mr. Gladstone's political desk. It looks now too neat, too tidy, by far, for the taste of any Gladstonian politician; the blotting pad has an unused air about it; the pen-wipers, racks, knives and other appurtenances stand about with a mathematical precision which means want of use, and there is neither note nor leaflet to be seen. The political desk, at all events for the present, must be numbered among the unemployed. But turn to the third, the literary writing table in the niche by the window, which is the most peaceful corner in that place of peace. You may there at any time during the day see a sight that will make your heart rejoice, and that will linger in your mind while pictures linger there at all.

The whole desk is covered with reference books of all shapes and sizes. They form a wall around three sides, and there is only an opening in the front of the desk just wide enough to allow Mr. Gladstone to place the sheets of foolscap on which he writes. There at this desk the G. O. M. sat lately all day long, with very short intervals, absorbed in "Bishop Butler," the man whom he gives a place among the best of men who have ever lived. The number of volumes required by Mr. Gladstone for reference is almost endless; he has often to search through one bulky tome after the other for some chance paragraph that may help him to elucidate a dark place in the "Analogy." There he sits, absorbed in his work; now writing rapidly and eagerly for some minutes; now throwing down his pen and dipping into one of the books with which he has surrounded himself. Sometimes a specially favored artist has been admitted to take Mr. Gladstone's portrait, but it is on express condition that the "sitter" shall not in any way be distracted from his work. Not once does Mr. Gladstone's attention flag, though you may perchance be sauntering about the room in company with a member of his family, or be privileged to have a chat with Mrs. Gladstone as, in loving pride in all her husband's doings, she points out to you this, that or the other of the objects in the library to which attaches a special interest for him. Not that Mr. Gladstone is altogether indifferent to violent interruptions. In fact, he objects to them strongly, and he does not hesitate to say so. But when it happens that he himself has invited you to "come into my room," he forgive you if you appear while he is at work, and works on, undisturbed by your presence or your voice, with an absorption in his occupation which is nothing short of marvelous. Whatever the work may be which he has in hand, it takes hold of him so entirely that he has to be aroused from it as most people are roused from sleep. Mr. Gladstone does not, as a rule, care to talk of his idiosyncrasies, since he holds the sincere opinion that he is very much like the rest of the world. But he acknowledges that his faculty of concentration is his special gift, the one by which he is distinguished from other people.

Another reason why Mr. Gladstone gets through so astounding an amount of work is his extraordinary habit of using up odds and ends of time. One day, not long ago, he was going out for a drive into Chester after luncheon. His pudding was very hot, so he went away from the table, changed his clothes, got ready for the drive and came back and finished his pudding, thus saving the ten minutes during which his pudding cooled!

From ten a. m. to luncheon time Mr. Gladstone spends regularly in the library, hard at work. But when the gong sounds he puts down his pen, for promptness in everything has become a second nature to him, and he is probably in the dining-room before anyone else arrives. Petz alone, if that little creature can arrange it so, is as prompt as his master, for his two ruling passions—love for his master and love for his dinner—come into play at the sound of the luncheon gong. — Westminster Gazette.

AN ABSENT-MINDED MAN.

Why He Thought His Sandwich Was Dry and Tasteless.

The absent-minded man took his seat at the restaurant table, and, as usual, buried his face at once in a newspaper. A waiter placed a bill-of-fare, a napkin and a knife and fork in front of him and stood two or three minutes unnoticed before asking:

"What shall I bring you, sir?"

"What's that?" said the absent-minded man, starting up suddenly, not remembering what it was all about.

"What do you want for lunch, sir?" the waiter asked again.

"Oh! yes," said the absent-minded, trying to collect his wits. "Bring me a cup of coffee and a ham sandwich."

The waiter supplied the order and put a large pasteboard check for it down on the table, the absent-minded man continuing to read his paper. The waiter went away to attend to the wants of other people, and about 15 minutes later came back.

"Do you wish anything more?" he asked, politely.

"Yes," snapped the absent-minded man, somewhat viciously. "Go and get me a fresh ham sandwich. The one you brought me was as dry as a bone."

"Why, here is the sandwich I brought, sir," said the waiter, pushing the plate toward him. "You've eaten the check."—Chicago Times-Herald.

Advice about the Treatment of Coughs and Colds.

Constitutional Treatment to Prevent the Recurrence of These Dangerous Ailments.

A person may be very wealthy and yet not be inclined to give away any of his property. Lawyers who have great knowledge of the law are not noted for giving service for nothing. Physicians are known to be generous to the poor, yet they will not serve everybody free. Even the wealthy railroad companies, who could so easily and quickly carry us to our distant friends, will not do so without first receiving our dollars and cents. But there is one thing everybody has and everybody is anxious to give some of it to everybody else. We mean, advice. It is so cheap, and we never miss what we give away. Therefore, we follow the custom and give you some advice.

Do not neglect your cold. You may need no medicine for it, but do not neglect it. When first taken, try and break it up. Take a hot foot-bath; drink a bowl full of hot lemonade or ginger tea, get into bed, cover up well, and let the body perspire. Be very careful the next day. If the cold hangs on, or if one cold quickly follows another, then something more is needed. Constitutional treatment is necessary. This is especially true if your health is frail, or if there is a tendency to weak lungs in the family. Sore throats and colds inflame the delicate membrane which lines the throat, and which continues directly down into the bronchial tubes and lungs. One attack predisposes to another, and a slight attack invites another more serious. The best preventive to serious lung affections is to keep all the air passages in a healthy condition. Therefore, do not neglect an acute cough or cold. This is our advice, which is given freely.

But it will cost you fifty cents to procure a small bottle, and one dollar for a large bottle, of the remedy we recommend, which is Scott's Emulsion of Cod-liver Oil and Hypophosphites. It cures acute attacks, and thus prevents chronic ones. It builds up the tissues, invigorates the nervous system, and prepares the body to resist disease. The system only needs some such aid at the right time in order to completely master the germs of consumption, preventing them gaining a firm foothold in the lungs. One bottle taken in season will often accomplish as much as five bottles taken later.

Scott's Emulsion has been indorsed by the medical profession for twenty years. Ask your doctor. Because it is always palatable—always uniform—always contains the purest Norwegian Cod-liver Oil and Hypophosphites. Insist on Scott's Emulsion with trade-mark of man and fish. Put up in 50c. and $1.00 sizes. The small size may be enough to cure your cough or help your baby.

AN IVORY SCREEN.

How It Helped a Young New York Man to Secure a Wife.

NOTHING could have been more exquisite than the last bit of bric-a-brac that Mr. Frederick Madson had added to his choice collection.

It was a carved ivory screen, not more than nineteen inches high, but so beautifully done, so Thorwaldsen-like in its grace of design, that one might fall on one's knees in worship of it, as a thing divine.

"To think that it had been in that shop window for two weeks and I never noticed it, though passing every day! To think that there are human hands so skillful that they can cut this dream from a flat surface! To think that poverty can be so pressing that the carver does this miracle and parts with it for a song!" And he rose from his knees as erect as his own exclamation marks, still admiring it, still adoring it like one charmed.

"Frederick," said a gentle voice behind him, "aren't you ever coming to dinner? The bell has rung twice."

"Yes, mother, I'm coming," he laughingly answered, "if I can get away from it. Did you ever see anything lovelier as the light shines through it and brings out a whole gamut of cream tints from the deepest to the palest?"

"It is very beautiful," said his mother, bending over it. "See, here is a name—'Marie, Roma.' Isn't that unusual on work of this kind?"

"'Work of this kind?'" repeated Frederick; "but who ever sees work of this kind? I wonder if it can be a woman who did it? 'Marie!' That sounds feminine enough."

"I have known people in France whose last name was Marie," his mother rejoined, "but still it may be a woman, you know. Come now to dinner, and decide that afterward."

Frederick obeyed, but all the time at dinner and after dinner, "Marie, Roma" rang in his ears. Can she be a woman? If so, she must be a lovely one and a poor one; no ugly peasant, but a dainty lady must have carved that charm, and she must be sorely in need of money, or how could she have ever parted with such dreamland loveliness!

"What are you thinking of?" said his mother, good-naturedly, sitting near him in the library, some fancy work in hand.

"I? Ah! Oh! I was thinking I would go up to old Preston and ask him if he knows anything of this Marie, Roma."

His mother laughed.

"How in love with it you are," she said.

"Yes—no; that is, I might be able to order a special companion piece if I knew the carver's address;" and he went out into the hall for his overcoat and hat.

"I wish the dear boy had a special companion-piece," whispered his mother to herself, as she heard the front door close after him. "I am such a poor, old, fragile piece of bric-a-brac for his fireside;" and she moved farther back from the hot fireplace.

Frederick walked rapidly, coming to the shop where he had bought the screen quite out of breath. Then he pulled himself together and entered in his usual state of dignity.

"You remember the carved ivory screen I bought here early this afternoon?" he said.

"Oh, most certainly," said the shopkeeper, bowing and rubbing his hands heartily. "A most beautiful thing, sir."

"Have you anything more by the same hand?"

The shopkeeper shut one eye and pursed his lips as if reflecting deeply, then said, slowly:

"I am sorry we have not. To tell you the truth, a bit of pure art like that is very rare. Still, if anything more comes of that kind I will let you know."

"I observed," said Frederick, taking up the conversation, much to the surprise of the little shopkeeper, who had thought it finished, "that in one corner there was 'Marie, Roma.' Do you know anything of that signature?"

"Oh! Most certainly! The piece was from Rome," he answered; "but 'Marie!' No, I do not know that. Perhaps the wrapper it came in would be some aid. Did you notice it, sir?"

"No, I did not," said Frederick, as if ready to take himself to task for a complete stupid. "I will look it up. Thank you." And he hurried out of the shop just as the next customer entered.

Once more in his library, he fumbled in the waste-paper basket till the screen-wrappings came to light. Yes, there was the importer's address, as clear as a crystal, on the quadrangular bit of blue paper in one corner: "C. R. Pallatino, — —, Roma. Importer of Fancy Goods." This last in plain English.

"C. R. Pallatino, — —, Roma," must disclose the full address of "Marie, Roma."

It was an easy thing for this wealthy young bachelor to leave his home to his mother and make one of his quick trips to Europe. Nobody questioned; nobody commented, and everybody wished they could do the same. Three weeks later and Frederick was in Rome, threading one of its dark, obsolete little byways and looking up the address of "C. B. Pallatino, —, —," with warm, tired ardor, because for an hour it had eluded him.

There it was at last! The name clearly above the brown, weather-worn door, and a crooked and twisted flight of stairs by which to reach it. Very rapidly Frederick climbed them, paid no attention to the "No admission" sign, and tapping quickly, walked into an ill lighted, rubbish-loaded room, in which a dark, crisp Italian was packing odds and ends of art work for importation to America. He looked keenly up at Frederick, as if he were an intruder.

Frederick nodded to him, and made a quick inquiry in Italian.

"Ya-as, ya-as, I know what you mean," the importer answered, in excellent English. "It was a ivory screen, most delicate, most bootiful, sent to Meester Preston, — street, New York. Oh, ya-as, the name on it was, as you say: 'Marie, Roma,'" and he leaned again over his packing as if cutting short the interruption.

"Will you kindly give me the full address?" Frederick continued, with a little assumption of command.

"You wish to obtain more of her work. I am the agent. You must deal directly with me," and the Italian straightened from his bending position, brushing bits of the packing from his sleeves. "I regret me much that I have not one thing of hers to offer you."

"She!" "Hers!"

Frederick caught at the pronouns with a gasp of satisfaction as he replied:

"I have no intention of purchasing directly from the carver, but wish, as long as I am so near, to see the author of this rare work."

The importer smiled shrewdly.

"You can assure me that you are no dealer or importer in this line like myself?"

"Most assuredly," answered Frederick, with considerable scorn in his voice.

"And that you will buy the signorina's work from me and not from her?"

"I think I said so once," Frederick responded, making a note of the importer's "signorina."

"Ah, well, it can do no harm, though the signorina is incapacited from work by an accident to her right hand several weeks ago. Here, Antonio!" And he motioned to a little dark boy dusting vases in a corner, where he had escaped Frederick's notice. "Here, Antonio, I say, take this gentleman to the signorina's, and don't be long about it."

Antonio was instantly at the stair-door, beckoning Frederick to follow him into the by-alley.

Placing a fat coin within the importer's easy reach, Frederick hastened after his small guide, turning up and down a labyrinth of footways till they came out upon a street in front of an old palazzo that must have been doing its best to decay and crumble away for the last hundred years. Antonio raised the knocker, held out his dusky palm for his fee, then clattered away as if an unseen taskmaster were after him with a whip.

The door was opened by a neat serving-woman, who admitted Frederick without a question, and carried his card to a fair, blonde young woman in the adjoining room.

There was a suppressed sound of surprise, a slight rustle of draperies, and Frederick looked up to find himself in the presence of, not a dark, madonna-faced Italianess, but a sweet little bobolink of a woman, who two seasons before had been the belle of the set he had gone out with in New York.

"Marie Furgerson!" he exclaimed.

"Frederick Madson!" she cried, holding out her left hand to him, for the right one was in bandages.

"Explain," he said.

"Tell me," she said, in turn; "have you come to take me home?"

"I—oh—" he stammered, unable to be connective. "I don't think I understand. Is it you that carved that beautiful screen?"

"Yes many of them," she nodded. "They are what nurse and I live on, now that mamma is dead, and the money all gone."

"All gone?" he asked, for when he had known her there had been so much.

"Yes. Papa lost it all, but I did not mind as long as I could cut ivories; that is such lovely work! A dear old Italian showed me how and lent me his patterns; but now my right hand is injured. I ran a sharp instrument into it, and as I can't work, I cabled to my New York friends that I would come home, so I fancied just in my surprise that perhaps they had sent you to see to my going home; but, then, I am forgetting that it would not be correct, as neither of us is married."

"But we might be," he interposed, recalling the time that Marie Ferguson had seemed all the world to him, till he heard of her engagement to a man he so honestly disliked that he had tried hard to forget both.

"I was never engaged to Richard Hart," she said, a little resentfully, as if reading his thoughts. "He never was the man I most cared for."

"Who was?" he asked, drawing nearer.

She hung her head with a Scotch daisy flush.

"Bless the boy!" said Frederick's mother, when he cabled his marriage and date of return. "I remember, now, he always liked Marie Furgerson!"

"Yes, yes! The Americano! He must have everything, even the fair signorina! Where get I my screens so cheap and so good as of her?" And he mapped his teeth under his thick mustache.—M. Carrie Hyde, in N. Y. Ledger.

SCHOOL AND CHURCH.

—According to the latest school census in New York 70,000 fewer children were in attendance at the schools than a year ago.

—Mgr. Agostino Caprara, the advocate of the devil, has just died at Rome. The duty of the advocatus diaboli is to present the objections to the canonization of any person proposed as a new saint and to cast doubts on his miracles, while the advocatus Dei takes the other side.

—Rev. Dr. Jacob Cooper, professor of logic in Rutgers college, is to be Mr. Gladstone's American editor, or, rather, editor in America. Dr. Cooper suggested the Butler book to Mr. Gladstone and has revised numerous articles written by the grand old man.

—There were 114,439 fewer children being educated in French primary schools than there were five years ago, according to the last report of the minister of public instruction, while in the five years the number of pupils in the schools of the Christian Brothers nearly doubled. The Brothers are now teaching 1,365,886 children, with no aid from the government.

—Rev. John Watson, M. A., minister of Sefton Park Presbyterian church, Liverpool, more widely known as "Ian Maclaren," has received from the University of St. Andrews the degree of doctor of divinity. "The most ancient university," as the late Lord Selborne once said, "in a land whose citizens are distinguished in every sphere in which distinction can be gained," has a happy way of anticipating the larger degree-granting institutions in its recognition of merit.

—The "Costers' Parson" is dead. It is not too much to say that more than any other Christian worker of recent times Rev. A. B. Goulden succeeded in breaking down the barrier of sullen reserve that those who labor among the London poor have found so difficult to overcome. He won first the confidence and then the affections of an almost unapproachable class, and the Church of St. Alphege, in Southwark, became the temple of the most thoroughly working-class congregation in London.

—An "experience social" was held by the young women of the Methodist church in Coldwater, Mich., recently, in which the usual conditions of things was reversed, because the young women were paid for the experience they acquired, instead of themselves paying steeply for the privilege of getting it. They shined shoes, tended babies, split kindling wood, and one or two shaved and cut the hair of a few fearless men who attended the social.

STEAL INVENTIONS.

Pirates in the World of Discovery Who Thrive Upon Stolen Ideas.

As Thomas A. Edison watched the pumping of air from a glass tube in his laboratory a day or two ago a man said to him:

"You patent every little thing you discover, don't you, Mr. Edison?"

"I do," said Mr. Edison. "And do you know why I do it?"

"I suppose you do it so you will reap the benefit of your discovery," was the reply.

"I thought you'd say that," said Mr. Edison; "and I don't suppose you will believe me when I tell you it isn't so. But it isn't so, nevertheless. I discover a great many things that I would be very glad to give to the public for nothing, but I don't dare. I patent these things to save myself from defending lawsuits. There are a lot of sharks in this world who are continually on the lookout for new things, and when one of them hears of something new he hustles to the patent office to see if it is patented. If it isn't he claims it as an original discovery and files his claim. Then he will turn right around and, like as not, begin suit against the very man who invented the things for making or using it. The inventor will say: 'But I discovered this thing first; I am the inventor.' He is referred to the patent office, where he finds the official claim of original invention. The fact that the papers are filed long after he made his discovery does not help him, for all the other man does is to hire a fellow to swear that he made the discovery a month or two prior to the date the inventor claims. It sounds ridiculous, probaly, but it is a fact, that there are often races between the inventors and these sharks to reach the patent office, the sharks having had early information about the inventor's discovery. There are many such races, and thousands of dollars depend on each one. What I say is literally true. I patent things, and no doubt, many other inventors patent things, just to save defending lawsuits."—N. Y. Sun.

A Touchy Ruler.

Emperor William is something of a tartar when it comes to himself being discussed. Lese majesty in Germany is a curious thing. A man in Cologne last fall was discussing the American constitution. He had just returned from America and was eloquent in our praise. Then going on to discuss the kaiser, he began: "As for the kaiser—," and stopped, realizing his danger. But he was overheard and denounced to the police, arrested, tried and sentenced to three months' imprisonment for what he was evidently going to say. At Danzig a man was called upon to appraise a plaster bust of the empress. He said the bust was not worth a mark. He shared the fate of the first individual. Last summer at Bonn a man in a pleasure party said: "What a fool that kaiser is!" He was arrested and taken to the police station, but was able to prove that he had been speaking of a man named Kaiser instead of the emperor. A common mode of concealing their views from servants, who are perhaps spies, is for persons when talking of the kaiser to call him Herr Muller. Speech was freer under Louis the Great in France 200 years ago than in Germany to-day under William.—Chicago News.

SPORTS

CYCLING COMMENT.

The Williamsburg Wheelmen will run to this city on May 24th.

Wm. Cook, of Duer street, has purchased a handsome new wheel.

The I. O. S., of Westfield, have a run to Plainfield this afternoon.

The Manhasset Cyclers, of Brooklyn, will leave their club house on Clinton street tomorrow for a run to Plainfield.

Will Kitchen, George Saunders and several of their friends are planning a bicycle ride to Philadelphia for Decoration Day morning.

It is said that J. S. Johnson may return from abroad in time to take part in the national championships at Louisville during August.

The F. L. C. Marlin Cycle Company received a '96 combination Cleveland tandem this morning, which has been purchased by Charles J. Fisk.

Plainfield will be visited tomorrow by the Manhasset Cyclers, of Brooklyn, on their club run. The party will leave the club house at 396 Clinton street at 8:15 a. m., in charge of Capt. Farrel F. Cowley.

The racing team of the Clio Wheelmen, of Jersey City, consists of Walter Roome, Harry Rohfs, Frank Kuhl and Charles Heebers. The team will probably train on the old Guttenburg race track, and it is the intention of the club to hold several meets there this season.

Robert G. Ingersoll, the talented agnostic, is one of the latest converts to wheeling. His conversion to this has been easy, while his conversion to Christianity has been laborious and fruitless. However, the stately lecturer, now that he has a racer, can prepare for scorching. —The American Wheelman.

Monte Scott, Plainfield's old favorite, is now training for the Irvington-Millburn road race on Decoration Day and expects to contest. Scott is still at his home in Providence. Although the handicaps are not yet announced for the big race, it is very probable that Scott will be one of those to start from scratch.

A. B. Barnett, of the Jersey Wheel Company's racing team, stated positively to a Press reporter that, despite all reports to the contrary, he will not ride in the Irvington-Millburn road race on Decoration Day. He will confine his work to the track this year. He will open the season at Philadelphia on May 16th, when he will ride in a ten-mile professional handicap.

The course selected for the Newark-Philadelphia century run on June 13th, will be by way of New Brunswick and Princeton. At Trenton a stop of two hours will be made for dinner and rest, and also to allow the stragglers to catch up. Fours prizes age to be given for clubs having the largest representation, and also for clubs having largest number in proportion to their membership to finish.

Some of the bicycle policemen on the Coney Island bicycle path have been put into plain clothes. This is done to enable them to suppress the army of scorchers who infest this path on Sundays and holidays, to the great discomfort of and danger to women in particular, and to men who do not care to ride fast. When the policemen all wore uniforms, it was a simple matter for the scorcher to slow up until the officer had been passed, and then resume his reckless riding.

Every pleasant day on the Coney Island cycle path one or two young young men on wheels may be seen scurrying back and forth through the crowds carrying valises swung over their shoulders or a luggage carrier fitted into the main frame of the wheel. They are travelling bicycle repairers and get considerable work from the unfortunates who are unlucky enough to require their services. They will adjust a saddle, pump up a tire, mend a puncture, straighten a bent fork, or if a wheel is disabled so much that it cannot be repaired outside of a shop, will take charge of it and express it to any given address, regulating their charges accordingly.

Cycling received a great impetus among the Y. M. C. A's of this district last evening when delegates from several associations met at the building of the Westfield Y. M. C. A., to arrange for a series of general runs of the cycling departments of the different associations, as was exclusively announced in The Press some time ago. Representatives were present from the Summit, Rahway, Westfield and Plainfield associations, while Orange sent word by letter of her wish to join in any such movement. New Brunswick, whose cycling club is a flourishing one, was, although not represented, also included in the movement. The delegates present were: William E. Nicoll and S. E. Houston, of Summit; S. E. George, W. A. Baker, Jr., and William Bliss, of Rahway; P. G. DuBois, William Seward and Carle Whitehead, of Westfield; T. A. Cuming, C. W. Nichols and Charles B. Morse, of this city. Albert Steiner and Walter G. Williams were also present from this city. An informal organization was effected and S. E. Houston, of Summit, the originator of the plan, was chosen chairman and Chas. B. Morse, of this city, secretary. It was decided not to form a regular organized league at present, but to merely arrange a series of runs, each association to entertain the other five on one evening. These runs will be held on every other Thursday evening and, in case of general rain, they will be postponed till the Friday following. All of the clubs will so arrange their runs as to reach the home of the entertaining association by 9 o'clock or before, and then an entertainment will be given and refreshments served while the members of the home association will turn out to entertain their visitors in a royal manner. These runs will be for Y. M. C. A. members only. Should any club find at the last moment that they will be unable to start they will notify the entertaining club by telegraph. The following schedule of runs was then adopted:

May 21, to Summit.
June 4, to Westfield.
June 18, to Orange.
July 9, to Plainfield.
July 23, to Rahway.
August 6, to New Brunswick.

There will be no united run to the Irvington-Milburn race on Decoration Day, although several of the associations may hold a run together. The delegates will meet on the occasion of each run and settle any matters that may arise. The rest of the evening was devoted to sociability, and after an enjoyable programme of music and recitations, in which were two soprano solos by Miss Elfled A. Whiting, of this city, with auto harp accompaniment.

VARIOUS SPORTS.

The Y. M. C. A., of Summit, will hold athletic games on the afternoon of Decoration Day.

Frank Stover and Frank Hedden went gigging Thursday night and captured nearly 100 fish.

Ralph Campbell, of this city, is one of the candidates for the crew of the University of New York.

The outdoor athletic season opened in Plainfield yesterday afternoon when the young men of the Senior Class held an informal field day at the Crescent Oval. The track was in poor condition, and most of the contestants were out of training which accounts for the rather poor performances. The two runs, the one hundred and the quarter mile, furnished exciting finishes. Cornwell won the first by less than a foot from Craig, and was also victor in the second. Carroll paced all the way to the home stretch, when Cornwell shot ahead and finished in fine style. In the third of a mile bicycle race, William M. McCutchen acted as pacemaker, and Cornwell followed close only to be passed at the last by Craig. Raymond Carroll won the championship of the class, scoring twenty-one points, Wilbur F. Cornwell was second with two points less. Volney F. Green was supposed to have an excellent show for the championship, but he was unable to take part in but one event, putting the shot, in which he took second place. Quite a number of the High School students of both sexes witnessed the games and encouraged the contestants on to victory. Volney F. Green acted as referee. The judges were Donald Stuart, Lindley Hillman and Alden Wagner. Charles B. Morse was timer and Charles Dupee, starter. The summaries were as follows: Pole vault, won by Raymond Carroll; Frank Wilbur Cornwell, second; Fred Squires, third; height eight feet and three inches. One hundred yards dash, won by Frank Wilbur Cornwell; J. Hazlewood Craig, second; Fred Squires; time, twelve and two-fifth seconds. High jump, won by Raymond Carroll; Wilbur F. Cornwell, second; J. H. Craig and Fred Squires tied for third place; height, four feet nine inches. Putting the shot, won by Raymond Carroll; Volney F. Green, second; J. H. Craig, third; distance, thirty-one feet four inches. Standing broad jump, won by J. H. Craig; Raymond Carroll, second; Charles Noble, third; distance, eight feet seven inches. Four hundred and forty yards run, won by W. F. Cornwell; Raymond Carroll, second; Fred Squires, third; time, sixty-four and four-fifth seconds. One-third of a mile bicycle race, won by J. H. Craig; Wilbur F. Cornwell, second; Fred Squires, third; time, fifty-eight and two-fifth seconds.

AMONG THE STEPPERS.

Jedediah Smalley, of Somerset street, has purchased the famous Hamiltonian pacer, Antonia.

The trotting matches at the Gentlemen's Driving Park will be continued this afternoon. There will be a special match between Thomas Brantingham's mare, Myrtle Twig, 2:24, and Highland Boy, belonging to J. W. Arkell, of Westfield. There will be other races also.

INS AND OUTS.

A special meeting of the Young Men's Association of Monroe Avenue chapel was held last evening and the association decided to organize a base ball team. Samuel Saums and Blanchard Randolph will have the matter in charge.

PARTICULAR MENTION.

B. O. Bowers, of Franklin place, is on a business trip to Barrington, Nova Scotia.

Fred Sebring, of West Fifth street, is out again after an attack of the measles.

Dr. H. K. Carroll, of Westervelt avenue, is out of town on an extended business trip.

Mrs. Joseph Darby and daughter, of Alton, are guests of Mrs. Darby's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Schuck, of Vine street.

Mrs. H. K. Carroll, of Westervelt avenue, returned today from New York State where she attended the funeral of a relative.

A young son of George Egel is seriously ill at his home on Somerset street with pneumonia. A consultation was held by Drs. Zeglio and Long.

Mrs. Thomas Lynch, of Madison avenue, who is confined at Muhlenberg Hospital, is improving, and hopes of her speedy recovery are entertained.

Miss Grace Carroll, of Westervelt avenue, who sprained her ankle a few days ago, is still confined to the house, and though her condition is improved it will be a long time before she can walk.

Mrs. Ann McGinley, mother of Rev. Father Roger McGinley, of Jersey City, died at her home in New York early this morning. Her remains will be brought to this city and interred in St. Mary's cemetery.

Charles J. Stultz, for a long time the gentlemanly night operator at the Western Union Telegraph office at the North Avenue station, has accepted a much better position at Helena, Mont., and a telegram to friends in Plainfield says he is now on the way there to take charge.

—Owing to a misunderstanding no business meeting was held by the Epworth League of Grace M. E. church last evening. It will probably be held next Friday evening.

—The excursion of Grace M. E. church and Sunday-school, together with the Westfield M. E. church and Sunday-school will be held July 10th. They will spend the day at Oscawana Island, N. Y.

—At a meeting of the Sunday school teachers of Grace M. E. church held a few days ago, it was decided to celebrate children's day this year as usual. After children's day, for the summer months, the school will meet in the morning from 9:45 to 10:45.

—Geo. Wilson, who drives Hillier & Co's laundry wagon, was held up by four tramps last night between Alton and Westfield, while returning home. The men became so desperate that he was obliged to shoot off his revolver four times. They wanted money, but when they heard the shots they made their escape.

ACTION TO COMPEL ITINERANT MERCHANTS TO STAY AWAY.

Suit Commenced Against A. Wienberger, Who Opened a Sale in the Stillman Building Saturday—Merchants Incensed.

Action has been started in Justice Newcorn's court by George Dean, prosecutor, against M. Wienberger, who has opened a store on West Front street, advertising a bankrupt clothing sale, for a penalty of $100 for the violation of an act entitled "An act to prevent fraud in sales of wearing apparel at public or private sales by itinerant venders, and to regulate all such sales," passed May 24th, 1894. This act provides that any itinerant vender conducting such business shall obtain a State license on the payment of $25 and deposit with the State treasurer $500 as a guarantee against fraud. He shall also file with the State treasurer, under oath, a statement of where the goods came from, who owned them and a full account of failure and such other particulars as are necessary. He shall also pay a local license of $5, if not otherwise provided for, in the town where the sale takes place.

Any person, principal or agent, violating any provisions of this act shall be deemed guilty of a misdemeanor and upon arrest and conviction shall be fined $50 or 60 days or both, beside which a penalty of $100 to be recovered in an action of debt by any prosecutor who sues for the city as well as himself.

Mr. Wienberger came to Plainfield last week and opened on Saturday the store on West Front street, formerly occupied by Powlison & Jones. He advertised an immense bankrupt sale of clothing. The merchants in town were incensed at his action when they knew he had no legal right to carry on the business, and they decided to take the case into court which they did. It will be remembered that sometime ago New York parties came to town and conducted a similar business in the Love building on West Front street, and the action of the merchants compelled them to leave town. The step in this case, as in the other, is taken to protect the business men of Plainfield.

A SUNDAY MARRIAGE.

Miss Rosa Hinsgen Becomes Mrs. Frederick Bennett, of Cranford.

The marriage of Miss Rosa Hinsgen, of Grove street, and Frederick Bennett, of Cranford, was celebrated yesterday afternoon at 2:30 o'clock at the German Reformed church. Rev. George Hauser, pastor of the church, performed the ceremony. Miss Amelia Hinsgen, a sister of the bride, acted as bridemaid and Frederick Hinsgen, a brother of the bride, was best man.

After the marriage a reception was held at the home of the bride on Grove street. About fifteen guests were present, all of whom were from Cranford. Mr. and Mrs. Bennett will reside at Cranford.

TO LUNCH WHILE ON PATROL.

Police Board Arrange to Feed the Officers at Midnight.

Improvements still go on with the police force. Since the Police Board has been organized they have had under consideration a plan by which the men could receive a midnight lunch while on their posts. The Board recognized the fact that to allow the officers to leave their posts and go home for lunch would be to court crime. It was also considered that twelve hours was too long a time for men to go without food when out in the night air in all kinds of weather and exercising continually. The Board have therefore made arrangements whereby sandwiches and coffee will be served to them on their posts at midnight. The plan will be put into immediate operation.

REINER CASE IN SIGHT.

Libel Suit Brought by Mayor Rankin to Be Considered.

The case of Dr. Reiner, editor of the New Jersey Herald, who is charged by Mayor John E. Rankin, of Elizabeth, with twenty-six counts of libel, will be the most important which the Grand Jury, which will be sworn in on Tuesday before Judge VanSyckle, will have to consider. It is said that if the jury does indict, and the case comes to trial, it will prove the most sensational trial before the County Court in many years

Public sentiment has wavered, and there appears to be no disposition on the part of the public for the affair to come before the courts because of the expected unpleasant testimony, a part of which the defendant published in his arraignment of Mayor Rankin for not, as the plaintiff alleged, closing the disorderly houses of Elizabeth.

An Appeal for a Mission.

An earnest appeal for the support of the East Third Street Mission was made by Dr. Yerkes at the morning service in the First Baptist church. He said that the Mission was six years old and ever since its organization in the tent an immense amount of good had been accomplished both at the regular meetings and the sessions of the Sunday school. A collection was taken at this service for the Mission to which there was a liberal contribution.

Domesticated Robins.

A pair of robbin birds have chosen a very peculiar place for their nest at the home of Dr. Jenkins, East Front street. It is in a honeysuckle vine at the rear door of the doctor's office, even with a person's optical vision and within arm's length. So tame are the birds that they allow the doctor and his family to go in and out of the house without disturbing them. Woe to the dog, cat or other animal that attempts to disturb them.

A MINISTER AND A POLICEMAN ON THE BICYCLE.

THE PREACHER TELLS HOW IT SHOULD BE USED ON SUNDAY.

He Does Not Wholly Deplore the Use of the Bicycle on Sunday, But Says Church Duties Should Not Be Neglected.

The following is the prelude to the regular sermon preached by Rev. C. E. Herring at the First Presbyterian church last night on "Bicycling on the Sabbath":

There is one class of people who absolutely denounce the use of the wheel on the Sabbath, another class who believe in its moderate use, if need be, on the Sabbath, and still another who consecrate the whole day to the wheel.

This problem is the one that concerns us all more or less. Let us have a Christian understanding and treat the problem with fairness.

As Christian people I don't think it is unfair to decide against the all-day run without a thought of God or worship of God in the mind. Let us consider the other two two points:

First—Remember the important thing in life is manliness. Manliness is the Christian's acceptation. The converted heathen expressed it when he said he wanted to be a Jesus Christ man. There is no manliness like Christian manliness. Christianity is a virile religion. Everything in life should conspire to develop that manhood.

Secondly—Manliness is not realized by him who takes pleasure as the summun bonum. Our ideal should not be how shall I be happy. It is positively painful to see the great number of young men who swarm our roads on their Sabbath wheel runs. The wheel is a great temptation for a young man to absent himself from morning service. It is a very sad thing to see Easter Sunday, the most important day in the year, dedicated to an all-day run.

Yet while we depreciate the desecration of the Sabbath by the excessive use of the wheel to the neglect of worship, yet we should be moderate in our criticism of those who, after performing the duties of the Sabbath, ride in the belief of getting a bit of fresh air on their wheels. It is very easy to denounce the wheel, especially if we don't ride ourselves. Personally I don't ride on the Sabbath, but I do on Monday.

I have no right to be conscience for another man and because he cannot, after the performance of his Sabbath duties, see the wrong in a short spin I have no right to judge him. Perhaps he is so closely confined to his work during the week that he needs that bit of fresh air. What we are concerned with is to see that he does not omit any known duty.

Some of my friends own a horse and buggy. Yea and more that, and good people as they are, they don't always take the shortest way home from church. The bicycle rider is not rich enough to own such a rig.

The wheel is a possible means of grace. You can turn it to good service and come to church on Sunday evenings. Some of our good people are so careful about their coachmen that they will not go to Sunday evening service, because it is right for them to give the coachman a chance. That is very commendable, but how helpful their presence would be in the church on Sunday evenings. With a club run to see them all coming to church in a worshipful mood, I would like such a run every Sunday night.

The time is coming when everybody will own a wheel and when the billowy roads of Plainfield will be calmed by the new steam roller, and we trust that on Sundays the wheels will be consecrated to the divine service.

See it All.

There is so much to be seen in this world that if we want to see as much of it as possible we should take the very best care of the eyes. To perfect and perpetuate the use of these organs you should have them examined by a skillful optician and be advised as to what attention they may require. Free examinations by an expert specialist are guaranteed you at Collier's, 103 Park avenue.

How To Treat a Wife.

(From the Pacific Health Journal.)

First, get a wife; second, be patient. You may have great trials and perplexities in your business, but do not therefore, carry to your home a cloud or cloudy brow. Your wife may have trials, which, though of less magnitude, may be hard for her to bear. A kind word, a tender look, will do wonders in chasing from her brow all clouds of gloom. To this we woul add always keep a bottle of Chamberlain's Cough Remedy in the house. It is the best and is sure to be needed sooner or later. Your wife will then know that you really care for her and wish to protect her health. For sale by T. S Armstrong, druggist.

THE OFFICER DEMONSTRATES ITS USE BY THE POLICE.

Roundsman Fredrickson Follows Reckless Drivers for a Couple of Miles on His Bicycle and Finally Captures Them.

The bicycle played an important part in the capture of two offenders early Sunday morning and two very disgusted young men now appreciate the efficiency of a policeman mounted on a bicycle. Early Sunday morning at about two o'clock, Roundsman Frederickson was riding near the corner of Liberty and Fifth streets when he heard a horse and buggy approaching from the direction of Plainfield avenue. The horse was on a gallop and the young men in the carriage kept urging the animal on. The officer ordered them to stop, but the young men, apparently under the influence of liquor, yelled derisively at the policeman and applied the whip.

Roundsman Frederickson then started in pursuit on his wheel. The night was dark and the swaying carriage ahead raised such a dust that it was almost impossible to see, but still the plucky officer continued, guided by the shouts of the pursued. The bumps caused by the filling in of sewer trenches were crossed at flying speed and the policeman was shot completely off his saddle, but he clung to the handle-bars and managed to land safely in his saddle again.

As he began to gain, the two men in the buggy renewed their efforts to escape. They had turned the corner of Central avenue at the risk of being thrown, and were speeding along that smooth thoroughfare with only a sewer connection bump to break the monotony. With head down, Frederickson raced along behind, and was rapidly decreasing the distance behind himself and the nearly winded horse, when the end of Central avenue was reached. The lane to Percy Ohl's residence stretched invitingly before them, and into this turned pursued and pursuer.

The occupants of Percy Ohl's house were suddenly startled by a terrible racket. All of Mr. Ohl's dogs, and he has a number of them, began to bark loudly. Mr. Ohl looked out in time to see a buggy containing two men go spinning by with a bicycle close behind. The carriage was stopped in front of the barn and Frederickson dismounted. Mr. Ohl, from his lofty perch, demanded the reason for the midnight invasion.

"I'm an officer," explained Frederickson.

The midnight drivers tried to tell that they were in search of somebody's farm. They had climbed out of the buggy and started to put the horse in the barn.

"Get in that wagon," sternly ordered the officer, and the crestfallen young men slowly obeyed. Leaving his wheel against a tree, the victor in this midnight race drove his prisoners to the rookery and locked them up.

This morning they appeared before City Judge DeMeza on the charge of being drunk and disorderly and for fast driving. They each paid $3 in preference to ten days in jail. They gave their names as James Kennedy and Andrew Martin, and hereafter will have respect for policemen on bicycles.

A Helpful Meeting.

The men's meeting at the Y. M. C. A. yesterday afternoon was a helpful one. E. C. Pease was in charge and gave an impressive talk on the Twenty-third Psalm. A male choir consisting of Frank S. Runyon, Ezra Loomis, A. J. Moore, Nelson Y. Hull, Nelson Runyon, L. A. Hummer and H. E. Hazell, rendered selections and helped exceedingly in the singing of the hymns. J. V. Beeekman was the accompanist. Following Mr. Pease's talk a number of short interesting testimonies were given.

The Press Found the Owner.

Ex-Councilman J. B. Brown found a pocketbook a few days ago and advertised for its owner in the News. He received no replys from this medium, and then inserted a like advertisement in The Press. He immediately received several answers from people who had lost pocketbooks, and among them found the rightful owner, Mary James, of East Sixth street.

Christianity in Japan.

Rev. Dr. Bradford, of Montclair, will repeat his lecture on "Christianity in Japan" delivered before the recent New Jersey Conference of Congregational churches, at the Congregational churches tomorrow. This service will take the place this week of the church prayer meeting, usually held on Wednesday evening.

City Missionary Here.

Miss Noah Herndon, who is to be engaged in city missionary work during the summer, has arrived in Plainfield.

CHOIR CHANGES.

First Baptist Church Music in New and Capable Hands.

Several marked changes were noticed at the First Baptist church yesterday. E. J. Fitzhugh, who has filled the position of organist for the past two years so acceptably, has returned to Brooklyn, and his place is taken by Howard Case, of East Second street. A change has also been made in the soprano soloist. For several years Miss F. May Grant has held this position with great acceptability, and her singing has been thoroughly enjoyed by all who have heard her. The position is now filled by Miss L. C. Harris, of Elizabeth, who sang a solo yesterday morning. She has a voice comprising richness and fullness of tone and her upper notes are especially pleasing. Mrs. T. M. Ward, also of Elizabeth, has been secured as the leading contralto. No opportunity was given yesterday morning of hearing her voice. The high standard of work performed by the choir in the past, under the direction of C. W. McCutchen, will be fully maintained in the future and those attending this church can be assured of hearing excellent music.

At the evening service there were solo parts rendered by Miss Harris and Mrs. Ward. The latter's voice is a pleasing one, and her singing will most surely be a feature. The worshippers at this church will no doubt miss the singing of B. T. Barnes, who has also retired after several years service.

CODINGTON'S CORRECTION.

Is Not and Never Has Been Administrator of the W. J. Lowe Estate.

With reference to the action of Mrs. Lowe, of Morristown, in seeking an accounting of her husband's estate, Assemblyman William R. Codington makes this correction of the published reports in the World this morning:

"I am not, nor have I ever been, the administrator of the estate of William J. Lowe, nor has the Union County Court ever appointed me administrator. Ex-Senator Marsh and myself were Mrs. Lowe's attorneys in the suit in the Union County Orphan's Court, wherein the right of Mrs. Lowe to administer on the estate of her husband was questioned and bitterly fought by the brothers of William J. Lowe, Congressman Pitney representing the contestants. We were successful in the contest and both ex-Senator Marsh and myself were allowed a counsel fee, neither of which has yet been paid. The Morristown real estate of which William J. Lowe died seized has been sold by Charles A. Reed, Esq., special master, and the proceeds thereof still remain in his possession, except so far as they have been ordered paid by the Court and the dower interest of Mrs. Lowe still remains in the master's hands. The administrator pendente lite was Mr. Kelly, of Elizabeth. After the determination of the litigation in the Union County Orphan's Court, Hezekiah Hand and Mary E. Lowe were appointed administrators of the estate and still are acting as such."

SALVATIONISTS ACTIVE.

A Number of Special Features for the Meetings This Week.

Six special meetings are to be held at the Salvation Army this week. Tomorrow evening, the officers from Bound Brook will be present to lead the meeting. Wednesday evening, Brigadier Evans, Staff-Captain Dunham, Ensigns Taylor and Marsh and Cadet Hargreaves will be the visitors. A "swearing in" is to be held and a baby dedicated. Thursday evening, a brass band from New York will be present and render a musical programme. For a small sum, coffee and cake will be served to all present just after the meeting. Friday evening, Staff-Captain Milsaps, editor of the War Cry is expected, and Sunday afternoon and evening, Adjutant Agnew and her sister, Captain Agnew, will be present. A grand and stirring time is expected.

Officers Act as Arbitrators.

Two men came out from New York yesterday and hired Lynch's hack to take them to South Plainfield. Lynch gave them his charge and they agreed. The strangers kept Lynch over there two hours and then had him bring them back. They refused to pay more than Lynch's original price for taking them over until Roundsman Mattox and Patrolman McCue were called, when the strangers paid the regular price.

To Celebrate Their Anniversary.

Next Sunday evening the Ladies' Christian Work Society of the Trinity Reformed church will celebrate its fifteenth anniversary, and a native of Arabia, Rev. Mr. Cantine, will be present and deliver an address, and the annual reports of the society will also be read.

THE STATE CONVENTION

THE DEMOCRATS TO CONVENE IN TRENTON NEXT THURSDAY.

Probable Delegates to Be Sent to the National Convention in Chicago—Ex-Speaker Bergen Will Act as Chairman.

On Thursday next the Democratic State Convention will be held to select twenty delegates to the National Convention. The sentiment is expressed that United States Senator James Smith, of Newark, and Allan L. McDermott, of Jersey City, will be chosen as two of the delegates at large. Either ex-Assemblyman Jas. J. Bergen, of Somerville, or Richard V. Lindabury, of Elizabeth, will be the third, and the fourth place will go to South Jersey, with Benjamin F. Lee, of Trenton, and Howard Carrow and William J. Thompson, of Camden, as candidates. The names of Edward F. C. Young, chairman of the State committee, ex-Senator John Rhoderic McPherson, and ex-Congressman Miles Ross have been mentioned as possible delegates at large, but Mr. Young has announced that his business interests will not permit of his absence at convention time. Ex-Senator McPherson's health is too poor for him to undergo the excitement, and ex-Congressman Ross, who is in poor health, says he has no desire to become a delegate and will not act if elected.

While the call for the State Convention provides for the election of the sixteen district delegates on Thursday, this is a mere formality, as the district delegates will be chosen in the district caucuses and the results announced and formally ratified by the State Convention. The Seventh district has already selected as its delegates, Senator William D. Daly and ex-Senator William D. Edwards, of Jersey City. Hudson county also endorsed Mr. McDermott as one of the delegates at large, Assemblyman John W. Queen for chairman of the convention, and selected a candidate for permanent secretary and candidates for chairmen of all the important committees. This action has led to a fear that Hudson county will try to run the convention by reason of her claim that she was one of the very few counties that made a showing for the Democratic ticket last fall.

Ex-Senator Rufus Blodgett, who acted as chairman of the Democratic Executive Committee last fall, is opposed to Mr. Queen for chairman of the convention, and as he is one of the sub-committee appointed to select the temporary chairman, his opposition may prove effective.

In this event it is possible that ex-Assemblyman James J. Bergen will be chosen as temporary chairman, in the expectation that he may be retained as permanent chairman also.

Mr. Bergen, who is an ex-Speaker of the Assembly, is also mentioned in connection with the State Committee Chairmanship. Chairman Young resigned at the meeting of the committee a few weeks ago, but consented to serve until the next meeting of the committee, which will be held on Wednesday evening to arrange the preliminaries of the convention next day. Richard V. Lindbury is also mentioned in connection with the Chairmanship.

The Convention on Thursday will not choose a new State Committee, as the State Convention last September provided for a reorganization of the committee, which now consists of one from each county, to be chosen at the Gubernatorial Convention, and five at large, to be appointed by the Convention Chairman, and the committeemen were then chosen.

The leaders of the party are unanimous in the declaration that the platform adopted will contain a sound money plank, and Mr. McDermott's ambition to go to Chicago is said to be based on his desire to do what he can to induce the National Convention to take a stand for a gold standard.

Prominent Democrats in the northern part of the State believe that the sentiment among the voters favors the renomination of President Cleveland, if he can be prevailed upon to accept, with Whitney and Olney for second and third choice. In the lower part of the State Whitney and ex-Gov. Russell, of Massachusetts are favorites.

Mr. D. P. Davis, a prominent liveryman and merchant of Goshen, Va., has this to say on the subject of rheumatism: "I take pleasure in recommending Chamberlain's Pain Balm for rheumatism, as I know from personal experience that it will do all that is claimed for it. A year ago this spring my brother was laid up in bed with inflammatory rheumatism and suffered intensely. The first application of Chamberlain's Pain Balm eased the pain and the use of one bottle completely cured him. For sale by T. S. Armstrong, druggist.

WORK OF CONGRESS

River and Harbor Bill in the Senate To-day.

ONLY ONE CLAUSE CAUSES DEBATE

It May Be Passed in Two Days—Rinaker-Downing Contested Election Case May Arouse a Bitter Fight. House Matters.

Washington, May 4.—In the senate this afternoon Mr. Frye will call up the river and harbor bill and he hopes to get this important measure passed inside of two days. The only item that is expected to cause trouble is that providing for the construction of a deep sea harbor at Santa Monica, Cal., which is being antagonized by the California senators, and upon which a lively fight is being waged in favor of the rival harbor of San Pedro. So many and diverse interests are in favor of the river and harbor appropriations that no serious difficulty is anticipated in putting them through the senate, notwithstanding the large addition to the drain on the treasury made by the upper chamber. The District of Columbia appropriation bill comes next in order, and after that shall have been disposed of there will only be the fortification and the general deficiency appropriation bills to be acted upon by the senate. Republican managers intend, if they can, to put all the appropriation bills through the senate by May 15. This, according to their programme, will leave two weeks clear in which to discuss and adjust in conference the differences between the house and senate as to particular items of appropriation and will open the way to an adjournment by June 1. Similar predictions have been heard in many previous long sessions of congress, but have seldom been fulfilled.

House of Representatives.

The only item of business decided upon for the consideration of the house of representatives this week is the report of elections committee No. 1 upon the contested election case of Rinaker against Downing from the sixteenth Illinois district. In this case the majority of the committee recommend the unseating of Downing, the democratic candidate who was given the certificate, and the seating of Rinaker, his republican opponent. The minority, with whom Mr. Moody, rep., Mass., unites, recommend a recount of the votes. A vigorous fight will be made over this report, and if agreed to it will exclude from the house the last remaining democrat in the Illinois delegation of twenty-two members. To-day is suspension day, and unless the committee on rules shall otherwise determine the session will be devoted to motions to pass bills under suspension of the rules. Two days will probably be given for the consideration of private pension bills, which will enable the committee on invalid pensions to make some progress towards clearing the calendar of that class of measures. Three appropriation bills are in conference—the legislative, executive and judicial, sundry civil and Indian—and reports upon one or more of them ought to be ready for submission to the house before the close of the week.

LI HUNG IN RUSSIA.

The Chinese Statesman Received with Open Arms at St. Petersburg.

New York, May 3.—A special cable dispatch to the Herald from St. Petersburg says: Li Hung Chang, who is here to represent the Chinese emperor at the coronation of the czar, is received everywhere with open arms, even the generally apathetic populace being aroused to enthusiasm. There is no reason to think that his visit has any significance beyond one of ceremony and honor. Apropos of this the Shanghai Journal from which comes the rumor of a Russo-Chinese treaty now denies the story as false.

THE ABYSSINIAN WAR.

Native Outposts Defeated in an Engagement with the Italians.

Massowah, May 4.—Gen. Baldissera, commander of the Italian troops in Abyssinia and the entire corps are at Barathet. Yesterday an engagement was fought with the Abyssinian outposts and the latter were defeated. King Menelik has released Major Salsa, the Italian officer who visited him in connection with the peace negotiations. He is now in the camp of Ras Mangascia.

ANTI-HUN RIOTS.

Several Persons Killed and a Number Wounded at Belgrade.

Belgrade, May 4.—Anti-Hun riots occurred here yesterday growing out of the use of the Servian flag at the Budapest Millennial exhibition. Several persons were killed and a number wounded before order could be restored.

Fitzhugh Lee at the State Department.

Washington, May 4.—Gen. Fitzhugh Lee, the new consul general of the United States at Havana, called at the state department again this morning and had a conference with Secretary Olney and Assistant Secretary Rockhill. The Cuban situation was discussed, but further conferences will be held. The date of Gen. Lee's departure for his post has not been settled and he will probably remain in Washington for several days posting himself on the state of affairs in the island as shown by the reports received at the department.

Dead Body Found on a Railroad Track.

Worcester, Mass., May 4.—The badly crushed body of a man was fonnd on the tracks of the Boston & Albany railroad about a mile out of the city yesterday. In one of the pockets was a notebook in which was written "Charles Humphreys, Medway."

DEATH OF FELIX M'CURLEY.

Brief Sketch of the Career of the Late Commander, U. S. A.

Philadelphia, May 4.—Commander Felix McCurley, United States navy, captain of League Island navy yard, died at that station yesterday of heart failure. Commander McCurley was born in Baltimore in 1835 and early in life entered the merchant marine service. When the war broke out he entered the navy as acting master. He served throughout the war with great gallantry and was under fire more than forty times. In action he was conspicuous for coolness and intrepidity and the encouragement he gave his men. At the conclusion of the war he was commissioned as master and entered the navy with that rank. Since the war he was attached to various squadrons in different parts of the world. Twice while on the Asiatic station in command of the U. S. S. Alliance he rescued shipwrecked crews at sea and on both occasions received the thanks of the Chinese government. He was appointed captain of the League Island navy yard in April, 1893, to date of death. Commander McCurley was a splendid type of the volunteer officer, of which the war of the rebellion produced so many examples, and was one of the most widely known officers in the service. His many fine qualities of heart and mind and his skill as a sailor endeared him to and brought to him the confidence of all who ever sailed with him.

HUNGARY'S CELEBRATION.

Budapest in Gala Attire and Crowded with Visitors.

Budapest, May 4.—The celebration of the national millennium of Hungary was continued yesterday. The city is crowded with visitors, and on every side the greatest enthusiasm is displayed. In the morning high mass was celebrated in the Hauptferr or Matthias church, said to have been built by King Bela IV., whose reign began in 1235. The queen was present attired in black, but the other ladies who attended the services were dressed in Hungarian gala attire. Count Taselo Festetics gave a brilliant soiree last evening, which was attended by several members of the royal family and a large number of other distinguished guests. After dark the city presented a most beautiful spectacle, being superbly illuminated. Nearly every building was a mass of light. The most notable displays were made by the New York Life Insurance company, and the opera house and museum.

THEOSOPHICAL MARRIAGE.

Claude Falls Wright and Mary Katherine Leonard Wed at New York.

New York, May 4.—Claude Falls Wright, the Theosophist, and Mary Katherine Leonard, also an active worker in the cause, were married in the rooms of the Theosophical society in this city last evening. It was a Theosophical marriage conducted under the authority of the head officers of the society, but in order to make the union legal Alderman Robinson performed a civil marriage. The Theosophical marriage was performed according to a ritual prepared from the ancient Egyptian rites in the great "mysteries," and none but the accepted members of the society were allowed to witness the ceremony.

STILL DEFY ARREST.

The Zeigler Brothers Repulse a Party Sent To Capture Them.

Savannah, Ga., May 4.—A special from Sylvania reports that fifteen or twenty armed men went from Millen to Ziegler station yesterday, presumably to capture the Zeigler brothers, who murdered the sheriff of Screven county several months ago and have defied arrest ever since. The Millen crowd found that the Zeiglers had been forewarned of their approach and rallied an armed band of their friends to defend them. Thereupon the Millen band retreated, and no trouble has occurred.

MATABELE UPRISING.

Rebellious Natives Who Were Threatening Buluwayo Have Retired.

London, May 4.—Earl Grey, administrator of the South Africa company, has telegraphed to Colonial Secretary Chamberlain that the rebellious Matabeles who were threatening that town have retired. He adds that the lines of communication from Buluwayo to Fort Salisbury, Mafeking, and the south have been secured. The consensus of opinion is that the Matabeles are preparing for a permanent movement to the north.

RACE FOR PRESIDENT

The Situation as It Stands at the Present Time.

FIGURES OF MANLEY AND GROSVENOR

The Fight Not Yet Settled, Says the Maine Man—Disappointed at the Action of Vermont Republicans—Estimates Greatly Differ.

Washington, May 4.—Mr. Manley of Maine last night gave out the following statement: Since my statement of a week ago there have been elected forty-six delegates. The elections have occurred in Michigan, Illinois, Missouri, Arizona, Indian Territory, Vermont, Alabama and Georgia. They can be assigned as follows: In Alabama and Arizona two sets of delegates have been elected, and are therefore placed, as they ought to be, in the contested column; Indian Territory, Michigan, Missouri and Illinois are placed in the column for Gov. McKinley. The convention in Vermont was a surprise to the friends of Thomas Reed. They had a right to expect that Vermont would join with the rest of New England and send a delegation pleged to the support of the New England candidate. The delegates selected unquestionably prefer the nomination of Thomas Reed. How far they will feel bound by the declaration of preference for Gov. McKinley by their convention time alone will determine. It must be remembered that the convention did not instruct the delegates and left them free to exercise their own judgment. Preferences and even instructions in the past have not uniformly goverened the delegates because the the conditions under which they were passed did not exist at the time the delegates were called upon to discharge the duties entrusted to them. The situation to-day is as follows: For Mr. Reed, 162; for Gov. McKinley, 275; for all other candidates, 217. Contested and doubtful, 95; Vermont, 8. This makes 757 delegates elected and 161 yet to be chosen. The contest is not yet settled and can alone be determined by the delegates when they meet in convention at St. Louis.

Grosvenor's Figures.

Gen. Grosvenor gave out his usual weekly statement of McKinley delegates elected last night. He claims the election of 495 who are instructed or pledged to the Ohio candidate. He points out that there are 118 votes unelected and claims that McKinley will have more than one hundred of that number. He furthermore states that there are un-named and unclaimed delegates east of the Allegheny mountains among the delegates counted for other candidates, twenty who will support McKinley.

Allison's Iowa Friends Active.

Des Moines, Ia., May 4.—Allison's Iowa managers have left this city for St. Louis. The party will make arrangements for a building capable of accommodating 2,000 Iowans for the convention. The reports coming in from the smaller towns show that a number of Allison clubs have been formed, and that Iowa will be represented as it never has been before at a national convention. The fact that McKinley carried the Springfield convention is in no way deterring the a rangements, and Allison's Iowa frie s are working just as hard as ever make him the next president.

Boise and Free Silver.

Chicago, May 4.—At Wintersett, Ia., Madison county democrats Saturday selected delegates to the state convention and instructed them to vote for ex-Gov. Boies for delegate-at-large to Chicago; also for Mr. Boies for president, and vote only for delegates to the national convention who will vote and work for a silver platform. At Boone the Boone county convention declared for free silver and Boies for delegate-at-large and president. At Nashville, Ill., the democratic county convention selected delegates and instructed for the free coinage of silver at a ratio of 16 to 1, and William R. Morrison was endorsed for president.

DEATH OF W. H. DOBLE.

Father of Budd Doble and at One Time a Famous Reinsman.

Philadelphia, May 4.—William H. Doble, who died Saturday evening at his home on the Belmont drive, near the city line, was in his time the most famous reinsman of the world. He was 80 years old. Mr. Doble was probably the oldest living driver of trotting horses and he was the first man to drive a trotter faster than 2:17. This he accomplished in the famous match race between Goldsmith Maid and Lucy, at Mystic Park, Boston, early in the seventies. His son "Budd" was to have driven the Maid but was taken ill a few days before the race came off. His father was substituted and sent Goldsmith Maid under the wire in 2:16 3-4. Mr. Doble has handled and trained trotting horses since 1830. His first professional race was at the half-mile track at the Powelton fair grounds, in this city, in which he drove Graybearb against George Magee, half mile heats, and won the best three out of five in very fast time for those days.

One Man and Four Horses Perish.

New York, May 4.—Fire on the ground floor of a three-story stable on Christopher street yesterday did $1,000 worth of damage and burned to death four horses. Patrick Johnson, an awning maker, was asleep in a workroom over the stable and was suffocated by the smoke.

Drank Carbolic Acid.

Stamford, Conn., May 4.—Mrs. Fredrick Schenck, aged 40 years, was found dead in bed yesterday. While afflicted with melancholia she drank four ounces of carbolic acid.

ENGLAND POWERLESS

Kruger's Diplomacy Heads Off Her Schemes Against the Boers.

GERMAN OFFICIALS NOT SURPRISED

Fully Cognizant of the Recent Occurrences in the Transvaal—Reinforcements To Be Sent to South Africa—Duke Cumberland's Son Ill.

Berlin, May 4.—The latest advices direct from Pretoria, the capital of the South African republic, remove all official apprehension that there will be a war between the Transvaal republic and England. The feeling here is that President Kruger's diplomacy has rendered England powerless to trespass upon the independence of the Boers without outraging the opinion of the world and justifying the powers in intervening. Dr. W. J. Leyds, the secretary of state of the Transvaal republic, who recently spent some months in Germany, will return to Berlin in July in some new official capacity and Germany will soon send an important diplomat to Pretoria, and this will certainly be done, too, without asking the opinion of England. The utterances of the Hon. Joseph Chamberlain, British secretary of state for the colonies against foreign intervention in the Transvaal have made no impression here and will not in the slightest degree affect Germany's action. The revelations which have just been made in Pretoria showing the duplicity of the British officials may have startled the German public, but they have not surprised the German government, whose communications from Pretoria have kept the German foreign office advised of even more than President Kruger has as yet chosen to publish.

Chamberlain's Policy Condemned.

The unanimous voice of the press condemns Mr. Chamberlain's want of tact and the clumsy and arrogant style of his treatment of President Kruger, whom Prince Bismarck described as the most astute diplomat he had ever met. The remission by President Kruger of the sentences of death pronounced upon the leaders of the Johannesburg reform committee has only found approval here as having been dictated by political prudence. The National Zeitung, in an article on the subject, says: "If the condemned men had been promptly executed their fate would have been partly due to Mr. Chamberlain, whose manner towards the Boers has forced them to show that their rights deserve equal consideration with those of the English." The Vossische Zeitung says: "Neither Great Britain nor the Chartered South Africa company had any right to expect that the lives of the condemned men would be spared and the convicts ought not to be pardoned. Rather, in the view of the comedy of the trial of Dr. Jameson in London, the government at Pretoria should deal with them severely."

Reinforcements to South Africa.

Gen. Von Hahnke, chief of the emperor's military cabinet, had a confer with Dr. Kayser, director of the colonial department of the foreign office, on Thursday upon a proposal to reinforce the troops in German South West Africa, where there are at present only 510 men, including the officers. After the conference between Gen. Von Hahnke and Dr. Kayser, Prince Von Hohenlohe, the imperial chancellor, discussed the subject with the emperor, and it is understood that they reached an agreement to send reinforcements to German South West Africa at once. The revolt of the tribes of Khavas and Herreros is spreading. Advices received by the government from Col. Leutwein, the chief functionary in German South West Africa, refer to the general agitation of the natives against Europeans and ask that more troops be sent to him immediately.

Prince George Critically Ill.

Prince George, eldest son of the Duke of Cumberland, underwent an operation at Omunden last Thursday and appeared to be rapidly recovering from its effects. On Saturday, however, alarming symptoms of pyaemia set in and he is in a critical condition. Freiherr von der Recke von der Horst, Prussian minister for the interior, has not yet received the reports on the Mutual Life Insurance company of New York which he requested to have submitted to him and the delay in receiving them retards his disposal of the cases of the American companies. The emperor and empress opened the international picture exhibition at Moabit at noon yesterday. Mrs. H. G. Squiers, wife of the second secretary of the United States embassy, gave birth to a son on Thursday. Mother and child are doing well.

Death of George S. Coe.

New York, May 4.—George S. Coe, for nearly thirty-five years president of the American Exchange bank of this city, died at his home at Englewood Cliffs, N. J., yesterday. The immediate cause of his death was paralysis, of which disease he had had several previous strokes. Mr. Coe was born in Newport, R. I., on March 27, 1817.

The Democrats of the City of Plainfield are requested to meet at the following named places in this city on Tuesday evening, May 5th, at eight o'clock to elect delegates to the State Convention to be held at the City of Trenton May 7th.

Third Ward, Revere House	1	"
Fourth Ward, Blimm's Hotel	2	"

J. E. MARTINE, Pres. Dem. Ass'n.
Michael Flynn, Secretary.

Democrats should attend the primaries tomorrow night.

Colored Republicans are anxious to have two representatives of their race on the State committee.

The McKinley movement is getting the delegates while Thomas C. Platt is telling how he is going to defeat the Ohio man.

John Kean is said to enjoy General Sewell's favor for chairman of the Republican State Convention. And that is half of election.

The Woman's Town Improvement Association is neither slow nor bashful. Therefore, they may be expected to accomplish something of what they undertake.

It is said that the Newark Daily Advertiser has been purchased by Sheffield Phelps, who recently became interested in the Jersey City Journal. There is plenty of room for improvement on the Advertiser.

At the present rate of improvement, the Plainfield police force will soon be the finest in the land. It is doubtful if there is another city of 13,500 population in the country that can compare with this municipal department of Plainfield.

The Prohibitionists are tenacious as a party organization. Year after year they hold their conventions and year after year they neither grow nor dwindle. Next Wednesday they will hold their State Convention at Trenton and elect delegates to the National Convention to be held at Pittsburg on May 28th.

The committee appointed by Governor Griggs to select a site for a home for indigent New Jersey veterans of the late war and their wives have visited Vineland and examined the old Sacred Heart College, which was recently abandoned. The Commissioners have decided to recommend the purchase of the college, and the next Legislature will be asked to make an appropriation.

This the time of year when all sorts of political rumors permeate the air, and among those that are current is one to the effect that an attempt will be made at the Democratic State convention on Thursday to explicitly instruct the National convention delegation to work for the nomination of President Cleveland for a third term. Little has been heard of such a rumor and it seems hard to give it much credence. If, however, such action is taken, it will be a surprise to the vast majority of the members of the party in New Jersey.

Rash and fickle is the young man who inserted this advertisement in the personal column of the New York Herald yesterday morning:

LIBERTY st. ferry, Monday noon, beautiful young lady, black dress, small bag, Broadway car; gentleman in gray craves honorable acquaintance. WESLEY RICHARDS, Plainfield, N. J.

Plainfield has long been noted for its handsome and amiable damsels, and it is rank treason for Wesley to allow Cupid to pierce his heart away from home. How different is the action of the German who is now advertising in The Daily Press for a wife. He is sensible, practical and patriotic of Plainfield.

Time and time again Plainfield has witnessed the erraticisms of Editor Runyon in the conduct of his paper when he was personally interested in some matter, but never before has he acted with such dishonor as that which characterized his action in the treatment of City Judge DeMeza in the News of Friday and Saturday. After publishing the prejudiced and onesided account of the Allen case on Friday, when he made no attempt to learn what the Judge had to say in reference thereto, he followed up the despicable action by refusing to publish the statement of Lawyer Hance on Saturday, which was a complete vindication for the Judge, but allowed his readers to infer that the charges of wrong doing still stood against Mr. DeMeza. Having injured Mr. DeMeza's character and business to a large extent by his willful publication of a prejudiced story, he viciously persisted in continuing the impression after the Judge's exoneration had been made by Lawyer Hance. A year ago The Daily Press insisted that Editor Runyon assumed to be a political Boss, and after events has proven the truth of their prophecy. Piqued at his failure to accomplish the nomination of a particular favorite of his at the last city election, he has resorted to tactics common to the lowest of political shysters in his endeavor to show the real party leaders that they ought to heed his ideas of party policy.

RARE ANIMALS.

Which European Menageries Would Like to Secure.

The following named animals are positively stated to be in no menagerie or zoological garden in the world except those of the Barnum & Bailey Greatest Show on Earth, and the two menageries of that show are also said to be the only complete ones ever collected. Here are the rare animals no one else possesses: guibs, jharals, addis, eland, giraffes, ostriches, Malay tapirs, saddle backs, wart hogs, hairless horse, three nosed and three horned steer, harnessed antelopes, brindle gnu, Johanna, the gorilla; blue-nosed mandrill, white haired gnu, and some other minor beasts, most all of which are coveted by the zoos of Europe. Besides these there are twenty-four elephants—more than half of all those on this continent, two droves of camels, a flock of ostriches, seven dens of performing wild beasts, 50 cages of other wild beasts and rare quadrupeds, and hundreds of soft footed or hay eating animals, such as llmas, alpaccas, guanacoes, buffalos, zebus, zebras, quaggas, deer, elk, etc., etc. The menageries alone are a study for old and young, affording, as it certainly does, the best opportunity in the country today for seeing the curious four-footed beasts of the earth. The menagerie tents this year contain also a new and delightful entertainment called Oriental India, in which a large number of the natives of that country are seen in their various domestic occupations, games sports and diversions. This exhibition is plentifully sprinkled with songs, dances and the playing of curious musical instruments. The dances are executed by some lovely Madras girls, and the famous silver dancers of Kandy. Queer looking Cotta dwarfs also perform an odd arm dance, too, meanwhile the musicians are performing on their queer instruments, Hindoo jugglers are executing all kinds of mystify feats of legerdemain. Natives of Columbo are climbing trees, high priests are showing religious rites and ceremonies in real Buddist temples, and other natives are doing many other things, the whole making one of the most picturesque, poetical and interesting exhibitions of far Eastern life ever seen. The regular circus and hippodrome performances are given in three rings three stages, and a race track, and comprise every kind of novel circus and aerial act with many new trained animal tricks, among the latter being 50 trained horses that perform in one ring and twenty-four elephants in three rings. Everything will be here Wednesday, with the parade in the morning.

WITH A BIG FIRM.

W. E. Lowe Enters into Partnership With Jonson & Higgins.

The Journal of Commerce and Commercial Bulletin on Saturday published the following about W. E. Lowe, of Park avenue, this city:

"The most important insurance brokerage combination which has been made for a long time was announced to the 'Journal of Commerce and Commercial Bulletin' last night. Mr. William E. Lowe becomes a partner in the firm of Johnson & Higgins, and will have charge of its fire insurance brokerage business everywhere. He will for the present continue in his office at No. 58 William street, but will ultimately join Johnson & Higging in one office.

"The Johnsons & Higgins firm therefore now consists of the following partners: Messrs. A. Foster Higgins, William Krebs, J. D. Barrett, John H. Gourlie, James B. Dickson, Stephen Loines, W. W. Curtin and W. E. Lowe. The firm is known among marine underwriters all over the world as controlling an enormous marine insurance business, and it has branch offices in the principal cities of the United States.

"Its influential connections have never heretofore been thoroughly and aggressively cultivated for fire business, and that they now will be is beyond question. Mr. Lowe brings to Johnson & Higgins the important American Sugar Refining Company account and quite a number of other large customers. Quite a number of brokers will feel uneasy over certain lines when they learn of the new combination."

—Wm. J. Stephenson has already earned an enviable reputation as a caterer, and now he has added a restaurant to his business. It is modern in appointments and excellent service and food will be found there.

THEATRICAL.

The swagger gown worn by Mrs. Wayne in set third of La Belle Marie, is a charming modernization of the Josephine style. The petticoat is of dull golden satin, draped with gold embroidered net. The bodice is of satin, overlaid with a heavy embroidery of gold, and the Josephine effect is achieved by the immense puffed sleeves of black velvet, and the unique use of the same material in a puff, a la tallion, across the low cut front of the bodice. The back is particularly original and effective. The velvet falls from an immense bow and forms a graceful and imposing train, with an effect that is unique and altogether charming. The sleeves are divided into double puffs by a row of huge brilliants, and Mrs. Wayne's famous white sapphires flash above the black velvet garniture of the waist.—Clara Belle. At Stillman Music Hall all this week, change of play nightly. Ladies free tonight. See newspaper adv.

It is a gala week at Proctor's Theatre, 23d street, resplended in new decorations of blue and buff and invincible as a family resort. Lottie Gilson is a name to conjure with. She is dainty and dressy, and her original songs are sung with a magnetism quite irresistible. John Kernell, the star of "The Irish Aldeman," has a witty monologue of song and story, and a collection of droll epitaphs. Humor is provided by Crimmins and Gore, Brown and Harrison, and the Hewetts. Burko, a comedy magician from Europe, makes his American debut. Others are Chas. M. Ernest, black-face comdian; De Camo, comedy juggler; Edward Clarence, with Edison phonograph novelties; Theodore, ventriloquist; Marion Eils, soap sculptress, and Gertie Harrington; Fanny Fields and Carrie Fredericks, serio-comics.

—The stated meeting of the Woman's Baptist Foreign Missionary Society of New Jersey will be held in the Baptist church at Paterson, Thursday May 7th. There will be morning and afternoon sessions. A number from this city will attend.

—The time of meeting of the Epworth League of Monroe Avenue chapel has been changed from 7:30 o'clock to 7:15 o'clock. This change is made necessary by the great interest thae has been shown in the meetings and is made so as to give all a chance to speak before the beginning of the regular church service.

Mrs. Florence Howe Hall, of Plainfield, delivered her very interesting lecture on "Personal Reminiscences of Distinguished People" in the Assembly Room on Saturday evening. Mrs. Hall is a very able speaker and kept her audience interested for nearly two hours.

Ever since Mr. Braker's pastorate here he has been handicapped, like all his predecessors, by the congregation sitting in the rear of the church leaving the front pews empty. No amount of invitations from Mr. Braker could change this old-established custom. So he very quietly went to work and when his congregation arrived for worship Sunday morning they found very pretty curtains, supported by gilded poles, stretched across the church shutting off the six last seats. Everyone wore a broad grin and good-naturedly went forward. If Mr. Braker succeeds, he will overcome a practice that has been a source of trouble for all his predecessors, as the room has always been too large for the congregation, except on special occasions.

AID FOR CUBANS

The Bermuda Again Outwits the Spanish Gunboats.

SUPPLIES SUCCESSFULLY LANDED

Picked Men from the Insurgents' Ranks Guard the Coast While the Supplies Are Taken Ashore—Success of the Cuban Loan.

New York, May 4.—The Cuban delegation in this city has received a dispatch saying that the steamship Bermuda, which left Jacksonville last Monday, has landed a large quantity of arms and ammunition and about ninety men in Mulatto bay on the north coast of the island in the province of Pinar del Rio. The dispatch says that the landing was made on Thursday without difficulty. The expedition was commanded by Brig.-Gen. Layte Vidal, a veteran of the ten years' war. Gen. Antonio Maceo's men were expecting the Bermuda, and picked troops patrolled the coast to drive off the Spaniards in case they should attempt to prevent the landing. Gen. Emilio Nunez superintended the loading of the Bermuda and accompanied her to Cuba. He served in a similar capacity when the Bermuda left this port on her first expedition, with Gen. Calixto Garcia in command. It is said that the Bermuda carried 1,000 rifles, 500,000 cartridges, two Gatling guns, many machetes, and 1,000 pounds of dynamite, besides uniforms, rubber coats and medicines. The arms, ammunition and supplies were landed in six big surf boats that were taken aboard the steamship at Jacksonville. She eluded two Spanish cruisers that were waiting for her outside the bar. A large body of Maceo's men greeted the expedition in Mulatto bay and assisted in landing the munitions.

Bid for All the Cuban Bonds.

Cubans at the junta headquarters, in New street, are pleased at the information that has leaked out that all the Cuban bonds lately put on the market by the revolutionary party have been asked for by one bidder, who offered 60 per cent. in cash for them. A confirmation of the news came from Benjamin J. Guerra, the treasurer of the Cuban delegation and also treasurer of the bond committee. B. J. Guerra yesterday said: "We have an offer from a single bidder for all the bonds that we have now on the market, and his offer is under consideration. We printed bonds worth $10,000,000 but decided to offer only $2,000,000. For the bonds now on the market we have sufficient bids. These are for all sums, but we have already one bid for the full amount. This bid came from a western man, who represents a syndicate of capitalists. He wants all of the two million and will pay 60 per cent. for them. He is now on his way to New York to perfect the transaction."

The Cuban Resolutions.

Since the passage by both houses of congress on April 6 last of the senate concurrent resolutions declaring that a state of war existed in Cuba and that in the opinion of congress the president should recognize the belligerency of the Cubans and tender his offices to Spain to bring about a recognition of the independence of the Cuban republic, no overt action has been taken by the United States, so far as known, unless the appointment of so prominent a personage as ex-Gov. Fitzhugh Lee as consul-general to Havana, can be so regarded. There is a widely prevailing impression that Gen. Lee will go to his post of duty in the double capacity of consul-general and special commissioner empowered to report directly to the president as to the exact condition of affairs in Cuba.

Awaiting the Queen of Spain's Speech.

Meanwhile considerable interest is felt as to the probable course of the Spanish authorities. The queen of Spain's speech, to be delivered at the opening of the Spanish cortes at Madrid on Monday, May 11, is expected to outline definitely the Cuban policy of the governmet. It is awaited here with considerable interest, especially as informal assurances are believed to have been given to the administration that Cuba is to be tendered almost as great a degree of autonomy in purely domestic affairs as the Dominion of Canada now enjoys in its relations with Great Britain.

Decline of the Cuban Budget.

The Cuban budget, it is shown, has been reduced from $46,500,000 for the fiscal year 1878-79, the closing of the last war, to a little more than $23,000,000 for 1893. The system of taxation in Cuba and Spain, it is claimed, could not be made exactly alike because direct-taxes are repugnant to Cubans, especially the tax on land which is the basis of the Spanish budget. The direct tax on rural property in Cuba is 2 per cent., while in Spain it ranges from 17 to 20 per cent. As revenue had to be raised in Cuba the income was sought from customs duties, but notwithstanding this in years when the greatest financial distress prevailed the Spanish government did not hesitate to sacrifice that income in order to meet the special need of Cuba's principal agricultural product when the reciprocity treaty with the United States was put into effect. Many Spanish industries had to be sacrificed in order that Cuban sugar could continue to find its chief market in the United States.

One of the Lost Florida Crew.

Newburyport, Mass., May 4.—The body of the unknown man found embeded in the sand on Salisbury beach Saturday night is undoubtedly one of the crew of the Florida which was wrecked in February. The condition of the body is such that identification is impossible.

There is more catarrh in this section of the country than all other diseases put together, and until the last few years was supposed to be incurable. For a great many years doctors pronounced it a local disease, and prescribed local remedies, and by continually failing to cure with local treatment, pronounced it incurable. Science has proven catarrh to be a constitutional disease and therefore requires constitutional treatment. Hall's Catarrh Cure, manufactured by F. J. Cheney & Co., Toledo, Ohio, is the only constitutional cure on the market. It is taken internally in doses from 10 drops to a teaspoonful. It acts directly on the blood and mucous surfaces of the system. They offer one hundred dollars for any case it fails to cure. Send for circulars and testimonials. Address F. J. Cheney & Co., Toledo, O.

He caught the infection and drew his sword. So we started boldly, and the result justified my confidence. We looked, no doubt, as like murderers as any who were abroad that night. Moving in this desperate guise we hastened up that street and into another—still pursued by the din and clangor of the bell—and then a short distance along a third. We were not stopped or addressed by anyone, though numbers, increasing each moment as door after door opened, and we drew nearer to the heart of the commotion, were hurrying in the same direction, side by side with us; and though in front, where now and again lights gleamed on a mass of weapons, or on white eager faces, filling some alley from wall to wall, we heard the roar of voices rising and falling like the murmur of an angry sea.

All was blurr, hurry, confusion, tumult. Yet I remember, as we pressed onwards with the stream and part of it, certain sharp outlines. I caught here and there a glimpse of a pale scared face at a window, a half-clad form at a door, of the big, wondering eyes of a child held up to see us pass, of a Christ at a corner ruddy in the smoky glare of a link, of a woman armed, and in man's clothes, who walked some distance side by side with us, and led off a ribald song. I retain a memory of these things; of brief bursts of light and long intervals of darkness, and always, as we tramped forwards, my hand on Pavannes' sleeve, of an ever-growing tumult in front—an ever-rising flood of noise.

At last we came to a standstill where a side street ran out of ours. Into this the hurrying throng tried to wheel, and, unable to do so, halted, and pressed about the head of the street, which was already full to overflowing; and so fought with hungry eyes for places whence they might look down it. Pavannes and I struggled only to get through the crowd— to get on; but the efforts of those behind partly aiding and partly thwarting our own, presently forced us to a position whence we could not avoid seeing what was afoot.

The street—this side street— was ablaze with light. From end to end every gable, every hatchment was glowing, every window was flickering in the glare of torches. It was paved, too, with faces—human faces, yet scarcely human—all looking one way, all looking upward; and the noise, as from time to time this immense crowd groaned or howled in unison, like a wild beast in its fury, was so appalling, that I clutched Pavannes' arm and clung to him in momentary terror. I do not wonder now that I quailed, though sometimes I have heard that sound since. For there is nothing in the world so dreadful as that brute beast we call the canaille, when the chain is off and its cowardly soul is roused.

Near our end of the street a group of horsemen, rising island-like from the sea of heads, sat motionless in their saddles about a gateway. They were silent, taking no notice of the rioting fiends shouting at their girths, but watching in grim quiet what was passing within the gates. They were handsomely dressed, although some wore corselets over their satin coats or lace above buff jerkins. I could even at that distance see the jewels gleam in the bonnet of one who seemed to be their leader. He was in the center of the band, a very young man, perhaps 20 or 21, of most splendid presence, sitting his horse superbly. He wore a gray riding coat, and was a head taller than any of his companions. There was pride in the very air with which his horse bore him.

I did not need to ask Pavannes who he was. I knew that he was the Duke of Guise, and that the house before which he stood was Coligny's. I knew what was being done there. And in the same moment I sickened with horror and rage. I had a vision of gray hairs and blood and fury scarcely human. And I rebelled. I battled with the rabble about me. I forced my way through them tooth and nail after Pavannes, intent only on escaping, only on getting away, from there. And so we neither halted nor looked back until we were clear of the crowd and had left the blaze of light and the work doing by it way behind us.

We found ourselves then in the mouth of an obscure alley which my companion whispered would bring us to his house; and there we paused to take breath and look back. The sky was red behind us, the air full of the clash and din of the tocsin, and the flood of sounds which poured from every tower and steeple. From the eastward came the rattle of drums and random shots, and shrieks of "A bas Coligny!" "A bas les Huguenots!" Meanwhile the city was rising as one man, pale at this dread awakening. From every window men and women, frightened by the uproar, were craning their necks, asking or answering questions or hurriedly calling for and kindling tapers. But as yet the general populace seemed to be taking no active part in the disorder.

Pavannes raised his hat an instant as we stood in the shadow of the houses. "The noblest man in France is dead," he said, softly and reverently. "God rest his soul! They have had their way with him and killed him like a dog. He was an old man, and they did not spare him! A noble, and they have called in the canaille to tear him. But be sure, my friend"—and as the speaker's tone changed and grew full and proud, his form seemed to swell with it—"be sure the cruel shall not live out half their days! No. He that takes the knife shall perish by the knife! And go to his own place! I shall not see it, but you will!"

His words made no great impression on me then. My hardihood was returning. I was throbbing with fierce excitement, and tingling for the fight. But years afterwards, when the two who stood highest in the group about Coligny's threshold died, the one at 38 and the other at 35—when Henry of Guise and Henry of Valois died within six months of one another by the assassin's knife—I remembered Pavannes' augury. And remembering it, I read the ways of Providence, and saw that the very audacity of which Guise took advantage to entrap Coligny led him in his turn to trip smiling and bowing a comfit box in his hand and the kisses of his mistress damp on his lips, into a king's closet—a king's closet at Blois! Led him to lift the curtain—ah! to lift the curtain—what Frenchman does not know the tale?—behind which stood the admiral!

To return to our own fortunes; after a hurried glance we pursued our way, and sped through the alley, holding a brief consultation as we went. Pavannes' first hasty instinct to seek shelter at home began to lose its force, and he to consider whether his return would not endanger his wife. The mob might be expected to spare her, he argued. Her death would not benefit any private foes if he escaped. He was for keeping away, therefore. But I would not agree to this. The priest's crew of desperadoes—assuming Pavannes' suspicions to be correct—would wait some time, no doubt, to give the master of the house a chance to return, but would certainly attack sooner or later out of greed, if for no other motive. Then the lady's fate would at the best be uncertain. I was anxious myself to rejoin my brothers, and take all future chances, whether of saving our Louis, or escaping ourselves, with them. United we should be four good swords, and might at least protect Mme. de Pavannes to a place of safety, if no opportunity of succoring Louis would present itself. We had too, the duke's ring, and this might be of service at a pinch. "No," I urged, "let us get together. We two will slip in at the front gate and bolt and bar it, and then we will all escape in a body at the back, while they are forcing the gateway."

"There is no door at the back," he answered, shaking his head.

"There are windows."

"They are too strongly barred. We could not break out in time," he explained with a groan.

I paused at that, crestfallen. But danger quickened my wits. In a moment I had another plan, not so hopeful and more dangerous, yet worth trying, I thought. I told him of it, and he agreed to it. As he nodded assent we merged into a street, and I saw—for the gray light of morning was beginning to penetrate between the houses—that we were only a few yards from the gateway, and the small door by which I had seen my brothers enter. Were they still in the house? Were they safe? I had been away an hour at least.

Anxious as I was about them I looked around me very keenly as we flitted across the road and knocked gently at the door. I thought it so likely that we should be fallen upon here, that I stood on my guard while we waited but we were not molested. The street, being at some distance from the center of the commotion, was still and empty, with no signs of life apparent, except the rows of heads poked through the windows—all possessing eyes which watched us heedfully and in perfect silence. Yes, the street was quite empty; except, ah! except, for that lurking figure, which, even as I spied it, shot around a distant angle of the wall and was lost to sight!

"There!" I cried, reckless now who might hear me, "knock! knock louder! never mind the noise. The alarm is given. A score of people are watching us, and yonder spy has gone off to summon his friends."

The truth was my anger was rising. I could bear no longer the silent regards of all those eyes at the windows. I writhed under them—cruel, pitiless eyes they were. I read in them a morbid curiosity, a patient anticipation that drove me wild. Those men and women gazing on us so stonily knew my companion's rank and faith. They had watched him riding in and out daily, one of the sights of their street, gay and gallant; and now with the same eyes they were watching greedily for the butchers to come. The very children took a fresh interest in him, as one doomed and dying; and waited panting for the show to begin. So I read them.

"Knock!" I repeated, angrily, losing all patience. Had I been foolish in bringing him back to this part of the town where every soul knew him? "Knock; we must get in, whether or no. They cannot all have left the house!"

I kicked the door desperately, and my relief was great when it opened. A servant with a pale face stood before me, his knees visibly shaking. And behind him was Croisette.

I think we fell straightway into one another's arms.

"And Marie," I cried. "Marie?"

"Marie is within, and madame," he answered, joyfully; "we are together again and nothing matters. But oh, Anne, where have you been? And what is the matter? Is it a great fire? Or is the king dead? Or what is it?"

I told him. I hastily poured out some of the things which had happened to me, and some which I feared were in store for others. Naturally he was surprised and shocked by the latter, though his fears had already been aroused. But his joy and relief, when he heard the mystery of Louis de Pavannes' marriage explained, were so great that they swallowed up all other feelings. He could not say enough about it. He pictured Louis again and again as Kit's lover, as our old friend, our companion; as true, stanch, brave, without fear, without reproach; and it was long before his eyes ceased to sparkle, his tongue to run merrily, the color to mantle in his cheeks—long that is as time is counted by minutes. But presently the remembrance of Louis' danger and our own position returned more vividly. Our plan for rescuing him had failed—failed!

"No! no!" cried Croisette, stoutly. He would not hear of it. He would not have it at any price. "No, we will not give up hope! We will go shoulder to shoulder and find him. Louis is as brave as a lion and as quick as a weasel. We will find him in time yet. We will go when—I mean as soon as—"

He faltered and paused. His sudden silence, as he looked around the empty forecourt in which we stood was eloquent. The cold light, faint and uncertain yet, was stealing in the court, disclosing a row of stables on either side, and a tiny porter's hutch by the gates, and fronting us a noble house of four stories, tall, gray, grim-looking.

I assented, gloomily, however. "Yes," I said, "we will go when—"

And I too stopped. The same thought was in my mind. How could we leave these people? How could we leave madame in her danger and distress? How could we return her kindness by desertion? We could not. No, not for Kit's sake. Because, after all, Louis, our Louis, was a man, and must take his chance. He must take his chance. But I groaned.

CYCLING COMMENT.

Forty of the Paramount Wheelmen, of Brooklyn, enjoyed a run to this city yesterday and were caught in the rain going home.

The Century Wheelmen of Philadelphia have the arrangements in charge for the eights annual Newark-Philadelphia Century run on Saturday, June 13th.

The following have recently purchased wheels of Lister, the North avenue cycle dealer: Scott Terry, a Keating; Eli Odam, a Lyndhurst, and Freeman Shotwell.

George Gideon, chairman of the L. A. W. Racing Board, was invited by George B. Cobb to act as referee of the Crescent Wheelmen's Decoration Day meet. Mr. Gideon has replied that he will be unable to act as he expects to spend that day and the following Sunday in a little outing in Virginia.

A device for tightening the spring and taking up the stretch in the leather of a saddle has been invented, says the New York Evening Post. The result has been accomplished by securing a movable hook to the under side of the plate on the front end of the saddle and operating the hook by means of a screw passing through it, the open end of the hook fitting over a loop formed on the front end of the saddle spring.

A number of the States are following New Jersey's example of protecting her wheelmen. The Rhode Island House of Representatives has just adopted the act imposing a fine of $20 upon each offender who throws into any highway any substance for the purpose of puncturing bicycle tires, or who carelessly places such things in the highway, thereby endangering the feet of animals or the tires of bicycles. Good for Rhode Island.

H. B. Mosher, of New York, one of the racing team of the Jersey Wheel Company, has made his headquarters in this city for the present and is now doing his road work. Mosher was one of the fastest riders in New York last year and made for himself an enviable reputation. He is a quiet, gentlemanly fellow and promises to be a great favorite with the Plainfield people. He is one of the most graceful riders on the track.

The delay in the preparing of the Crescent Oval has been a serious obstacle to the local riders who wished to train for the Decoration Day meet. Park avenue, between Holly's Corners and Randolph road, is in excellent condition. and on this smooth stretch of road Wm. M. McCutchen is doing his fast riding. Quite a number of the younger riders have accompanied him but few have tried to do any regular training. One of the few, however, is Lindley Hillman, who is fast becomin a speedy rider. He will be on the High School racing team and will be one of those to represent them at the New Jersey interscholastic meet. While riding with McCutchen, Raymond A. McGee has suddenly developed into a very fast rider, especially on short distances, and is almost able to hold his own with the Crescent Wheelmen's crack rider. McGee is doing some very fast work and may assist McCutchen in representing Leal's School at some of the interscholastic meets. Some of the older riders are doing their preliminary work on this road also. H. B. Mosher, the speedy New Yorker on the track team of the Jersey Wheel Company, was there Friday for a short spin.

However many cheap machines find their way into the market there will always be an increasing demand for high grade wheels. The appearance of these cheap wheels, in fact, cannot but help the more expensive ones for several reasons. In the first place, a low-priced bicycle attracts a buyer that would not otherwise be a rider, and consequently increases the number of cyclists. The chances are that he will become dissatisfied with his mount, and if able to purchase a high grade machine will do so; for, after experiencing the delights of cycling he will naturally obtain the best mount he can afford, while if he could not afford the lower priced wheel he would not buy a wheel anyway. Then, by attracting new riders into the field, the effort toward road improvement is increased, which reacts in favor of the cyclist, inducing those to take to wheeling who would not have done so because of the bad roads. The relation of cheap wheels to those of high grade may be illustrated in the case of watches. It is possible to buy a watch that will keep fairly good time for $2.50, and the high grade watch still costs in the vicinity of $100, and there has been no noticeable reduction in prices since the introduction of cheap watches. Lower priced timepieces have simply increased the number of users of watches, but the man who can afford to buy a good watch would do so anyhow.

WITH THE STEPPERS.

Some Good Races at the Driving Park Saturday Afternoon.

The horse loving public who journeyed to the Driving Park last Saturday afternoon to see the trots saw horse racing of a high order, and came home well pleased with the afternoon's sport. There were three races on the programme, but only two were finished and two heats trotted in the third. The first race on the card was the 2:30 class, trotting or pacing. Two horses answered the bell for this race, Robt. Fairbon's pacing mare, Lillian M., driven by himself, and Mr. Tunison's fast mare, Miss Tunison, with Charley Brower in the sulky. The race was won in straight heats by Lillian M. in 2:39¼ and 2:35 she having the foot of the party. But Mr. Tunison's mare, although out of her class, acted well, and showed her ability to take a fast mark in the near future. The 2:25 class, as was expected from the entries, was a horse race of the "Grand Circuit kind." Three horses scored for the word in this class. Namely: A. J. Branningham's bay mare, Myrtle Twig, driven by himself; Charley Brower, with Highland Boy, James Arkell's entry; while Johnny Osborne held the reins over St. Albans, J. W. Johnson's black stallion from the Woodbrook Farm. Although Myrtle Twig won this race in three straight heats, it was no easy thing as St. Albans and Highland Boy were right at her wheel the entire distance in every mile, and the black stallion made her trot the last heat in 2:27¼ to beat him home. The third and unfinished event was a match race between Morton, owned by James Arkell, and Nate Robin's gray gelding, by John Lambert, with owners driving. The first heat went to Mr. Robins in 2:42 and although he made a "Dan Mace" drive around the upper turn in the second heat, Arkell got Morton home first at the finish in 2:34½. The judges of the day were J. W. Johnson and Nate Robins. Timers, A. C. Vail and James Arkell. Next Saturday there will be a good and it is expected some fast time will be made if the track is in good shape, as the horses are all on edge and fit to go.

The summary is as follows:

2:30 Class—Trotting or Pacing.

Lillian M., br. m.	Fairbon	1	1
Miss Tunison, ch. m.	Brower	2	2

Time 2:39¼; 2:35.

2:25 Class—Trotting.

Myrtle Twig, b. m.	Branningham	1	1
St. Albans, blk. s.	Osborne	2	2
Highland Boy, sr. g.	Brower	3	3

Time 2:30¼; 2:27¼.

Match Race.

Nate, gr. g.	Robins	1	2
Morton, sr. g.	Arkell	2	1

Time 2:42; 2:34½.

Philip Jenner, of New Market, has sent his promising mare, by Young Stamboul, dam Vanity, by Bayonne Prince, to Peter Osborne, of the same place, to pit and drive in club races.

A. C. Vail was at the track Saturday with a handsome bay mare by Nelson, 2:09, out of a daughter of Almont, 33. He just got her home on Friday and will probably start her later on.

J. Osborne reports two foals so far this spring at the Woodbrook Farm, both by Nominee, 2:17¼, son of Stranger and Goldsmith Maid, the horse that J. W. Johnson sold to Russian parties this winter for a long price. The dam of one is by John Lambert and the other by Madison Wilkes. This last fellow is bred good enough to be the two-minute trotter.

James Arkell, of Westfield, is driving the fast pacer Royal, by Royal Fearnaught, on the road.

A. J. Branningham drove Mr. Higgins' Good Mare, by Happy Medium, a half-mile in 1:16 on Saturday. This mare has a mark of about 2:36, but they say she is good for three times in 2:30.

A little ill, then a little pill. The ill has gone, the pill has won. DeWitt's Little Early Risers the little pills that cure great ills. For sale by L. W. Randolph, 143 West Front street.

WHIST.

The second match of the contest at the Park Club between the long and short suit whist players resulted Saturday night in a victory for the former by five tricks. Captain Rogers feels greatly encouraged now that the teams are once more upon even terms having vowed to abandon whist if he loses the series. Tomorrow evening the third match will be played.

GOLF.

The golf links of the Hillside Tennis and Golf Club were informally opened Saturday afternoon and quite a number took advantage of the chance and spent the afternoon there. There is considerable talk of securing an expert to instruct the members in the game.

Warren Engine Nominations.

The annual meeting of Warren Engine Company, No. 1, for the election of officers, will be held tomorrow evening. The following nominations have been made: Foreman, B. F. Conover, J. D. The Gift of God.

Rev. W. C. O'Donnell preached the first of a series of sermons at the Monroe Avenue chapel last evening. His theme was "The Gift of God" and he divided it into three parts, the love of God, the gift of God, and God's purpose. The sermon was a very interesting one and was listened to by a large congregation, considering the inclement weather.

Netherwood Extension to Be Opened.

The first car over the Netherwood extension will leave at 6 o'clock this evening from North and Watchung avenues, and make a trial trip. Some city officials and a few guests will occupy the car. The car arrived this afternoon at 1:30, and has been changed to suit the new guage.

The following cases were adjourned one week: Long against Hale; Kinsey against Sturtevant; Miller against Cobb.

DISEASED EFFECTS THE GOOD.

A Delicate Operation Being Performed in the Hospital.

William H. Totten, of Somerset street, is the subject of a great affliction. Fifteen years ago he sustained an injury to his left eye, which resulted in the loss of sight to that member. About ten days ago his right eye became inflamed and thinking it was nothing more than a slight cold, satisfied himself by using domestic remedies. Dr. Ard examined it and advised him to go to the hospital for treatment, but Mr. Totten did not think the case a serious one. On Saturday last he again visited Dr. Ard and he was then practically blind. The doctor at once had him transferred to the hospital where he is working night and day in an effort to restore to Mr. Totten his sight. The chances are as present against the sufferer. The result of the doctor's examination brought out the fact that during the past fifteen years the right eye has gradually become affected on account of the injury to the other eye. No doubt if the trouble had been treated at the proper time, the eyesight would have been saved.

—Four new members were received by the Crescent Avenue church yesterday morning, two on confession of faith and two by letter.

—The Westfield Township Committee has refused to grant the New Jersey Mutual Trunk Line Telephone Company permission to erect poles along South avenue. The committee also directed the clerk to have an ordinance prepared raising the license fee for peddlers to $20.

We might tell you more about One Minute Cough Cure, but you probably know that it cures a cough. Everyone does who has used it. It is a perfect remedy for coughs, colds, hoarseness It is an especial favorite for children, being pleasant to take and quick in curing. For sale by L. W. Randolph, 143 West Front street.

APPEALING TO THE CITY.

TOWN IMPROVEMENT ASSOCIATION PETITION THE CITY COUNCIL.

The Women Want $200 Appropriated to Exterminate the Elm Tree Beetle.—Also Want Ordinances Printed Poster Form.

A considerable amount of business was transacted by the City Council at the regular May meeting held last evening and all the members were present except Mr. Tolles. After the minutes were read and approved, three applications for peddler's licenses were received and later they were granted. Residents of Clinton avenue asked for better fire protection and petitioned Council for two hydrants, one at Albert and West Front streets and another at Albert street and Dunellen avenue. They were referred to the proper committee and were granted later in the evening. The residents on East Front street, above Berckman, asked for two two-way hydrants. The petition was referred to the fire and building committee.

A communication was received from the Town Improvement Association, signed by Mrs. E. D. McCarthy. The association recommended the establishment of a city park in the centre of the square on LaGrande avenue at the intersection of Franklin place, Putnam and LaGrande avenues, also the printing of the city ordinances on posters for the benefit of the people so that they could be seen, and the appropriation of $200 for a preparation to spray the elm trees about the city and thereby get rid of the elm beetle. They suggested that the latter work be done under the direction of a specialist. The communication was referred to the street, laws and ordinances, lights and trees committees. The Plainfield Water Supply Company presented a claim of $119.07 for water used by Honan & Sons in connection with sewer work.

The claim was filed with the City Treasurer. W. E. Martin, of the Postal Telegraph Company, petitioned Council for permission to erect poles and string wires for the extension of their system. The matter was referred to the street committee, and Mr. Fisk reported later that if the company desired such privileges they should make application in the proper way, the application to be signed by an official of the company. The Clerk was instructed to hand the petition back and give Mr. Martin the proper information.

J. B. Coward presented a claim of $30 for damages caused to his building when Honan & Sons opened the sewer trench last year through Park avenue. It will be remembered that several panes of glass were broken in the upper story at 113 Park avenue and other damages resulted to the building. Mr. Fisk said that the city had no right to retain money in the case of a claim for damages.

Mr. Dumont stated it did not come under the contract and on his motion it was referred back to Mr. Coward.

The Council received and accepted an invitation from the G. A. R. to attend Memorial Day exercises at Music Hall.

Chandler W. Riker, of the Plainfield Street Railway, asked the Council for permission to extend their turnout 300 feet on the Plainfield side of West Front street near the Dunellen line. Mr. Fisk moved that if there was no legal objection the same be granted and that the company be allowed to place their tracks in the middle of the street, if permission was secured to extend the line through Dunellen. The motion prevailed.

The reports of the City Treasurer and Collector were received and filed, and a communication was presented by the Board of Health asking for an appropriation of $1,500 for the establishment of an emergency hospital. It was referred to the finance committee and Mr. Dumont reported that there was no money for such purpose and a tax could not be levied. The clerk was instructed to communicate the fact to the Board of Health.

Overseer of Poor Marx reported that 46 cases had been treated and that there were now 35 under the care of the city. Mr. Ginna reported in connection with it that $4,200 was expended last year and that fully as much would be needed this year, but the Council had cut down the appropriation to $4,000, making it possible for them to run behind.

The city physician's report showed that 26 cases had been treated and 9 examinations made.

Inspector of Buildings T. O. Doane reported that 25 permits had been granted during the last month.

Corporation Counsel Marsh presented a lengthy report regarding the cases of Michael Watson against the city, which had been settled as recommended by him previously. He also reported that in the case of Charles

ROYAL ARCANUMITES AT CRANFORD.

The Grand Lodge Session Attended by Many Delegates.

The greatest event of the year among the Royal Arcanum councils of New Jersey is the meeting of the grand officers. This year the little town of Cranford was given the honor. The entire town assisted in the reception and decorated extensively. A grand entertainment was held in the opera house in the evening and was attended by nearly a thousand members and their friends. The programme was followed by a banquet.

Guests were present from all over the State. Those from Plainfield were A. W. Rand, who is one of the grand officers; A. M. Ray and P. A. Emmons, the delegates from Plainfield Council; and the following regular members: Fred S. Green, H. E. Lovell, D. W. Littell, A. I. Littell, M. L. Bullock, Armstrong Mulford, J. R. Phillips and M. Leichtentritt.

The Grand Council is in session today.

For every quarter in a man's pocket there are a dozen uses; and to use each one in such a way as to derive the greatest benefit is a question every one must solve for himself. We believe, however, that no better use could be made of one of these quarters than to exchange it for a bottle of Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhœa Remedy, a medicine that every family should be provided with. HUM OF THE TROLLEY.

IT IS HEARD ON THE NETHERWOOD EXTENSION FOR THE FIRST TIME.

The First Car Left North Avenue at Six O'Clock Last Night and Was Filled With City Officials and Prominent Citizens.

If a stranger had visited the eastern end of Plainfield early last evening about six o'clock, he would have thought that some great event was about to take place. People stood along the streets with an expectant air and uneasily awaited the arrival of something. At the corner of North and Watchung avenues the crowd was the greatest. The trolley car on the new tracks of the Netherwood branch seemed to be the principal object of attraction. At about six o'clock the car was run up to the regular starting point and there was a general scramble for seats.

The crowd that filled the car was a varied one, ranging from the millionaire Councilman, Charles J. Fisk, to Estil's lightning messenger, Charles Remson. Among the well-known citizens that made up the party were ex-Councilman D. S. Roberts, a prominent member of the "Big Six" that granted the original franchise to the company, Street Commissioner R. A. Meeker, Councilman W. A. Westphal, Councilman J. B. Dumont, Councilman C. J. Fiske, J. Fred MacDonald, Dr. J. T. Fritts, of the Street Railway Company; S. C. Langhorne, ex Councilman J. B. Brown, of the Street Railway Company. Constable Amos Moffett, ex Councilman W. L. Hetfield, another prominent member of the "Big Six," Lawyer C. L. Moffett, G. W. V. Moy, Charles H. Hand, ex-Councilman, Elias Bird, George Tobin, A. D. Mallinson, J. J. Kenney, Theo. Smith and F. O. Smith. Superintendent John Adieman, of the Street Railway Company and Superintendent V. H. Yarnell, of the contractors, were present.

It was the first trial of the Netherwood extension and the residents gazed at the car as it sped by as if they had never seen an electric car before. The road-bed was remarkably smooth, and everybody on the car was highly delighted with the running of the car, especially on the level stretch on East Fifth street. The entire ride flavored very much of an ovation, and the people seemed to like to see the car running. A gentleman who lives on Putnam avenue was so much pleased that he rushed to the curb and waved an American flag as the car passed. He was answered by bows and cheers from the car. The car ran as far as Putnam avenue and Webster place and then returned.

S. C. Langhorne, who has greatly favored the extension from the start, was the first to pay the fare. The car was in charge of Motorman Hipp and Conductor Carty. The running time on the up trip was 5½ minutes.

MORE SUITS AGAINST WIENBERGER

Chief Grant Swears Out a Warrant for Selling Without a License.

In Justice New Corn's court a summons has been issued on the qui tam proceedings by Matthias Coon against M. Wienberger, the West Front street clothing dealer, for $100 for the violation of the act entitled an act to prevent and punish fraud in the sale of wearing apparel by itinerant venders and to regulate all such sales, passed May 23th, 1894. This suit is similar to the one brought by George Dean, prosecutor and published in these columns yesterday.

On complaint of the Chief of Police, George W. Grant, Justice Newcorn issued a warrant yesterday for the arrest of Wienberger, for violating the State law in having advertised a bankrupt clothing sale, and selling without a State or local license. Wienberger was arraigned before Justice Newcorn and remanded in the custody of Constable Mattox to appear Friday morning at 11:30 for a hearing.

Weinberger still continues his business.

—Randolph Jones, colored, was arrested by Marshal Hansen on Somerset street last night at 12 o'clock, for being drunk and disorderly. Justice Crosley fined him $3 this morning.

GRADUATING ARRANGED

BOARD OF EDUCATION SELECT JUDGES FOR COMPETITIONS.

Women Will Act as Judges in English Composition—Members Remember When They Were Young—Circus Half Holiday.

The completion of the sewer system makes it necessary to connect the public school buildings with the sewer and the preliminary arrangements for that and the details for the commencement exercises were the principal matters that came before the Board of Education last night at the regular May meeting.

Messrs. Probasco, Lounsbury, Abbott and Jenkins were present. There was the customary list of approved bills for small amounts which were ordered paid.

The City Collector's report was received and was as follows: Amount collected, $1,011.72; interest, $104; total amount, $1,115.72, deposited in the City National Bank.

The question of grading the property about the Irving School was revived by Mr. Lounsbury in his report as chairman of the building committee. He said that he had visited there last Saturday and conversed with James A. McGee, as representing the Monroe Avenue chapel. Mr. McGee was, he stated, willing to pay for the entire grading of Monroe avenue from curb to curb, if the Board would reduce the grade of their side and relay the sidewalk. Mr. McGee also agreed to lay the curb on the chapel side of Monroe avenue if the Board would curb the school property. Mr. Lounsbury then gave the estimate made by A. C. Lazzi, who is to do the work for Mr. McGee.

The grading on the Monroe avenue side, including the sidewalk and fifteen feet back, will cost $78. The relaying of the Fourth street sidewalk to grade, including the lowering of four trees, will cost $85. The estimate for the entire curbing is $161.04. If Lazzi is given the contract for grading and curbing he will do the grading for $150, instead of $163, and the curbing for $161, making a total of $311. This estimate caused a lengthy discussion. All of the members agreed that the work must be done some time, but the question was whether the expense of doing it at the present time would be best. The general opinion was that a better offer could never be secured, and it was decided on motion of Mr. Abbott to authorize it and to charge it to the property account.

Some of the residents of East Sixth street have long been desirous of having the fence in front of the Bryant School removed, and Dr. Jenkins brought forward their request. It was discussed but no action taken, as the members of the Board wished to thoroughly understand the situation before deciding.

The matters that need the serious attention of the Board at present, so Mr. Lounsbury stated, are the questions of sewer connections and the repairing of the Washington School. Those matters were also discussed, and while nothing definite was decided Mr. Lounsbury, as chairman of the building committee, was authorized to employ Mr. Karr, the New York architect, to draw up plans and specifications for water closets for all the schools and for the needed improvements in the Washington School. The latter will consist mainly in changes to the ventilating and heating apparatus, which are very poor. The furnaces are over twenty years old.

Another college, Mt. Holyoke, was reported by Superintendent Maxson as having placed the High School on the list of accredited schools for the classical course.

The arrangements for the commencement exercises are usually made by committees, and so President Probasco appointed the following committees: Hall, Dr. Jenkins; police, Mr. Abbott; music, Mr. Lovell and Dr. Probasco; programmes and tickets, Mr. Lounsbury; ushers, Mr. Clark.

The selection of judges for the different competitions was made, and it was also decided to give the women a chance on these committees to award the prizes. They were chosen as follows: For mathematics, W. M. Stillman; for English composition, Mrs. W. R. Richards, Mrs. W. H. Stirling and Miss Edith R. Leonard; for United States history, Superintendent H. M. Maxson; for penmanship, Rev. C. E. Herring, Dr. B. VanD. Hedges and Assemblyman W. R. Codington. The prizes will probably be given the same as last year. The speaker for the evening has not been definitely decided upon, but all the members acquiesed in Dr. Probasco's opinion that a professor and graduate of Princeton should be secured if possible.

Last, but not least, came a discussion as to whether school should be kept open on Wednesday when Bar-

THE PRISONER ESCAPED.

Marshal Hansen Got His Man to the Lockup When He Broke Away.

A most brutal and disgraceful fight occurred at the corner of Park place and Somerset street this morning about 2 o'clock, between a man named Thomas McGuire, a resident in this vicinity, and an unknown man from Newark. The two men, together with a woman and a dog, were returning to town. The men and woman were somewhat under the influence of that which intoxicates. Samuel Taynor happened along and passed some remark about the dog. This angered the Newark man and he struck Taynor. The two men engaged in a combat. Presently Marshal Hansen appeared and Taynor requested him to arrest the stranger. With much difficulty the man was taken to the station house, where another scuffle ensued. It is said that Taynor did not give the Marshal proper assistance, and in the tussle the man got away. He ran as fast as his legs could carry him and finally escaped. The police on this side were notified and made a search, but could not find the man. In the meantime McGuire and the woman escaped. The latter is known, but it is not known where McGuire lives.

PLEASURE AT HOPE CHAPEL.

Entertainment Given for the Benefit of the Library Fund.

The Young Peoples Society, of Hope Chapel, held an entertainment in the chapel evening, the proceeds of which will be devoted to the library of the chapel. A pleasing programme had been prepared and a fair sized gather- was present. The following was the programme; Overture, girl's orchestra, the Misses Burnet, Miss Cahoone, Miss Newman and Miss Noe; selection by Mrs. Frank Smith, an elocutionist from New York; vocal selection, Will Runyon; selection, Mrs. Smith, selection, boy's orchestra, Messrs. Lovell, Davis and Hillman; selection, Mrs Smith; selection, girl's orchestra; selection, Mrs. Smith. At the conclusion of the programme, ice-cream and cake were sold and quite a sum was thus realized, beside what was taken in at the door. The committee in charge consisted of Miss Mary Duvier, chairman, Miss Larina Gerhold, Miss Laura B. Ayres, Miss Edith Rosberry and Emil Droll.

MARTIN AND MARY DISAGREE.

And the Husband Pays $10 to the City for His Action.

There was war in Paradise Alley again last night and it took Patrolman Totten several minutes to quell the disturbance. The principal actors in this drama were Martin and Mary Stevens, father and mother of the famous "Mollie" Stevens. They had both been imbibing too freely and quarrelled over some household matter. Their high words disturbed the whole neighborhood and finally attracted the attention of Patrolman Totten. He finally settled the matter by arresting both of the offenders and locking them up. This morning they were arraigned before City Judge DeMeza on the charge of being drunk and disorderly. The city took $10 from Stevens instead of Stevens taking forty days. Sentence was suspended on Mrs. Stevens.

PRICE OF MEAT GOES UP.

Rates to the Retailers Increase $1 Per 100 Pounds.

Beginning with yesterday an advance of $1 per hundred on beef was asked from the retail butchers of this city by the wholesalers. Lamb that the butchers were heretofore purchasing for seven cents per pound was raised to ten cents. There is a strong probability that the prices will go yet higher. The retail dealers are very indignant, claiming that this is the season for the extensive use of ice, which is an additional expense to them, and they also say that there is no good ground for the advance.

For the Support of a Summer School.

There was an excellent attendance at the business meeting of the Primary Teachers' Union, held yesterday afternoon at the Y. M. C. A. building. The devotional exercises were conducted by Miss Kreetling and the lesson was taught by Mrs. Hurst. It was stated that nearly $50 had been raised for the support of the summer school to be held from the 13th to 20th of July. The constitution for the union was read and adopted in its entirety. The president, Miss Beeching, announced that the Teachers' Institute of Essex county would be held at Newark next Monday afternoon and evening, and the Plainfield union decided to attend in a body, leaving this city on the 1:16 p. m. train. Just before the meeting closed Mrs. Baker read a most excellent "Children's Day" programme which some of the teachers intend using on that occasion.

TOUR OF THE FREE LUNCH

POLICEMEN PARTAKE OF COFFEE AND SANDWICHES AT MIDNIGHT.

A Councilmanic Party Follow in Wake of the Caravansary and See How the Minions Appreciate the Things Provided

The novelty of a midnight lunch-wagon making its rounds and dispensing substantial food to the gallant blue coats was inaugurated last evening under the supervision of Councilman Barrows. A Daily Press representative was quietly informed as to how the plan would be put into action, and he was on hand promptly at 12 o'clock when the start was made from the Union County Country Club. The plan was a great success, which proves that when Mr. Barrows makes a move for improvements it is carried out to the letter. Max Wertz was the caterer, and he, together with Dominick McAfee, as driver, made the start. Behind them was a carriage containing Councilmen Barrows, Fisk and President Wm. G. E. See, of the Council, while following closely after was the representative of The Daily Press. The first stop was at the corner of Plainfield avenue and Seventh street, where Sergeant Kiely and Patrolman Lunger were met. The latter was evidently taken by storm and at first refused to take anything. It was soon learned the presence of visitors affected his stomach and he was so modest that his heart failed him. Sergeant Kiely's persuasive manner soon dispatched his bashfulness and he received his rations in a spirit of thankfulness. The next stop was at the corner of Liberty and West Third streets.

At this time Sergeat Kiely and Roundsman Frederickson acted as pilots and gave the officers a tip as to the approach of the lunch wagon. Patrolman Cash was the second man called upon and he lost no time in taking his midnight lunch. Continuing the procession moved to the corner of Front street and Park avenue where Patrolman Myers was on duty. He received his supply gratefully and appreciated the courtesy extended. A turn was then made into Park avenue where Patrolman Cooney was found. Joe was not hungry and declined with thanks the midnight meal. At the corner of Watchung avenue and Third street Patrolman Totten was called. He appreciated the lunch and thought it was just the thing. Patrolmen Fraleigh and Post on Watchung avenue were the next men seen and they were glad of the opportunity to receive the meal. From there the wagon went to the corner of Park avenue and Seventh street, the last stop, where Patrolman Flanagan met the dispensers of food. He was ready for his rations and received them gladly. The balance of the food was taken to the station house where Sergeant Kiely and Roundsman Frederickson enjoyed their portion of the repast. They had as their guest The Daily Press representative and all agreed that the excellent sandwiches and coffee were fit for a king.

The rounds were made in forty-five minutes and judging from what was seen the first trip was a great success. Each night the rounds will be made differently, so that no favoritism may be shown.

INDUSTRY MAY COME HERE.

Hastings Card Company Receiving Estimates for a Factory in This City.

Estimates are now being made for a new factory building for this city. Should it be built it will be occupied by the Hastings Card Company, of which Fred C. Lounsbury, of Plainfield avenue, is one of the principal owners. The company now has its factory at Rahway, but if suitable arrangements can be made the company will establish its factory here so that it can be under the personal supervision of Mr. Lounsbury. Nothing definite has been done yet but the matter will be settled in a few days.

—Those interested in the McAll Auxiliary are cordially invited to attend the annual meeting of the American McAll Association, in Westminster church, Elizabeth, on May 6th and 7th. Train leaves Plainfield at 8:48 a. m. There will be morning, afternoon and evening sessions.

Mr. D. P. Davis, a prominent liveryman and merchant of Goshen, Va., has this to say on the subject of rheumatism: "I take pleasure in recommending Chamberlain's Pain Balm for rheumatism, as I know from personal experience that it will do all that is claimed for it. A year ago this spring my brother was laid up in bed with inflammatory rheumatism and suffered intensely. The first application of Chamberlain's Pain Balm eased the pain and the use of one bottle completely cured him. For sale by T. S. Armstrong, druggist.

THEIR HOPES WANING

Disappointment Likely for Advocates of Early Adjournment.

THE SENATE HAS STILL MUCH TO DO

Dupont Election Case and Peffer's Bond Resolution the Obstacles—River and Harbor Bill Under Consideration To-day—Scene in the House.

Washington, May 5.—The river and harbor bill is the matter under consideration in the senate to-day, and, although it received two setbacks yesterday, Senator Frye, who has the bill in charge, is still confident that it will be passed very shortly without serious opposition. Those senators who had expected an early adjournment of congress received an intimation yesterday that they are likely to be disappointed, and their hopes are rapidly waning. It was conveyed to them by two yea and nay votes which demonstrated that an early adjournment is somewhat improbable. The first vote was on a motion made by Senator Turpie to proceed to the consideration of the Dupont election case. Senator Mitchell, who, as chairman of the committee on privileges and elections, has parliamentary charge of the subject, protested against this action on the part of Mr. Turpie as being discourteous to the committee, and as something unprecedented in his service in the senate. Opposition was also made to the motion as an obstacle to the passage of the appropriation bills; but, nevertheless, the motion was carried by a majority of one—32 to 31—and the Dupont case was taken up. It was, however, laid aside soon afterwards, under the terms of a compromise offered by Senator Gorman, by which the day after the passage of the river and harbor bill the Dupont case is to be taken up at the close of the routine morning business, and is to be considered until 5 p. m. of the following day when the vote is to be taken. The river and harbor bill was then taken up, but it had again to give way to Senator Peffer's bond resolution. The latter was laid before the senate as the unfinished business, and Senator Frye, having charge of the river and harbor bill, moved that the senate proceed to the consideration of that bill. The motion was defeated by eleven votes—twenty-eight to thirty-nine—and the bond resolution was proceeded with, Senator Hill speaking against it.

House of Representatives.

The first business before the house to-day is the consideration of a motion to set aside to-morrow and one week from to-morrow for the passage of private pension bills. Then will follow a vote on the motion to concur in the senate's amendment to the naval appropriation bill reducing the number of battleships authorized from four to two. The contested election case of Kirby vs. Abbott, from the sixth district of Texas, was yesterday reported from elections committee No. 3, declaring Abbott, dem., the sitting member, entitled to the seat, and it was agreed to. Mr. Boutelle called up the naval appropriation bill and asked that the house non-concur in the senate amendments and agree to the conference. In the course of the consideration of this matter there was something of a scene, by Mr. Quigg calling Mr. Boutelle to order, on the ground that he was reflecting upon the senate's action by his comments. An animated colloquy followed between Mr. Boutelle and the speaker, the latter explaining the philosophy and necessity of the rule, and the former contending that he had not violated it.

RHODES AND BEIT.

Their Resignations Demanded by the British South Africa Company.

London, May 5.—The directors of the British South Africa company held a meeting last evening at which they discussed the connection of Cecil Rhodes and Mr. Beit, officers of the company, with the projected overthrow of the Transvaal government. It was finally decided that Messrs. Rhodes and Beit should be requested to resign.

Gov. Morton Not the Benefactor.

Albany, May 5.—Gov. Morton's attention was called to a current newspaper report to the effect that he is the donor of a gift of $10,000 recently made to the Church of Our Saviour at Middleboro, Mass. The governor states that although Middleboro was the home of his ancestors, he has not made this gift and does not know who the real benefactor of the church is.

Peary Going to Labrador.

Washington, May 5.—The navy department has granted Civil Engineer Robert E. Peary, the Arctic explorer, six months' leave of absence with permission to go abroad. It is said that Lieut. Peary will go to Labrador and endeavor to secure for the Philadelphia Academy of Science an immense meteor which fell in that latitude some time ago.

BURIED UNDER RUINS.

Five-story Building Collapses in Cincinnati with Fatal Results.

Cincinnati, May 5.—A five-story brick building on Walnut street occupied on the first floor by a saloon, the upper stories being used as lodging quarters, was demolished last night about 7 o'clock by the explosion of a gasoline tank, and a number of persons were buried in the ruins, which soon took fire. With the aid of firemen the work of rescue was at once begun. Besides those who were in the building when it fell a number of people on the street were caught under the debris. A Brown street car was smashed, but no passengers were aboard and the conductor and motorman escaped injury. The bodies of R. A. Davis, a traveling salesman and Adolph Drach, proprietor of the saloon, and four unidentified bodies have been taken from the ruins, and it is known there are other victims still to be reached. About fifteen injured are in hospitals, several of whom will die.

ELECTRICAL EXPOSITION.

Interesting Features at Its Opening in New York City Last Night.

New York, May 5.—The National Electrical exposition was formally opened last night in the Grand Central Palace. The exposition is held under the auspices and in connection with the nineteenth convention of the Electric Light association. There were delegates present from over 10,000 electric light plants in the United States. The aggregate investment in the plants is $750,000,000. An immense crowd of people was present. Gov. Morton was present and occupied the dias on the third floor, which had been reserved for the guests and speakers of the evening. After introductory speeches Gov. Morton was introduced to the meeting. He was received with the greatest enthusiasm. "Mr. president and officers of the National Electrical exposition," he said. "I feel honored by the invitation which you have extended to me to release the electric current generated by the power of the great cataract at Niagara and, in accordance with your wishes, I now declare the exposition duly opened." Gov. Morton then pressed the golden key which was to cause artillery salutes simultaneously at San Francisco, New Orleans, St. Paul and Augusta, Me.

Indispensable

✻ In Diphtheria

is Bovinine, as has been attested by thousands of physicians. One of the many testimonials we have received is one from Dr. Arthur P. Ginn of Omaha, which reads, "I used Bovinine in several cases of diphtheria, and was successful with the cases. This to me is sufficient evidence of its value, no other food being used during treatment, except the milk used as vehicle for its administration."

being a food product, made by a special cold process from lean beef, is easy to take, quickly assimilated, speedy in its life-promoting properties, is invaluable as a life-giver when it is necessary to maintain strength to carry a patient over the crisis of a disease. In diphtheria and other throat troubles where it has become impossible to take nourishment by the mouth, Bovinine has sustained life for weeks, administered as an injection.

THE STETSON ESTATE.

Considerable Doubt as to Its Final Disposal.

NO WILL HAS YET BEEN FOUND

If None Turns Up Mr. Stetson's Heirs Will Take Possession of the Property—His Widow's Death Due to Grief.

Boston, May 5.—The death of Mrs. Kate Stetson, widow of the late John Stetson, which occurred yesterday, was due, it is said, to grief over the death of her husband, which occurred less than three weeks ago. Mrs. Stetson was Miss Kate Stokes. She was of southern birth and the daughter of S. I. Stokes the veteran circus manager. She was one of four sisters, all of whom achieved success as circus performers, one of whom, Belle Stokes, is on the stage. Her mother was Emma Stokes, once noted as the most accomplished woman horseback rider of her day. Lawyer Charles Pattee, custodian of Mr. Stetson's will, was stricken with pneumonia on the day of the late theatrical manager's funeral, and is today in a critical condition. Several days ago, at the request of the widow, M. O. Adams was appointed by the court ancillary executor in order that the probate of the will might not longer be delayed by illness of Mr. Pattee. The will, however, has not yet been probated. It is reported that on the day before he died John Stetson made a will in which his entire property was left to Mrs. Stetson, but her counsel have been unable to find any trace of this will, and if found there is, of course, a doubt as to legality in case of a contest, owing to Mr. Stetson's condition at the time of making of supposed will. But if such a will was made and is found and allowed, the Stetson estate goes to the natural heirs of the widow. If it cannot be found, and no other will turns up, Mr. Stetson's heirs, of course, will take possession of the property. The father of Mr. Stetson, who for some time managed the property, states that the estate will probably amount to over $500,000.

BELIEVE HE IS INSANE.

Stonington, Pa., Still Excited over Kostetter's Terrible Deed.

Shamokin, Pa., May 5.—The little village of Stonington is still greatly excited over the terrible tragedy of yesterday, and were it not for the belief that Kostetter is insane an effort to mete out summary justice to him would no doubt be attempted. He is closely guarded in jail and his sanity will be made the subject of inquiry. He has always been a sober and industrious young man and has held several positions of trust in this city. His wife had no warning of her coming doom, for Kostetter, after securing the breachloading gun, went directly to the room where his wife was sitting in a rocking chair. He stepped up behind her, took deliberate aim and blew her head half off. Kostetter's mother, who was just outside the door, ran into the house. Shocked by the terrible spectacle which met her gaze she threw up her hands and, uttering a loud cry, fell dead at the feet of her son.

NEW LONDON'S CELEBRATION.

The City in Gala Attire for To-morrow's Festivities.

New London, Conn., May 5.—The city is profusely decorated in preparation for the 250th anniversary celebration to-morrow, the buildings on the principal streets being very generally decorated and a large number of private residences handsomely trimmed with flags and bunting. The streets are thronged, showing the presence of a large number of strangers here to witness the unveiling of the soldiers' monument and laying of the cornerstone of the Winthrop statue.

Sheldon Inquiry Adjourned.

Weedsport, N. Y., May 5.—The inquiry into the death of Mrs. Eva Sheldon has been adjourned until May 12. Frank Sheldon, husband of the dead woman, says he had no quarrels with his wife. William Sheldon, the youngest son, contradicts his father's story. The district attorney says there are very many suspicious circumstances surrounding the shooting.

Navy Promotions.

Washington, May 5.—The following navy promotions have resulted from the death in Philadelphia of Commander Felix McCurley: Lieutenant-Commander S. N. Ackley to be commander; Lieutenant C. G. Rowman to be lieutenant commander; lieutenant (junior grade) Herman Dressel, to be lieutenant, and Ensign H. A. Bispham to be lieutenant (junior grade).

Site Selected for the Slocum Statue.

Gettysburg, Pa., May 5.—Gen. Daniel E. Sickles and the other members of the New York state Gettysburg battlefield commission have located the site for the $25,000 statue of Gen. Henry W. Slocum, which the Empire state will erect. It will stand on Stevens knoll, which is the elevation just west of Culp's hill.

The new Board of Aldermen of Rahway organized last night by re-electing President Holmes and City Clerk S. Rusling Ryno.

Chancellor McGill has appointed Martin P. Gray, of Camden, a vice-chancellor, to fill the vacancy created by the last Legislature. This completes the Chancellor's staff.

Frederick C. Marsh, of Elizabeth, and James E. Martine, of this city, are mentioned as possible delegates to the Democratic National Convention from the Eighth Congressional District.

Both the New York and Plainfield police forces are engaged in putting down the free lunch. But their methods and objects are somewhat different. The Plainfield minions have the most agreeable task.

The latest slate of delegates at large who are out to be elected on Thursday at the Democratic State Convention is Allan McDermott, United States Senator James Smith, Frederick Marsh, of Elizabeth, and either Attorney General John P. Stockton or Judge Howard Carrow, of Camden, says The Herald.

It does not seem practical, as the Trenton True American advocates, for the Democratic State Committee to resign as a body in order to infuse new blood into the leadership of the party. There should be, at least, a few of the older heads left who are versed by experience in political strategy, to direct the important campaign about to be inaugurated.

Every Jerseyman will hope that the bill to prevent the sale of convict-made goods outside the State of their manufacture will become a Federal law. The measure is in the hands of Representative Gardner, of this State, a good friend of those who seek to check convict competition with honest labor. The Federal Government cannot, of course, interfere with State industries, but it can exercise the right of control over inter-State commerce, to prevent the sale of these prison productions outside the State. Mr. Gardner says very truly that until this sale of convict goods in localities remote from the prisons is stopped, the harm done to honest industries cannot be effectively dealt with.—Newark Call.

A New Jersey inventor now proposes to do away with the antiquated mules which have hauled canal boats ever since the adoption of that means of transportation over inland waterways. Wm. Elmer, Jr., of Trenton, declares that the canal boat of the future shall be propelled by electricity and cables. A patent has been granted him for his new method of canal boat propulsion. He proposes to place these craft upon traction wheels and tracks on the bed of the canal, a trolley pole extending or projecting above the deck, a cable supported near the surface of the water to pass longitudinally through the hull and electric apparatus in the boat for the purpose of engaging the cable upon a sheave or wheel. A current of electricity in an ordinary trolley wire is to pass down into the boat and operate motors which turn the wheel or wheels engaging the stationary cable and thus propelling the craft.

If one of the petitions of the Woman's Town Improvement Association to the Common Council last night is a fair criterion of their ideas of municipal government, it must be acknowledged that they are woefully lacking in the sense of economy and practibility. They ask that the city ordinances be printed in posterlike form and be stuck up around the city like auction bills so that people may acquaint themselves with the details of the act. It is a ridiculous suggestion and a tacit admission that Plainfielders do not read newspapers. The Press hastens to dispel any such impression though, and insists that the publication of the city ordinances in the local newspapers is sufficient medium for people to know of their prescriptions. What is really needed is the puclication of a pamphlet each year containing the ordinances to date, and which can be referred to at anytime.

APPEALING TO THE CITY.

Schipper, et als., against the city of Plainfield and the street railway, in which a city railway ordinance was attacked, the city was prepared at any time to proceed with argument.

By resolutions the fire and buildings committee were authorized to purchase 1,500 feet of hose at a cost not to exceed 65 cents a foot, and make repairs on the West Second street engine house at a cost not to exceed $300.

The contract of the N. Y. & N. J. Telephone Company, agreeing to take full charge of the fire alarm system for $37.50 per month, was presented, and on motion of Mr. Fisk the terms were agreed to and the form was referred to the corporation counsel for certification.

Mr. Dumont made a motion that the note of $4,000 now due be renewed, and that two warrants, one for $2,000 and the other for $9,000 be drawn, the same to be charged to the sewer account. The motion prevailed.

Mr. Frost stated that the residents of Stelle avenue had asked for sewers and he understood they were willing to pay the cost of having them built if permission would be given them. Mr. Dumont moved that if the petitioners would construct the sewers at their own expense, the sewer committee be authorized to give them permission to have it done. It was so ordered.

Mr. Frost thought it would be a good idea to charge property owners $1 for making connections to the sewer from the curb to the house. It was done in other places and he offered a resolution that $1 be charged each property owner after May 15th. Mr. Fisk questioned the right to charge any amount and on his motion the matter was referred to the Corporation Counsel, he to report in one week. Mr. Fisk then moved that when Council adjourn it be to meet Monday evening May 11th. It was so ordered.

Mr. Barrows introduced an ordinance amending the police ordinance and defining the duties of the Police Board. It provides for the imposing of fines not to exceed $5 on policemen who violate any of the rules governing that body. All complaints are to be filed with the City Clerk and are to be thoroughly investigated both by the Board and the Council. It places the department under the control of the Board instead of the Mayor. The ordinance was passed on first and second readings and ordered engrossed and advertised. The sidewalk ordinance was called up by Mr. Fisk and on his motion it was rescinded. He offered another ordinance in its place which eliminates all injustice found in the other and provides for the outlying districts. The ordinance passed its first and second readings and was ordered engrossed and advertised.

Two petitions were received from residents of Netherwood. One stated that over 7,000 feet of sidewalk had been laid and other improvements made, while the other was in the form of an objection to the sidewalk ordinance previously killed. Both were received and filed.

Chief T. O. Doane presented a list of the various officers elected by the different fire companies and asked that the same be confirmed by the Council, which was done. Council then adjourned.

num's circus is in town. Dr. Jenkins believed that the children should be given an entire holiday, but the rest thought that school should be held as usual in the morning, but be dismissed for the rest of the day at noon. As for the parade in the morning, the the recess will be arranged so as to occur at that time, for all the members of the board agreed that the parade of a large circus was well worth seeing. They had evidently not forgotten their younger days when they themselves used to follow the parades. The board then went into executive session.

COSTLY MARDIGRAS PAGEANT.

New Free Street Parade of the Barnum & Bailey Show.

With the usual disregard of expense and with the energy that has characterized every effort of Barnum & Bailey, they have designed a new street parade for the pleasure of the people, and when it is stated that it is freely offered upon the same generous scale as the performances within the tents, one can easily imagine its magnificent splendors. All the crowned heads of the world—the reigning sovereigns—in coaches of state, in royal robes, on horseback surrounded with their escorts, the military uniforms of all nations, in groups and in picturesque oriental style, are represented in the most truthful and correct manner, together with a magnificent display of open dens of wild beasts and carved golden chariots, containing the splendid zoological collection, followed by twenty-four elephants, the allegorical chariots illustrating nursery rhymes and children's fairy stories, together with the Duryea Motor wagon or horseless carriage, the identical vehicle winning the race in November last. As the bills say "It is worth coming miles to see, and once seen never forgotten." The parade will take place about 9 o'clock tomorrow morning.

SCAVENGER LIVER.

Your Liver Will Cleanse Your System if It's Kept Well.

Your liver is a storehouse and a scavenger. It stores up digested food for use when wanted. It arrests and throws out dangerous poisons which are trying to get into your circulation.

Indigestion disorders your liver, by creating poisons that paralyze it. Biliousness, and other disorders, are caused by these and other poisons passing your liver and infecting your whole system.

This is a simple explanation of many disorders which often seem incurable. But they are only incurable because not understood. If you will treat your stomach with Shaker Digestive Cordial, all these disorders will disappear. The cause will have been removed.

Shaker Digestive Cordial is a gentle, vegetable tonic, which aids you to digest your food. It cures the disorders caused by the poisons of undigested food, and prevents your stomach from disordering your liver.

It relieves almost immediately the following symptoms, viz.: headache, dizziness, nausea, mental depression, weakness, lethargy, fever, stomach, ache, bad taste, flatulence, constipation, loss of appetite, jaundice, emaciation, general debility, nervousness, neuralgia, offensive breath, anaemia, rheumatism, etc.

It makes you feel well and strong. It cures you when nothing else will.

All druggists. Ten cents for a trial bottle.

Write for book about indigestion to The Shakers, 30 Reade St., New York.

—The Young Ladies' Mission Circle of the First M. E. church will hold a dime sociable on Thursday evening.

A. L. Wooster, a prominent citizen of Osseo, Mich., after suffering excruciatingly from piles for twenty years, was cured in a short time by using DeWitt's Witch Hazel Salve, an absolute cure for all skin diseases. More of this preparation is used than all others combined. For sale by L. W. Randolph, 143 West Front Street.

THE NEW BANK BUILDING.

Description of the Interior of the First National Bank.

Strength and beauty will be happily combined in the new building of the First National Bank, and it will take an enterprising bank robber to make away with any of the funds left there for safe keeping. The exterior of the building is handsome but it gives no idea of the appearance within. The visitor enters through the large double oak doors on the left and finds the interior fashioned after the style of the usual bank with the long row of desks with the open metal work in front of them to keep the light fingers of inquisitive individuals off the desks. The decorations of the room are beautiful. The ceiling is paneled while delicately carved cornices and capitals are arranged with artistic effect. The walls and ceiling are tinted a pale cream with the ornamented work touched with gold. The front of the counter where the clerks are seated is made on handsome slabs of onyx. The base of the wall on the other side, to the height of about three feet, is made of the same kind of marble. The desks and wood work are all oak. The entire room is, at night, brightly illuminated with electric lights.

There are many conveniences that are not apparent at first sight. A speaking tube runs frrm the director's room to the desk of the cashier with branches to all the desks of the different tellers and clerks. Instead of a whistle in the pipe, an electrical buzzer attracts attention. Close by the desks of the cashier and receiving teller are electrical floor connections by which teller or cashier can sound a long alarm by merely pressing his foot should the muzzle of a loaded revolver suddenly appear through the opening in the front of his desk. The door at the farther end admitting people to the coupon rooms can be opened from several of the desks by merely pushing a button. These coupon rooms are wonderful inventions for here the customer may examine the contents of his safe deposit compartment in seclusion.

The safes are perhaps the most wonderful of anything in the building. In the front part of the office is the money safe with open spaces on three sides, top and bottom. First comes the immense outside door, weighing several tons, which is fastened with both time and combination locks. A smaller door with two combination locks comes next and then a gate of street bars appears fastened with a Yale lock. This admits to the vault in which are the money compartments on each side, each fastened with a combination lock. A second safe, somewhat smaller, with but a single door, is made to contain the books. In the rear is the large safe deposit vault built on the same plan as the money safe only larger. It also has a time lock. Inside are three hundred compartments of different sizes, all locked. The safes are the very latest style of burglar proof safes and are perfectly fire proof.

The directors will occupy a small, bright room next to the safe deposit vault.

There is more catarrh in this section of the country than all other diseases put together, and until the last few years was supposed to be incurable. For a great many years doctors pronounced it a local disease, and prescribed local remedies, and by continually failing to cure with local treatment, pronounced it incurable. Science has proven catarrh to be a constitutional disease and therefore requires constitutional treatment. Hall's Catarrh Cure, manufactured by F. J. Cheney & Co., Toledo, Ohio, is the only constitutional cure on the market. It is taken internally in doses from 10 drops to a teaspoonful. It acts directly on the blood and mucous surfaces of the system. They offer one hundred dollars for any case it fails to cure. Send for circulars and testimonials. Address F. J. Cheney & Co., Toledo, O.

BIG FIRES!

Great Fires Are Constantly Burning.

Still They Will Go Out in Time if Not Replenished—Food is Fuel for the Body.

History records the occurrence of most disastrous fires. A few times our own country has been visited in this way with tremendous force. Yet how insignificant they seem when compared to the raging fires of the sun. A recent writer in one of our monthly journals, illustrates the enormous heat which the sun gives out, as follows: he says that if all the coal which exists on this globe could be placed in one mass, and then immediately burned up, it would not produce as much heat as the sun throws off into space in one-tenth of a second. Of course, we cannot comprehend what this means. But there is another fire constantly burning, of which many of us are not aware, although we live very close to it.

We all know that the human body is warmer than the surrounding atmosphere; while during cold weather the difference is very marked. What keeps the body warm? Because it is constantly burning up.

We replenish the fire in the stove by adding more coal or wood. The oxygen of the air unites with this fuel and heat is produced. The fuel for the body is our food; and the oxygen obtained from the air we breathe combines with it and heat is produced. This heat is constantly escaping from the skin. During summer we dress lightly to aid its escape. During winter we put on flannels, because wool is not a good conductor of heat, and will not allow it to escape so freely from the surface of the body.

If a person is plump in flesh, that is, if he has a layer of fat just beneath the skin, he has a medium which holds in the heat of the body, as a layer of wool does when placed on the outside of the skin. Persons who are plump in flesh do not shiver with every cool, invigorating breeze. Neither do they require so much food, for as the heat cannot escape so readily, so it is not necessary to add as much fuel. Plumpness means protection; defense against coughs and colds; shelter for an escape from neuralgia and sciatica; a shield to throw off nervous prostration; better security from the germs of consumption; an escape from a thousand aches and pains which cling to a body that is poorly nourished. Plumpness is prosperity, thrift, good nature, happiness.

Scott's Emulsion of Cod-liver Oil with Hypophosphites will not make you over-fat, simply plump, just about right. It puts that coat of fat over the body, pushes up the skin, and removes wrinkles and angles.

Scott's Emulsion contains more pure Norwegian Cod-liver Oil than any other emulsion in the world, that will stand the test of time as being a perfect inseparable emulsion. Ask your doctor

So that was settled. I had already explained our plans to Croisette; and now as we waited he began to tell me a story, a long, confused story about Mme d'O. I thought he was talking for the sake of talking—to keep up our spirits—and I did not attend much to him, so that he had not reached the gist of it, or at least I had not grasped it, when a noise without stayed his tongue. It was the tramping of footsteps, apparently of a large party in the street. It forced him to break off, and promptly drove us all to our posts.

But before we separated a slight figure, hardly noticeable in the dim, uncertain light, passed me quickly, laying for an instant a soft hand in mine as I stood waiting at the gates. I have said I scarcely saw the figure, though I did see the kind, timid eyes, and the pale cheeks under the hood; but I bent over the hand and kissed it, and felt, truth to tell, no more regret nor doubt where our duty lay. But stood waiting patiently.

CHAPTER IX.

THE HEAD OF ERASMUS.

Waiting, and waiting alone! The gates were almost down now. The gang of ruffians without, reinforced each moment by volunteers eager for plunder, rained blows unceasingly on hinge and socket; and still hotter and faster, through a dozen rifts in the timbers, came the fire of their threats and curses. Many grew tired, but others replaced them. Tools broke, but they brought more and worked with savage energy. They had shown at first a measure of prudence; looking to be fired on, and to be resisted by men, surprised, indeed, but desperate; and the bolder of them only had advanced. But now they pressed around unchecked, meeting no resistance. They would scarcely stand back to let the sledges have swing; but hallooed and ran in on the creaking beams and beat them with their fists whenever the gates swayed under a blow.

One stout iron bar still held its place. And this I watched as if fascinated. I was alone in the empty courtyard, standing a little aside, sheltered by one of the stone pillars from which the gates hung. Behind me the door of the house stood ajar. Candles, which the daylight rendered garish, still burned in the rooms on the first floor, of which the tall narrow windows were open. On the wide stone sill of one of these stood Croisette, a boyish figure, looking silently down at me, his hand on the latticed shutter. He looked pale, and I nodded and smiled at him. I felt rather anger than fear myself; remembering, as the fiendish cries half-deafened me, old tales of the Jacquerie and its doings, and how we had trodden it out.

Suddenly the din and tumult flashed to a louder note; as when hounds on the scent give tongue at sight. I turned quickly from the house, recalled to a sense of the position and peril. The iron bar was yielding to the pressure. Slowly the left wing of the gate was sinking inwards. Through the widening chasm I caught a glimpse of wild, grimy faces and bloodshot eyes, and heard above the noise a sharp cry from Croisette—a cry of terror. Then I turned and ran, with a defiant gesture and an answering yell, right across the forecourt and up the steps to the door.

I ran the faster for the sharp report of a pistol behind me, and the whirr of a ball past my ear. But I was not scared by it: and as my feet alighted with a bound on the topmost step, I glanced back. The dogs were halfway across the court. I made a bungling attempt to shut and lock the great door—failed in this; and heard behind me a roar of coarse triumph. I waited for no more. I darted up the oak staircase, four steps at a time, and rushed into the great drawing-room on my left, banging the door behind me.

The once splendid room was in a state of strange disorder. Some of the rich tapestry had been hastily torn down. One window was closed and shuttered; no doubt Croisette had done it. The other two were open—as if there had not been time to close them—and the cold light which they admitted contrasted in ghastly fashion with the yellow rays of candles still burning in the sconces. The furniture had been huddled aside or piled into a barricade, a chevaux de frise of chairs and tables stretching across the width of the room, its intertisces stuffed with, and its weakness partly screened by, the torn-down hangings. Behind this frail defense, their backs to a door which seemed to lead to an inner room, stood Marie and Croisette, pale and defiant. The former had a long pike; the latter leveled a heavy, bell-mounted arquebuse across the back of a chair, and blew up his match as I entered. Both had in addition swords. I darted like a rabbit through a little tunnel left on purpose for me in the rampart, and took my stand by them.

"Is all right?" ejaculated Croisette, turning to me nervously.

"All right, I think," I answered. I was breathless.

"You are not hurt?"

"Not touched!"

I had just time to draw my sword before the assailants streamed into the room, a dozen ruffians, reeking and tattered, with flushed faces and greedy, staring eyes. Once inside, however, suddenly—so suddenly that an idle spectator might have found the change ludicrous—they came to a stop. Their wild cries ceased, and tumbling over one another with curses and oaths they halted, surveying us in muddled surprise; seeing what was before them, and not liking it. Their leader appeared to be a tall butcher, with a pole-ax on his half-naked shoulder; but there were among them two or three soldiers in the royal livery and carrying pikes. They had looked for victims only, having met with no resistance at the gate, and the foremost recoiled now on finding themselves confronted by the muzzle of the arquebuse and the lighted match.

I seized the occasion. I knew, indeed, that the pause presented our only chance, and I sprang on a chair and waived my hand for silence. The instinct of obedience for the moment asserted itself; there was a stillness in the room.

"Beware!" I cried, loudly—as loudly and confidently as I could, considering that there was a quaver at my heart as I looked on those savage faces, which met and yet avoided my eye. "Beware of what you do! We are Catholics one and all like yourselves, and good sons of the church. Ay, and good subjects, too! Vive le roi, gentlemen! God save the king! I say." And I struck the barricade with my sword until the metal rang again. "God save the king!"

"Cry Vive la Messe!" shouted one.

"Certainly, gentlemen!" I replied, with politeness. "With all my heart. Vive la Messe! Vive la Messe!"

This took the butcher, who, luckily, was still sober, utterly aback. He had never thought of this. He stared at us as if the ox he had been about to fell had opened its mouth and spoken, and, grievously at a loss, he looked for help to his companions.

Later in the day, some Catholics were killed by the mob. But their deaths as far as could be learned afterwards were due to private feuds. Save in such cases—and they were few—the cry of Vive la Messe! always obtained at least a respite; more easily, of course, in the earlier hours of the morning when the mob were scarce at ease in their liberty to kill, while killing still seemed murder, and men were not yet drunk with bloodshed.

I read the hesitation of the gang in their faces; and when one asked roughly who we were, I replied with greater boldness: "I am Anne de Caylus, nephew of the Vicomte de Caylus, governor, under the king, of Bayonne and the Landes!" This I said with what majesty I could. "And these"—I continued—"are my brothers. You will harm us at your peril, gentlemen. The vicomte, believe me, will avenge every hair of our heads."

I can shut my eyes now and see the stupid wonder, the balked ferocity of those gaping faces. Dull and savage as the men were they were impressed; they saw reason indeed; and all seemed going well for us when some one in the rear shouted: "Cursed whelps! Throw them over!"

I looked swiftly in the direction whence the voice came—the darkest corner of the room—the corner by the shattered window. I thought I made out a slender figure, cloaked and masked—a woman's it might be, but I could not be certain—and beside it a couple of sturdy fellows, who kept apart from the herd and well behind their fuglemen.

CYCLING COMMENT.

Entries for the Millburn road race will close on May 16th.

Robert Jackson, of Spooner avenue, is riding a new Keating wheel.

Thomas Quinn, of Park avenue, has purchased a new Spalding wheel.

C. A. Baynon, of LaGrande avenue, has received a new America wheel.

Harry Vail and Ralph Tolles rode their wheels to New Brunswick on Sunday.

The Cincinnati detective bureau will hereafter furnish bicycles to all of their detectives.

It is expected that the entries in the Irvington-Millburn race this year will number nearly 150.

You will find a full line of boys' wheels at the salesrooms of the Jersey Wheel Company on North avenue.

Charles Butts and N. T. Pike, of East Front street, rode their wheels to Bloomfield today and called on friends.

The Hillside Wheelmen, of Jersey City, have disbanded. There is a likelihood of its being reorganized in the near future.

Manhattan Beach is the place and May 27th the date selected for holding the Intercollegiate Amateur Athletic Association's bicycle meet.

Willie Sanger, a brother of the famous Walter Sanger, will probably be seen on the circuit this year, having signed with a Milwaukee bicycle concern.

A large gang of men started work yesterday on the Crescent Oval and Wm. Hand, who is in charge, promises that the track will be in ridable shape tomorrow.

The Riverside Wheelmen, of New York, gave up their National circuit date of September 19th, and took a date in July. The Quill Club Wheelmen took the September date and will give a monster meet.

The American Wheelmen tells of the following remarkable bell seen on the Boulevard in New York: "A rider was seen on the boulevard last week with probably as unique a bell as has ever been seen on a wheel. It was a gong, such as are used on fire engines, and was worked with an electrical apparatus. When approaching a crossing he would simply press a button, and the sound which emenated from the bell was loud enough to be heard for half a mile. He had the roadway to himself most of the time."

AMONG THE STEPPERS.

J. W. Johnson's string of trotters, in charge of John Osborne, are being worked over the the home track this spring at the Woodbrook Farm.

H. F. Johnson is driving the well-known sortel gelding "Colonel" on the road this spring. "Colonel" looks fine as silk and can trot in 2:30 at any time.

The new driving park at Woodbridge will have its opening day on May 16th, and they have a good card on for the occasion consisting of several match races and one or two class races. The gentlemen who are managing this new enterprise have always helped to make the sport at Plainfield as interesting as possible, and we hope that the Plainfield people will turn out in force to help swell the attendance of our neighbor association.

AROUND THE BASES.

Will McLaughlin will play on the Flemington team this season.

The baseball season opens in this city on Saturday, May 16th. The personnel of the nine has not yet been definitely selected at present. The battery, however, has been chosen. Johnson, the well-known pitcher of the Scotch Plains nine, will act as pitcher for the first part of the season, at least. When Burt returns from Princeton College he will take his turn in the box. The position of catcher has been a difficult one to fill, but a player named Dennis from New York has been selected.

Weak and Run Down.

Hood's Pills cure all liver ills.

Died in Brooklyn, Buried Here.

Mrs. Harriet Hunt Cory, widow of Henry A. Cory, was buried in North Plainfield yesterday. She died in Brooklyn last Friday, in her ninetieth year. The family lived many years on East Front street, opposite Anderson's, where the father and two daughters died. The five sons will be well remembered by their early friends here, but none of them outlived their mother. Albert and William died in 1887, Cornelius in 1892, James in 1894 and Isaac in December 1895.

To Encourage Children.

The auxiliary committee of the Town Improvement Association met yesterday afternoon at the Casino, following the meeting of the Monday Afternoon Club. Plans of work were discussed, among which was one to encourage the children of Plainfield in keeping the streets clean by picking up scraps of paper, etc., that may be found about the city. The public meeting to be held Friday evening at the Y. M. C. A. was talked over and an effort made to secure a large attendance.

Christianity in Japan.

Rev. A. H. Bradford, D. D., of Montclair, will give an address in the Congregational church Tuesday evening on Christianity in Japan. Dr. Bradford was one of a committee sent over to Japan last fall by the Congregational Mission Board to investigate the missions there. He can therefore speak of what he has himself seen. The address will be of interest to those of other denominations as well as to Congregationalists, and the public generally are invited.

Run Over by a Hay Wagon.

Yesterday afternoon as Annie Metler, of West Third street, was riding a bicycle on Grant avenue, she collided with one of Baldwin's hay wagons. She was thrown from her wheel and one wheel of the hay wagon passed over her. Fortunately the wagon was not loaded. She received a number of bruises, but no serious hurts were sustained.

The most important business was the election of officers which resulted as follows: President, Mrs. W. H. Sterling; vice-presidents, Mrs. W. E. Lowe, Mrs. B. W. Shreve, Mrs. E. D. McCarthy; treasurer, Miss Julia S. Scribner; corresponding secretary, Mrs. Charles Lawson; recording secretary, Mrs. Robert Lowry.

YOUNG MEN AS HOSTS.

They Arrange and Carry Out a Pleasing Church Sociable.

The young men of the Park Avenue Baptist church made an enviable record for themselves last evening when they arranged and presented a social and entertainment that was probably the equal of anything of a similar nature ever given in the church. There was a large number of people present, many of whom came out of pure curiosity. The programme was opened with a pleasing selection by the orchestra, under the direction of Joseph Sattels. This was followed with zither solos by John VanEps, which were well received, as was also a vocal solo by E. E. Runyon. The last number on the programme was an amusing recitation by Miss Florence Smith.

Interspersing the numbers genuine sociability ruled among those present. A feature of the evening was a guessing contest. Cards bearing one word were given to each person and they were supposed to write a definition of the word on the card. The result was very amusing. Some of them were "What is Plainfield Trying to Be?" "A City," was the answer; "What Does Plainfield Want?" The appropriate answer was "A River." There was a great amount of fun in this part of the programme which was conducted by H. E. Ryder.

After two more selections by the orchestra the young men served refreshments to the guests. The fact that they had forgotten to bring knives to cut cake, and trays to pass it around, did not mar the pleasure.

Those having charge of the affair were H. E. Ryder, J. M. Hawkins, Wm. Stimpson, David Runyon, Wesley Brokaw, Nelson VanWinkle and Frank Clarkson.

At the close the remaining cakes were auctioned off and some brought as much as one dollar.

ABOUT THE FRENCH PEOPLE.

Mrs. E. B. Horton Gives an Entertaining Lecture to Plainfielders.

A fair-sized audience greeted Mrs. E. B. Horton, of Cranford, in the chapel of the Crescent Avenue church last evening and listened very attentively to her lecture on "Historic Paris and the Treasures of the Louvre." The lecture was accompanied by stereopticon views and was given for the benefit of the Boys' Mission Band, the Earnest Workers.

The speaker dwelt mostly upon scenes in Paris and its immediate vicinity, and included the scenery, exterior and interior, of buildings. The latter embraced many spots having bearing upon the lives of numbers of the great and noted men and women of the French Republic. Scenes of especial interest were those of points in the streets of Paris where events of unusual importance occurred in the various wars which have from time to time taken place in and about that city. The lecture closed with a view of Napoleon and his staff engaged in viewing their troops while the latter were engaged in battle.

The views shown throughout the lecture were unusually fine. A snug sum was realized for the treasury for the boys' society.

For Fred Marsh for Delegate.

The Democratic voters of Rahway held their primary meetings last night. The delegates were not instructed, but are supposed to be for Frederick Marsh as Delegate-at-Large.

For every quarter in a man's pocket there are a dozen uses; and to use each one in such a way as to derive the greatest benefit is a question every one must solve for himself. We believe, however, that no better use could be made of one of these quarters than to exchange it for a bottle of Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhœa Remedy, a medicine that every family should be provided with. A CITY OF WHITE TENTS.

GREATEST SHOW ON EARTH IS HERE IN ALL ITS GLORY.

And Great Crowds of People are Here to See Its Attractions.—Delayed in Arriving, But the Big Show is now Going On.

The circus is here. Every boy and girl in the city and many of the older ones have been thinking, dreaming and talking about it for the last two weeks and now the "Greatest Show on Earth," with all its paraphernalia, animals and employees, has taken possession of the field between Netherwood and Johnston avenues, extending from the old railroad embankment nearly to East Front street, and that vacant lot, which was all quiet yesterday, disturbed only by an occasional pedestrian or flocks of chirping sparrows, was converted into a bustling village.

Yesterday, Barnum & Bailey's circus exhibited at Paterson and the route from that city to Plainfield is rather a circuitous one. Paterson is on the Erie Railroad and it was necessary at Jersey City to switch over first to the West Shore road and then to the Pennsylvania. The latter railroad crosses the Newark branch of the Jersey Central railroad at Oak Island Junction and from thence the cars were easily run to this city.

Some of the more enthusiastic boys and young men, in their eagerness to get the first glimpse of the incoming circus train, remained up all night. Others retired early to prepare for an early rising. At four o'clock this morning a group of the shivering enthusiasts gathered beside the new freight house, but never a glimpse of the long-expected train was there to be seen.

The air was chilly and there did not seem to be half the anticipated pleasure in waiting for the arrival of the circus. Gradually the crowd grew in numbers and new recruits kept arriving on foot and on wheels. The rumor spread that the circus was not coming after all as the lot was not large enough. There was consternation among the youngsters at this and their hungry faces grew inches longer at the news.

At ten minutes past five o'clock the second section came to a stand-still on the siding and fifty minutes later the first section arrived. To those who have never seen a circus train unloaded the work that followed was a revelation. The first section brought the employes, the work horses and the canvas, while a similar load of the same, some of the trained horses and ponies, and a number of the decorated wagons came with the second section. One little colored boy carefully examined the contents of the two trains and then moved off in disgust.

"Huh," he sniffed, "they haint got an elephant at all or an animal, neither." And he left the place looking back every little while to see if he could discover the missing animals.

The canvas and all the necessary apparatus for the tent was carried in wagons on flat cars. They were soon run off the cars and pulled by teams of four or six powerful well-fed horses to the circus grounds. Shortly after 8 o'clock the large menagerie tent was raised and the cook tent and other smaller ones followed. The immense tent, in which the circus is held, was raised at about 10 o'clock.

The third section with the animals on board arrived at about eight o'clock and while they were being unloaded the crowd centerd about the yard near the freight house. Gradually the sightseers made their way to the grounds on Johnston avenue and gazed with wonderment at the strange creatures that were being led into the tents. A long procession of the cages and fancy wagons for the parade, all in their canvas coverings, continually moved in the direction of the grounds and excited the curiosity of the children to the highest pitch. For the children were there, as bolts and bars could not keep them away. It made no difference whether school kept or not, they came all the same and the attendance at the schools was small in consequence.

But they were not the only ones that hurried in the direction of the grounds. Business men snatched a few moments from their work to take a look at the erection of the tents. Ladies, both old and young, rode or walked in that direction, while cyclists sped to and from the grounds all the morning.

One little girl was heard to explain to a friend as they gazed at the camels. "We learn more here than we do in school, Jennie, that's why I didn't go this morning. We learn so much about the animals and it's very useful you know."

The natives of India attracted much attention as they walked about the mess tent attired in their picturesque garments.

There is one very remarkable fact about the appearance of Barnum's circus in this city and that is that it is not accompanied by rain. The presence of rain with the circus has been a usual occurence and the circus people scarcely knew the city as it appears on a pleasant day.

The excitement early in the morning was nothing to what it was when the parade started and the people were given a glimpse of the real magnificence of the circus. The streets along the line of the parade were thronged with a holiday crowd that had come out to see the circus and parade. The crowd first learned of the route of the parade through the usual enterprise of the Daily Press which distributed among them slips with the route printed on them.

The parade was a surprise to those who have viewed the ordinary circus parade. Three bands furnished the music for this grand pageant that took twenty minutes to pass one point. There were the cages of wild animals, the male and female riders, the elephants and the numerous allegorical carts, while a prominent feature was a groupe of riders representing the rulers of each known country with an escort of calvalry from each country.

The crowning feature of the circus performance this season is the exhibition of 51 splendid thoroughbred horses, under the direction of Prof. John O'Brien, who enjoys the reputation of being the greatest horse trainer of modern times. Riding without lines in one ring they form a sort of pyramid, surmounted by the trainer on a handsome gray stallion, while the outside rim is formed by 18 ponies traveling around the ring curb on a brisk trot.

There are so many features with the circus this season that space will not permit a review of each particular act. A word of praise, however, must be given the five Silbons who go through a series of midair flights and dives that excel anything ever seen here before.

Among the bareback riders that form such an important part of the circus programme, the exhibitions given by Rose Wentworth, the charming little American equestrienne; Wm. Showles, the undisputed champion of the world; and the Meers sisters, double character and jockey riders, are the most noticeable.

The acrobatic feats of the Ferdinand Ghinseretti family, six in number, are of the highest order, but they do their work with such apparent ease that the audience fails to appreciate how difficult and marvellous the tricks really are.

The Human Arrow act introduces a young woman who is shot from an immense bow through a paper target suspended in midair, and finally lands safely in her sister's arms.

Prof. Collins and his trained bull also proved a promising number, while Harry Wentworth's trained pigs were the object of special interest to the children, and the whole canvas resounded with their merry laughter. The show winds up with the hippodrome races, and they are as exciting and interesting as ever. A new feature to this department is known as the "horseless age," which exhibits the motor wagon and many different styles of bicycles.

Patroness at a Notable Event.

The name of Mrs. Augustus D. Shepard, of "The Gables," appears among the notable women who are to act as patronesses at the garden party and flower sale to be given on May 13th, by the Alumnæ of Barnard College, for the benefit of the new college buildings on Morningside Heights The grounds where this garden party is to be given are on East Thirty-seventh street and once belonged to Gov. Morgan, who preserved the old trees on the place and made the grounds an attractive garden.

Snatched Her Pocketbook.

While watching the circus parade this morning, a woman living in this city, had a pocketbook containing $30 snatched from her hand. The crowd that surrounded her made it impossible to locate the thief. This bold act happened on Front street.

How To Treat a Wife.

(From the Pacific Health Journal.)

First, get a wife; second, be patient. You may have great trials and perplexities in your business, but do not therefore, carry to your home a cloud or cloudy brow. Your wife may have trials, which, though of less magnitude, may be hard for her to bear. A kind word, a tender look, will do wonders in chasing from her brow all clouds of gloom. To this we woul add always keep a bottle of Chamberlain's Cough Remedy in the house. It is the best and is sure to be needed sooner or later. Your wife will then know that you really care for her and wish to protect her health. For sale by T. S Armstrong, druggist.

WIENBERGER WILL STAY HERE.

The Clothing Man Says That He Intends to Fight the Opposition.

Mr. Wienberger, the West Front street clothing dealer, against whom action has been taken in Justice Newcorn's court charged with violating a state law, was interviewed by a Daily Press reporter yesterday in reference to the above trouble. Mr. Wienberger was asked if he intended to continue his business at the present store. He replied that he did and furthermore he intended to fight the case to the end and secure his rights. He said that he had secured the services of Craig A. Marsh and if there was any justice he was going to have it. He stated further that he had rented the store till next May, the unexpired term of the one held by Powlison & Jones. He showed the reporter two bank books, one on the City National and the other on the First National. In the former he had a deposit of $1,000 and in the latter $1,500. He had been informed by his lawyer that he had a clear case.

"I am not inclined to think that the best business people in town are against me, but that it is the small houses," said Mr. Wienberger. "I consider that I have as much right to locate here as anyone else when the purpose is to carry on a legitimate business, and that is what I intend to do. I have a certified bill of sale of my goods which I can produce if necessary."

Lawyer H. C. Runyon will represent Geo. Dean and Matthew Coon, prosecutors, against M. Wienberger at the hearing which will be held Friday morning in Justice Newcorn's court. Lawyer Winfield S. Angleman will appear for Mr. Wienberger. On account of Craig A. Marsh representing the city he is unable to appear for the defendant.

A MODEL ENGINE.

The Westinghouse Single-Action Can be Seen at The Press Office.

Sometime ago The Daily Press found it necessary to increase its power for the press room and in looking about for an engine that would be practical for its peculiar work the Westinghouse single-acting engine was selected. An order was placed with the manufacturers, the Westinghouse Machine Company, Cortlandt street, New York, and in a brief time the engine was placed in position. It has now been in use in running the presses which print this paper and execute the large jobbing patronage of the office for two weeks, a sufficiently long time to demonstrate its working qualities. The best that The Press can say for the engine is that it does its work in a very satisfactory manner. The single-acting pattern is essentially a high-speed engine, and besides furnishing all the power that is needed, it, to speak figuratively, runs like a top, or in other words it makes no perceptible noise. It is almost superflous to say that this is a quality highly appreciated about a newspaper office, especially when it is known that the editorial rooms are directly over the press room. By its extreme simplicity in construction the engine is independent of the careless attendance of an unskilled engineer, and is, therefore, not liable to easily get out of order. The engine can be seen running any week day in the press rooms and anyone who is interested in viewing one of the best engines on the market is welcome to visit this office.

MARRIED AT HIGH NOON.

A Pretty Home Wedding at Mr. and Mrs. Randolph Marsh's.

A pretty high-noon wedding took place today when Miss Florence Amelia Marsh, daughter of Randolph and Maria Marsh, of 310 Plainfield avenue, was united in marriage to William Frederick Waglow, of New Market. The ceremony was performed at precisely twelve o'clock by Rev. G. K. Newell, the bridal party standing under an arch of dog-wood flowers and apple blossoms. The bride was prettily attired in a costume of gray Dresden cloth, trimmed with chiffon and velvet, while the bridemaid was Miss Lillian Waglow, a sister of the groom, and was dressed in light cloth, with pink trimmings. Randolph Marsh, Jr., a brother of the bride, acted as best man. After the ceremony a reception was held at the bride's home. Only the immediate relatives of the bride and groom were present. Later the couple left for Hartford Conn., by sound steamer, where they will remain for a few days. On their return, they will remain with the bride's parents for a month, after which they will go to housekeeping in this city. The happy couple will be at home to their friends at the bride's home after the 20th inst.

A PROGRESSIVE NATION

DR. BRADFORD TELLS OF THE RAPID ADVANCEMENT OF JAPAN.

The People of This Island Are Adopting All the Improvements of the Western Hemisphere—Even the Trolley is There.

An unusually interesting lecture on Japan was delivered last night in the Congregational church, by Rev. Dr. Bradford of Montclair, one of the four gentlemen recently sent out to Japan by the American Board to look into the real state of affairs in that country.

The point emphasized by Dr. Bradford throughout his address was that the rapid progress made by Japan has had no parallel since the history of the nations has been written. We are accustomed to speak of them as a heathen nation, but they are fast taking their place among the most progressive nations of the world, having adopted western inventions, the railway, the telegraph and telephone, even the omnipresent trolley, western methods of dress, education, etc.

The beautiful mountain, Fuji-San, is the first sight of Japan to the incoming traveller, and the one which abides longest in his memory. In going through the country, one feels as if he were on some other planet from that on which he was born, all is so different from the Occident. There is scarcely a horse in the Empire; people are taken from place to place in jinrikishas, like two-wheeled baby carriages, drawn by men. The houses have sliding walls and partitions, which are often opened, so that as you pass, you may look in and see all the daily life of the family within. The Japanese have the most exquisite manners of any people in the world. They think, and they are right, that the English and Americans are simply boors in comparison.

Of their home life, the less said the better. To see a man and his wife in the street tells the whole story; they never walk side by side, the man is always ahead.

The Emperor, formerly unseen and unknown to his people, has now taken his place among the rulers of the world, and appears on all state occasions, as any other monarch would do.

The Japanese have gone to England for their ideals of government, to Germany for education, to France for army training, and to America for practical affairs. They are very quick in learning, but show less skill in application than in acquisition.

Is it necessary to send missionaries to such an enlightened people. Shintoism, Confucianism and Buddism prevail in the country. There is no hope in these religions. The highest thought that they give of the universe is "an eternal process of causation." Let us send missionaries: surely joy is better than sorrow, and hope than dispair.

The Christians in the Empire are among the finest and most cultured people in the country. The missionaries among them are a noble set of men and women, some of them worthy of a place among the heroes and heroines of the world.

What of the future? The Japanese are a fickle but a progressive people. They will make a thousand mistakes, but sooner or later, we may feel sure, they must come to take their true place not only as one of the civilized nations, but as one of the Christian nations of the earth.

EPISCOPAL CONVENTION.

Bishop Scarborough Gives an Address and Reviews Church Work.

The annual convention of the Episcopal Diocese of New Jersey, which comprises all territory south of the Passaic River, began a two days' session in Elizebeth yesterday in St. John's Episcopal church. Bisop Scarborough presided, and about three hundred delegates were present.

The convention sermon was preached by Rev. Mr. Purse, of South Amboy. Bisop Scarborough delivered his annual address yesterday afternoon and reviewed the church work done during the year. A missionary service with addresses was held in St. John's church last evening. Communion was given this morning at 7 o'clock and the business session will meet at 8 o'clock.

The delegates were entertained with luncheon in the chapel by the women of St. John's chhrch.

Mr. D. P. Davis, a prominent liveryman and merchant of Goshen, Va., has this to say on the subject of rheumatism: "I take pleasure in recommending Chamberlain's Pain Balm for rheumatism, as I know from personal experience that it will do all that is claimed for it. A year ago this spring my brother was laid up in bed with inflammatory rheumatism and suffered intensely. The first application of Chamberlain's Pain Balm eased the pain and the use of one bottle completely cured him. For sale by T. S. Armstrong, druggist.

The Democratic primaries were held in all the wards of the city last night to elect delegates to the State Convention to be held at Trenton tomorrow:

FIRST WARD.

The primary of the First ward was held in the office of James MacIntyre on North avenue. John Rafferty was chosen chairman and J. F. MacIntyre secretary. Michael DeCourcy was elected delegate to the State convention and John Kenney alternate.

SECOND WARD.

The Second ward Democratic primary was called to order last evening in the chapel of the Bryant School at 8 o'clock by James E. Martine. Mr. Martine was elected chairman and Charles Stover, secretary. Messrs. Martine and Stover were appointed judge and inspector of election. The delegate to the State Convention as elected by the primary was Frank Yosseler, and his alternate Lewis G. Timpson. The delegate is uninstructed.

THIRD WARD.

The Third ward Democratic primary was held at the Hotel Revere last evening at eight o'clock. The meeting was called to order by Albert H. Atterbury and J. Morgan Brunson was selected as chairman. Mr. Atterbury was the choice for secretary and Geo. B. DeRevere was chosen teller and judge of election. The choice of a delegate centered on Carl Pfeiffer with James Clark as alternate. The following resolution was then introduced by Mr. Atterbury and adopted:

Resolved, That the delegate elected this evening be requested to use his best endeavors to procure the election of delegates from New Jersey to the National Democratic convention, who will favor a platform declaring for the maintenance of the present gold standard as the sole standard of value in the United States.

FOURTH WARD.

The Fourth ward primary was held in Blimm's hotel. The meeting was called to order by Michael R. Flynn, who was chairman of the last primary. He was made the permanent presiding officer. T. A. McCarthy was elected secretary and Ira G. Hulburt, judge. Michael R. Flynn and Ira G. Hulburt were elected delegates to the State convention, and were empowered to appoint alternates if they were unable to attend themselves.

TRIED TO THROW THE OFFICER.

But Two Boisterous Men Finally Landed in the Rookery.

Two men were conducting themselves on West Second street, near Park avenue, last evening in a manner that Patrolman Myers thought was disorderly. They were Christian Weigel and Otto Fish, both of whom are employed as bologna makers. They had been drinking, but thought that they were behaving themselves. The officer thought differently and attempted to arrest them. They resisted and tried to throw the officer into the cellar of the small building recently torn down to be rebuilt as a grocery store. Patrolman Cooney arrived opportunely on the scene and collared one of the men. Myers marched his man along and both were locked up. They paid $3 apiece this morning, preferring that to ten days in jail.

Temporary Train Order Office.

A temporary telegraph office was established this morning in the new freight house, by the Central, for the purpose of handling the numerous locomotives needed to handle the cars of the Barnum & Bailey circus, which were unloaded in the large yard recently established at that point. The operator in charge, Mr. Young, opened the office about four o'clock and was besieged by a crowd of circus enthusiasts who kept up a steady stream of inquiries as to the whereabouts of the circus trains on the road. When the circus trains came in, they blocked Mr. Young's view of the yards and to obviate the difficulty, he climbed a ladder alongside the building and with his instrument on his knees, placidly dealt out train-orders to the various crews. The instruments will be taken out after the last section of the circus has cleared the yards tonight.

Crop Report.

The weekly crop bulletin of the New Jersey Weather Service has the following report from Weather Observer John Neagle: Average temperature for week, 52 degrees, with 0.28-inch of rainfall on the 3d. The month of April was dry in this section. Grass shows need of rain. Grain looks better than it did early in season. Potatoes and garden truck in. Oats up and look well.

Policemen on Duty Again.

Patrolmen John Flynn and Matthew Vanderweg went on duty last night, the trouble between them and the Police Board having been settled.

TO FORCE A PROTEST

The Senate To-day Considering the Competitor Affair.

WANT THE PRESIDENT TO ACT

Believe He Should Intercede To Save the Lives of the Captured Crew—The House Insists on Four New Battleships.

Washington, May 6.—One important matter before the senate to-day and which promises to call forth considerable discussion is the resolution offered yesterday afternoon by Senator Call, dem., Fla., requesting the president to protest against the execution of United States citizens captured on board the schooner Competitor by a Spanish cruiser and to request and demand of the government of Spain that they shall not be subjected to cruel treatment, but be held only as prisoners of war. The resolution was on the point of being declared by the vice-president agreed to by unanimous consent when Senator Wolcott, rep., Col., interposed with the remark that if the facts were as stated by Senator Call, that the vessel was merely carrying war material, it was the manifest duty of the president to interfere and it was rather unusual to request the president to do his duty. He should like to see how it looked in print. He therefore objected, and the resolution went over until to-day.

House of Representatives.

The battle over the naval appropriation bill was fought in the house, and there was a more vigorous opposition to the provision authorizing the construction of four battleships than was made when the bill was originally under consideration when the fight was between four and six ships. But the effort to concur in the senate amendment reducing the number from four to two was defeated—yeas, 81; nays, 141. The fight was not at all partisan. Mr. Sayers, dem., Tex., made the motion to concur, and was ably supported by Mr. Cannon, rep., Ill., chairman of the committee on appropriations, who pointed out that with only two battleships provided for, the revenues of the government for four years of the next administration, which he said would be that of a republican president, would be mortgaged by the appropriation bills of this session to the extent of $25,000,000 a year. Mr. Boutelle, rep., Me., chairman of the committee on naval affairs, stoutly maintained the desirability and propriety of constructing four battleships, and he was assisted in the argument by Mr. Cummings, dem., N. Y. The latter arraigned the senate for its action upon appropriation and revenue bills in the last congress, asserting that it had virtually violated the provisions of the constitution in respect to the former, and, as to the latter, had compelled the house to agree to a tariff bill full of blunders, from which the country had ever since been suffering. The request of the senate for a conference on the naval appropriation bill was agreed to after the vote on Mr. Sayers' motion.

TILLMAN WILL DOMINATE.

And the South Carolina Democratic Convention Will Be for Free Silver.

Columbia, S. C., May 6.—Comparatively full reports from the democratic county conventions held yesterday indicate that the state convention to be held here on the 20th inst. will be almost unanimous for free silver and will be dominated by Senator Tillman. It is interesting to note that so far as heard from not a single convention has indorsed Senator Tillman for a place on the national ticket. This is taken as an indication that his friends think that his best chance is in another party.

New York State Democratic Convention.

New York, May 6.—Chairman John W. Hinckley has called the democratic state committee to meet at the Hoffman house on Friday, May 15, to fix the time and place for holding the state convention to elect four delegates-at-large to the democratic national convention. It is expected that the convention will be called to meet in Saratoga in the last week in June.

PROGRESS OF THE WAR.

Operations in the Field as Reported by Spanish Officials.

Havana, May 6.—Heavy firing has been heard near Cabanas, but no details of any fighting at that place have been received. Col. Tort reports that his command had an engagement with the rebels under Agramonte near San Nicolas, province of Havana. The rebels lost seven killed. The troops lost a surgeon and one private wounded. Parties of rebels attacked the towns of Ranohuelo, Esperanza and Tega Alta. Col. Delgado reports that he has captured a rebel camp near Rodas, in the Cienfuegos district. Ten rebels were killed and one captured. The troops had only one killed. Insurgents have destroyed with dynamite the tracks, bridges and culverts of the railway between Mantanzas and Havana. Fires are reported from different sections of the island. The buildings, etc., on many farms and estates, especially near Quivican, province of Havana, have been destroyed. The trial of the men who were captured on the schooner Competitor, which was landing a filibustering expedition when seized by a Spanish warship, is believed to have resulted in the acquittal of two of the prisoners. The others have been sentenced to be shot. The prisoners are still "incomunicado."

SHOT BY SPANIARDS.

A Russian-American Correspondent Killed in the Battle at Pinar del Rio.

Port Jervis, N. Y., May 6.—Mrs. Joseph Petrikovsky of Milford, Pa., has just received news of the death of her husband, who was shot in the battle which resulted in the capture of Pinar del Rio, Cuba, by the Spaniards. Petrikovsky was a Russian by birth, and was, his wife claims, employed by the Russian government as a reporter and became an American citizen. Four months ago he married Miss Georgia Briard of Milford and went to Brooklyn, N. Y., to live. Soon afterward he got orders to go to Cuba as war correspondent, his wife returning to Milford. The letter announcing his death was written by Mr. Raymond, an American correspondent, who mailed it at Key West, Fla. He wrote that he was with Mr. Petrikovsky when he was shot, and that the latter lived but a few moments, long enough to give his wife's address and ask his companion to forward the news.

SIX BODIES RECOVERED.

Ten Others Believed To Be Under the Ruins of Cincinnati's Wrecked Building.

Cincinnati, May 6.—Six dead bodies have so far been removed from the wrecked building at 432-434 Walnut street, which was the scene of Monday night's terrific gasoline explosion. The dangerous condition of the adjacent walls caused the building inspector to call a halt to further operations until they can be pulled down. Ten more bodies are still believed to be under the ruins.

Could Not Stand Disgrace.

Wilkesbarre, Pa., May 6.—Julius Fahy, editor of a Hungarian paper at Nanticoke and also the agent of several steamship companies, committed suicide last evening by taking poison. He was arrested Monday night on the charge of embezzlement. This was very humiliating to him and he told a friend that he would rather die than stand such a disgrace. He was well educated, being a master of eight languages.

Mrs. John Hoey Seriously Ill.

Long Branch, N. J., May 6.—Mrs. John Hoey, wife of the late John Hoey of Adams express fame, is seriously ill at her home in Hollywood. Her illness is of long standing, but her death may not be far distant. She is in her 78th year. She was once the foremost actress in America.

Indiana Republicans Anxious To Go to St. Louis Uninstructed.

THE FIGHT OF THE HARRISON FACTION

McKinley Supporters Working Desperately To Capture the State Convention Which Meets To-morrow—A Hot Fight Is Expected.

Indianapolis, May 6.—Nearly all the republican leaders of the state have arrived here to attend the state convention which meets in Tomlinson hall to-morrow morning. The gathering promises to be one of the most interesting on record. The principal features will be the fight on instructions between the McKinley and the Harrison factions, the effort to induce Gen. Harrison to address the convention, which is being bitterly opposed by the McKinleyites, the nomination of a state ticket, and the attempt of Chas. Fairbanks to show his strength by having himself chosen as a delegate-at-large to the St. Louis convention. Fairbanks is a senatorial candidate, and if he can land the St. Louis honor it may be taken as an indication that he can also claim the senatorship.

Don't Want To Be Tagged.

Up to to-day it looked as though the McKinley faction had a sure thing in the matter of instructions, but as the outside delegates arrive the phase of the struggle is being changed, as they are found to be almost to a unit against "tagging" the Indiana delegation. The prospect of the appearance of Gen. Harrison at the convention has sent a thrill of terror into the McKinley ranks. They fear that such a thing will stampede the delegates and ruin their chances of getting instructions for their champion. Gen Harrison has been invited to speak, but he has not yet replied to the invitation. The general belief is that, under the circumstances, and knowing, as he does, the effect that his appearance in the convention hall might have, he will decline to accept the honor. In fact, he is said to have intimated his determination to a few friends, but he will be urged to appear nevertheless.

Sound Money Platform.

Next in importance is the election of a state ticket. Never before in the history of the state has there been such a grist of candidates for the offices to be filled. For governor there are thirteen candidates, all of whom seem to have a fair following, with Major Doxey of Anderson slightly in the lead, if his claims may be relied upon. It is impossible to forecast the result of a single nomination with certainty, and the prospects are that the convention will be in session for two days, balloting most of the time. The platform will be short, and although there has recently been a show made on the part of the free silver advocates, it can be safely said that the convention will declare for sound money, and send sound money delegates to St. Louis.

Afraid of Harrison.

On all sides is heard talk as to the probability of Gen. Harrison's name being sprung at St. Louis. It is claimed that an emergency might arise which would warrant the use of his name, despite his distinct and expressed wishes to the contrary, and this is said to be one reason why the anti-McKinley men will fight to the death rather than permit the Indiana delegation to be sent to St. Louis with instructions for the Ohio man. All in all, the prospect for the hottest kind of a struggle is very flattering.

HIS SKULL FRACTURED.

A New Jersey Woman Beats Her Husband with a Stove Shaker.

Belvidere, N. J., May 6.—Mrs. Wm. H. Dickey of Phillipsburg was lodged in the jail here last night to await the result of her assault upon her husband at their home yesterday morning. Dickey has been for many years street commissioner of Phillipsburg, and is a well known politician. He and his wife became involved in a quarrel early in the morning, when she assaulted him with a stove shaker. Dickey lies in the Easton hospital with a fractured skull, and it is thought that he will die.

SEVEN YEARS FOR FOSTER.

Concord's Embezzling Tax Collector Sentenced to State Prison.

Concord, N. H., May 6.—Albert I. Foster, Concord's embezzling ex-tax collector, pleaded nolo contendere on two indictments in the supreme court yesterday afternoon, and was sentenced by Judge Chase to five years in prison on one indictment and two years on the other, the latter to begin at the expiration of the former sentence. Foster took his sentence coolly, and was conveyed to prison from the court room without delay.

Your Spring clothing

Rather early to speak of it, but if it needs cleaning or dyeing, it isn't too early to have us do that work for you. This is our dull season—our employes are here ready for work. We'd like to have your goods now. We can give them better attention than in the rush of the spring season. Then we'll have to have more time or rush them at the expense of good work. Now we can take our time, do the work better than if hurried and you'll have the clothing all ready for warm weather.

Look in the closet or trunk and find your spring wear that needs cleaning and dyeing and bring it to us now, or better still, our wagon will call for it if you will send us word.

TO DIE TO-MORROW

Work of Erecting the Scaffold for Holmes Begun.

HAS NOT YET MADE HIS WILL

Said That He Will Provide for Mrs Pitezel—He Appeals to Her To Endeavor To Secure a Respite for Him.

Philadelphia, May 6.—H. H. Holmes was last night transferred from the cell in the county prison that he had occupied since the verdict of guilty was rendered against him for murdering Benjamin F. Pitezel to a newly fitted up section that affords him more light and better ventilation. The doomed man is now confined in a cell that is only a few yards from the gallows, but the cell is so situated that the scaffold is removed from his vision. He can, however, hear the moving of timbers and the rapping of hammers upon the apparatus that is being constructed for his end to-morrow. The changing of the cell was done simply to facilitate the officers of the hanging. As now placed Holmes will be led out of a cell directly in the rear of the scaffold and he will not have the ordeal of marching down a flight of stairs with the gallows constantly in his view.

Mrs. Pitezel Provided For.

Lawyer Rotan, who defended Holmes, stated to-day that he had not yet drafted Holmes' will, because the condemned man so frequently makes changes in the document. "Mrs. Pitezel has been given some money," said Mr. Rotan, "and I have no doubt that she will be amply provided for. She may have some difficulty, though, in collecting from estates that are tangled up in litigation and mortgages." When Lawyer Tahy, the attorney for Mrs. Pitezel, was subsequently seen he said: "Mrs. Pitezel is preparing to return home to her people at Calva, Ill., and I expect that she will leave before the execution." "It is said that she has already received some money from Holmes. Was that a part of the promised restitution of the insurance money?" was asked. "Mrs. Pitezel did receive some money from Holmes," answered Lawyer Fahy with a tinge of sarcasm. "She received just thirty dollars, and that is about one-tenth of what her traveling expenses and the cost of her board here amounts to."

Appeals to His Victims' Wife and Mother.

Attorney Fahy has made public a letter that Holmes wrote to him on May 1, as attorney for Mrs. Pitezel, in which the condemned man requested Mrs. Pitezel to ask Gov. Hastings for a reprieve. Mr. Fahy stated that his client could not conscientiously go before the governor on such a mission, and if she did it would not avail. In the letter Holmes says: "On account of being refused a short reprieve, I cannot accomplish all I had hoped to in money matters without her aid. Coroner Castor's visit here has accomplished all I desired to do in that direction. But there is no necessity of losing the Chicago property unless she so wills it. I therefore make the following proposition, assuming that the governor will heed a request from Mrs. Pitezel when he knows that she and other helpless ones, and not I, are to profit by it. You will by this time know that since November I have not made an effort to save my life, but have bent all my energies to arranging other matters for a stay of five weeks, which will carry me over to foreclosure proceedings and allow me ample time to fully settle up affairs.

Says He Is Unfit To Die.

"I will give to Mrs. Pitezel a house and lot clear of all encumbrances, accompanied by a lease from a tenant paying $10 per month to May 1, 1897, and, after valuing the house and lot at only what it has been encumbered for will pay to her in cash sufficient to make a total of $2,000, no part of which shall be taken from the one-third set aside for her on April 18. The encumbrance to which I refer I can clear by an exchange with Chicago parties and thus save paying out the money. Besides this gain to Mrs. Pitezel she will still have one-third of what we can realize from the block at Sixty-third street, and I am specially anxious to sell this in a way we have planned as it allows me to pay off every dollar I owe in Chicago. I would also beg Mrs. Pitezel to remember that while she may think me unfit to live I am certainly unfit to die, and in return for what I can do for her, should like an opportunity to read and otherwise try and prepare myself for death."

KILLED HER UNCLE.

12-Year-Old Minnie Swanger Placed in Custody of Children's Aid Society.

Hollidaysburg, Pa., May 6.—The Blair county court has placed Minnie Swanger, Altoona's 12-year-old murderer, in the care and custody of the Children's Aid society of western Pennsylvania. The child poisoned her uncle, William McGregor, for the purpose of securing life insurance money. She will be taken to Morganza, below Pittsburg.

Education Bill in the Commons.

London, May 6.—In the house of commons last night Sir John E. Gorst, vice-president of the committee of council, moved the second reading of the education bill, which applies to England and Wales. The bill proposes to establish an educational department in every county and borough, to be controlled by the county councils, these departments to administer the parliamentary grants.

Cholera Increasing in Egypt.

Cairo, May 6.—Cholera is increasing at Alexandria. Yesterday seventeen new cases and eleven deaths from the disease were reported.

DEATH OF COL. NORTH.

Brief Sketch of the Career of the Late Nitrate King.

London, May 6.—Col. John T. North, the nitrate king, who was stricken with a fainting fit yesterday in his office and expired last evening, was born in Yorkshire fifty-one years ago. He was a boilermaker by trade, and thirty years ago went to Chili. He had genius for mechanics. From Chili he went to Peru, when the nitrate business was in its infancy. He got control of the water beds, necessary for extracting the valuable fertilizer, and got options on railways and canals, and before he knew it he was a millionaire. When he went to England and began to spend his income, which increased enormously, he became the most talked about person. He owned the finest horses and the most gorgeous houses in all England, outside of the royal palaces. He was most fond of display, and his gorgeous, if not great, fuctions were talked of all over Great Britain. Once he gave a fancy dress ball at the hotel Metropole, in London, at which he engaged not only the hall and reception rooms, but a hundred chambers beside. The best known people in the city fought for invitations. Earls, baronets and members of parliament struggled for cards and places. It was a great success. He was a character, and as lavish in his princely prodigality as ever was a generous sultan. He ran for parliament at the last election, but was defeated. Col. North was reputed to be worth $100,000,000 aside from his income, which is conservatively estimated at $1,000,000 a year. He is said to have been one of the six richest men in the world. Col. North for a long time had been a prominent figure on the London stock market, and was concerned in many very heavy deals. His boldness and shrewdness made him an object of lively interest to all other big operators.

ORDERED TO ASIATIC STATION.

Lieut.-Commander Delano, U. S. N., To Relieve Commander Sturdy, Suspended.

Boston, May 6.—Lieut.-Commander Francis H. Delano, U. S. N., executive officer of the receiving ship Wabash at the navy yard, has received orders from the navy department detaching him from his present post and ordering him to proceed to the Asiatic station and report for duty as the executive officer of the flagship Olympia, to relieve Lieut.-Commander E. W. Sturdy, who has been tried by a general court-martial, sentenced to two years' suspension and a loss of ten months in his grade, detached from the ship and ordered to return home. Lieut. Delano will proceed at once to San Francisco and take the next steamer for Yokohama, where, if there is no superior officer to report to and give him further orders, he will practically report to himself and join the Olympia at the first opportunity.

TEMPORARILY ENJOINED.

K. of L. National Executive Board Restrained from Trying Glassworkers.

Pittsburg, May 6.—Judge White has issued a restraining order, directed to the national executive committee of the Knights of Labor, prohibiting them from proceeding with the trial of thirty-seven defendants, members of the Glassworkers' assembly, against whom charges were preferred by Simon Burns, president of the assembly. A hearing on the application for a permanent injunction was fixed for Thursday next. Allegations are made that Burns and the Knights of Labor officers are conspiring to divert the funds of the order from their legitimate purposes.

CONDITION OF CROPS.

Weather Bureau's Weekly Bulletin for Eastern States.

Washington, May 6.—The weekly telegraphic bulletins received by the weather bureau from the different states as to the progress of the crops as to-day made public are in part as follows: New England—Sharp frosts, but no serious damage; only a trace of rain fall; fruit buds showing well. New York—Scarcely any rain; winter wheat is suffering; many report peaches killed. New Jersey—Wonderfully improved condition of all crops; warm rain needed. Pennsylvania—Wheat and rye improving, but many fields in bad condition; abundant fruit blooms.

Celebration at Princeton College.

Princeton, N. J., May 6.—A semi-centennial jubilee in honor of president William Henry Green's connection with Princeton theological seminary was held here yesterday, in connection with the eighty-fourth commencement of that institution. The alumni of the seminary and representatives of similar institutions throughout the country were present to honor Dr. Green with their expressions of esteem.

Leaned Toward Pattison.

Atlantic City, N. J., May 6.—Delegates in the second and fourth wards were selected last night to the democratic state convention, which meets in Trenton on Thursday. The sentiment of the conventions seemed to favor Pattison of Pennsylvania for president, but no instructions were given.

Royal Wedding at Copenhagen.

Copenhagen, May 6.—Princess Louise, eldest daughter of Crown Prince Frederick, and Prince Frederick of Schaumburg-Lippe were married last evening at the Amalienborg palace in the presence of the king and queen and a large number of relatives.

Appointed State Prison Director.

Hartford, May 6.—Gov. Coffin has appointed Edward Crosbie of this city a member of the board of state prison directors, in place of Marvin H. Sanford of Simsbury, resigned. The appointment holds until the next general assembly meets.

IN DEEP DISGRACE.

Transvaal Disclosures Have Cast a Shadow on England's Name.

SO SAYS SIR WILLIAM HARCOURT

The Grave Revelations Must Be Discussed by Parliament, He Says, and Measures Taken To Clear the Nation's Reputation.

London, May 6.—Sir William Vernon-Harcourt, leader of the opposition in the house of commons, spoke at a meeting last night of the National Liberal club. In the course of his speech he said that the state of affairs in South Africa was deplorable. The recent grave and momentus revelations must be discussed by parliament in order to get at the bottom of the transactions which had cast a dark shadow on England's name. The liberals, he added, would support the government if, as he believed it would, take measures to clear the nation's reputation from complicity in the Transvaal business, which had brought it into deep disgrace. If the government and nation failed in their duty they would deserve the reproaches of unfriendly critics abroad.

Venezuela Matter.

Sir William further said that a great majority of the people in the United States and Great Britain were eager for an early and peaceful settlement of the Venezuela question. He confessed that he was impatient that a settlement was so long delayed. It was to settle such questions that diplomacy existed. No personal pride or diplomatic obstincy should be allowed to prevent a settlement. (Cheers.)

Rhodes in Chamberlain's Hands.

London, May 6.—The Standard will to-day say that Mr. Chamberlain, the colonial secretary, has received a message from Cecil Rhodes in which the latter states that he places himself unreservedly in Mr. Chamberlain's hands. Mr. Rhodes offers to resign his membership in the privy council, to retire from the directorship of the British South Africa company, and to return to England, if Mr. Chamberlain advises him to do so. It is understood that the matter was discussed by the cabinet yesterday, and it is expected that Mr. Chamberlain will announce the decision arrived at to the house of commons this afternoon.

Offered To Aid a Revolutionary Movement.

Paris, May 6.—The Pretoria correspondent of the Temps reaffirms that Sir Henry Brougham Loch, now Lord Loch of Drylaw, when governor of Cape Colony and British high commissioner in South Africa, offered to aid a revolutionary movement in the Transvaal, and this in face of Lord Loch's denial of the original report.

GALA DAY AT NEW LONDON.

The City Celebrating the 250th Anniversary of Its Founding.

New London, Conn., May 6.—This city is to-day celebrating the 250th anniversary of its founding by John Winthrop. The streets are thronged with residents and visitors and the stores and houses are profusely decorated. The celebration began last night at the armory on Washington and Colt streets, where literary exercises were held, the largest audience ever in the building assembling to listen to the speeches of well-known orators and the music of the voices of 400 school girls, led by the Third Regiment band, C. N. G. The formal exercises were opened with prayer by Rev. John R. Stubbert, pastor of the Huntington street Baptist church. Mayor Johnson followed in an address of welcome. The address of the evening was delivered by Walter Leonard on "The Founding of the Town." The address was historical in character and traced the growth of the town from its foundation to the present day. George Parsons Lathrop, LL. D., whose home is in this city, read a poem written for the occasion, which was greeted with applause. Short speeches were made by Thomas M. Waller and Congressman Russell. To-day a cornerstone for a monument to perpetuate the memory of Winthrop will be laid.

THE HILDRETH CASE.

Defense in the Boy Train Wreckers' Trial Opened This Morning.

Rome, N. Y., May 6.—D. F. Searle, the associate counsel for Hildreth, the boy train wrecker, began the opening for the defense this morning. He said that the defense would probably occupy a couple of days. Nothing can be learned from the defendant's counsel as to whether Hildreth would be placed on the stand. Hildreth was asked and said he did not know. Hildreth and the other two boys were weighed on Monday night by the sheriff by order of the court. Hildreth weighed 115 pounds, Plato 124, and Hibbard 133. During yesterday afternoon the widow of Engineer Hager, who was killed in the smash-up, and her son Frank were present at the trial.

Death of an Ocean Captain.

New York, May 6.—The International Navigation company has received a cable dispatch stating that Capt. Randolph C. Weyes of the Red Star line died in Antwerp Monday night of rheumatic gout. The Westernland never met with a mishap while under the command of Capt. Weyer. The latter was an American citizen, though born in Germany.

To Abolish Contract Prison Labor.

Albany, May 6.—Gov. Morton has signed the two bills of Senator Wilcox which are designed to carry out the provision of the new state constitution abolishing contract labor in the prisons, penitentiaries and reformatories of the state. The provision goes into effect on Jan. 1.

Orange gave a Republican plurality at the last State election, but at the charter election on Monday the Democrats went in with flying colors. Thus it is all over the State.

It is reported that tremendous pressure is being brought to prevent Governor Griggs from signing the South Jersey game and protection bill, introduced by Senator Stokes. It is stated upon good authority that the Governor has yielded to the influence and will kill the bill that the South Jersey farmers have been fighting for a dozen years.

The May number of the Central Illustrated Monthly is largely devoted to Plainfield. It contains many cuts of local residences and buildings besides several street views. The centre piece is a view of Watchung and Crescent avenues in front of the Crescent Avenue church. It is a creditable number and will assist in advertising Plainfield's beauty and desirability as a residential place in an effective way.

The circus and the small boy is here. The young American is full of romp and joy and his popper and mommer are full of business and worry. The circus is a great institution and in the eyes of the juvenile it is even greater than Christmas. It fascinates him and maketh him to arise from bed before even the chipper of the birds is heard. For weeks his mind has been inspired by the multicolored lithographs on the city billboards depicting wonderful acts of daring performances in midair and other portions of the arena of "the greatest show on earth." Now that it is all realism to him in the sight of acres of white canvas, hurry-scurrying of circus employes, mysterious wagons with bands of gold and stripes of red, prancing steeds and playing bands of music, besides innumerable other attractions, the small boy regards the circus as a "thing of beauty and a joy forever." And his opinion is not subject to dispute. It stands pre-eminent as a piece of boyish sagacity, but of mannish practice as well. We all welcome the circus, because it entertains and educates, and The Press hopes that everyone may go and make a day, or at least a night, of it.

About Helen Hunt Jackson.

At the regular meeting of the Young Friends' Association last evening an enjoyable time was passed. After the reading of the "History of Friends", the subject of 'Current Topics' was taken up, and many other interesting subjects touched upon. Miss Nettie Haviland, a friend of the association then read a biographical sketch prepared by herself on the life of Helen Hunt Jackson. MAY NOT BE JUSTICES.

Through an Error Thomas and Smalley May Be Barred From Qualifying.

There is a seeming possibility that D. D. Smalley and H. S. Thomas, of the borough, will not fill the office of Justice of the Peace to which office they were elected at the last borough election. It seems that their names were not received by the Secretary of State, but he did receive the name of J. A. Karet who ran for the office and was defeated, and as the other names were not received the State Secretary considered the name of J. A. Karet. A Daily Press reporter was informed this morning that Mr. Karet would receive his commission today.

Both Mr. Thomas and Mr. Smalley have been wondering why they did not hear something in regard to their commissions, and it is understood they wrote to headquarters in reference to the matter, and were informed that only the name of J. A. Karet was received. The result will be awaited with no little interest.

—Truth.

There is more catarrh in this section of the country than all other diseases put together, and until the last few years was supposed to be incurable. For a great many years doctors pronounced it a local disease, and prescribed local remedies, and by continually failing to cure with local treatment, pronounced it incurable. Science has proven catarrh to be a constitutional disease and therefore requires constitutional treatment. Hall's Catarrh Cure, manufactured by F. J. Cheney & Co., Toledo, Ohio, is the only constitutional cure on the market. It is taken internally in doses from 10 drops to a teaspoonful. It acts directly on the blood and mucous surfaces of the system. They offer one hundred dollars for any case it fails to cure. Send for circulars and testimonials. Address F. J. Borough Sidewalk Notice.

Notice is hereby given that the ordinance of the Borough of North Plainfield requires that flag sidewalks be laid and prohibits the laying of new board walks or repairing of old board walks.

An impression seems to exist that old board walks may be repaired without violation of the ordinance.

This is not the fact. In every case where any repair of a board walk is necessary stone must be used.

Public notice of this fact is now again given so that no one need feel aggrieved if they are required to replace a newly laid or repaired board walk with stone.

TO HIM WHO WAITS.

To him who waits, amid the world's applause,
His share of justice, toiling day by day,
All things will come now dim and far away,
To him who waits.

To him who waits beyond the darkness drear,
The morning cometh with refulgent light;
Bringing assurance of a day more bright,
To him who waits.

To him who waits, though tears may often fall,
And knees be bowed in sorrow and in prayer;
All grief will end and everything be fair
To him who waits.

To him who waits and reaches out his hands
To aid a toiler up life's beetling crags,
Surcease will come from every ill that flags
To him who waits.

To him who waits and struggles not in vain
To overcome the evils that abound
Within his breast, sweet will the victory sound
To him who waits.

To him who waits there comes a wily throng,
Who sneer and scoff and look with baleful eyes,
But what of them, they are but gnats and flies,
To him who waits.

To him who waits there must be recompense
For useful work, whatever may betide,
A compensation reaching far and wide,
To him who waits.

To him who waits, the stars are always friends,
The restless ocean and the azure sky,
All things in nature speak and prophesy,
To him who waits.

To him who waits true love will some day come,
And lay an offering at his blameless shrine,
Life will be love, and love will be divine,
To him who waits.

To him who waits the world will some day cheer
And sing his praise; fame's mysterious gate s
Will open for him; Heaven seems more near,
To him who waits.

A WESTERN WEDDING.

Colorado Charlie and Sophia Blossom Made Man and Wife.

A Social Event in a New Mexican Town—One Break in the Ceremony—One Shot from the Usher Silenced the Interruption.

WENT into the little New Mexican village just as dusk was deepening into night. As the stage with its jaded team rolled into the outskirts of the place I at once noticed something unusual was going on. Cowboys gotten up in their fanciest togs rode by us on gayly caparisoned bronchos, galloping gayly to the merry jingling of the huge spurs on their riders' heels. Men and women on foot, evidently of the "society" element of the town, walked alongside the road, all going in the same direction.

Presently we passed the little adobe church, which was brilliantly lighted, and, as I could see through the small windows, profusely, if not artistically, decorated with evergreens and clean white cloth inside.

"What's up?" I ventured to ask the driver, who had not spoken a word for the last twenty-seven miles.

"Weddin'," he replied, laconically, and gave the horses a vicious cut with the whip which started them into a trot.

I said no more and in a few moments we drew up at the door of the "hotel," another low, rambling adobe, whose front rose squarely up from the street.

The landlord was at the door, and welcomed me with a grunted "good evening, sir." I went into the house and, laying aside my wraps and seeing my grip safely set behind the little office counter and cigar stand, was led by a frowsy lad of ten to the rear of the house, where I found water, soap and towel. After washing the inevitable desert grit out of my eyes, ears and nostrils and from my face and hands, I walked out to supper, which was announced at that juncture.

The meal was clean and well prepared by the landlord's own wife, who did her own cooking, and I was in the proper condition to enjoy it, which I proceeded to do.

"You are 'goin' to the weddin', I s'pose," remarked my hostess as she poured my second cup of coffee.

"I don't know," I said, "who is to be married?"

"Colorado Charlie's the man and Sophy Blossom, a Texas gal, is the woman," she said. "They re the spryest couple in this part o' New Mexico, an' everybody knows 'em. He's killed two men an' a sheriff an' come clear afore a jury 'cause they knowed 'im, and she's run off with 'im an' the new preacher is to splice 'em."

"They must be an interesting couple," I remarked. "I think I shall go."

Having finished supper I walked into the front room, paid fifteen cents for a five-cent cigar, lit it and strolled up the street. When I reached the church it was filled with cowboys, Mexicans, fine people and coarse people, large and small, all busy talking and guying each other, smoking and waiting for "the fun to begin."

Presently there was a sound of horses' feet at the door, a half a minute of silence, then two big burly fellows in Mexican sombreros, whom I afterwards learned were the ushers, elbowed their way in by main force, cleared a passage from the door to the altar, behind which the dapper young preacher, who had entered from the rear, took his place. The groom could be seen peeping in at the back door anxiously.

Every head was turned toward the front door as the tramp of the bridal party was heard entering. First came the ushers, who had returned to the door after clearing the aisle. The spurs rattled on the rough floor as the stalwart fellows stalked in stately manner through the room, and after they were past my station I noticed the big bump under the coat of each, made by the indispensable six-shooter. Then came the groom's attendants, big fine-looking fellows with long hair and fierce moustaches, waxed for the occasion. But one of these wore his spurs. The other was without them, but made up the difference with a "laundered" shirt and standing collar. Both carried "guns" of regulation size.

The bridesmaids followed, each chewing her gum vigorously and looking her sweetest, one in pink and the other in white, with bouquets of wild flowers in their hands. The bride followed alone, looking really superb—her complexion fair, her hair thick, long and brown, dark, fiery eyes and small, firm mouth. She walked with the stately confidence of a western woman, born and raised in an atmosphere of independence, where everyone looks out for himself or herself, as the case may be.

The groom meanwhile entered and met the bride at the altar, where he saluted her with a kiss, vigorously applied to her lips.

"Colorado Charlie", was not so large a man as either of his attendants, but was a muscular and firm knit fellow, with a cool gray eye, cold, thin lips, and jet black short hair. He was not a vicious-looking man, but certainly impressed the beholder as a lion in disguise for courage and resolution. There was withal something about him to compel admiration.

The minister, who was shaking from head to foot, commanded the contracting parties to join hands, which they did.

Turning to the audience he said: "If there be any present who would forbid that this man and woman be joined in holy matrimony, let him now speak, or forever after hold his peace."

The groom and attendants pulled their six-shooters.

The minister almost fainted. The bride looked at him curiously for a moment, then burst into a hearty laugh.

"The tenderfoot's skeered," she said.

AT THIS MOMENT THERE WAS A FLASH.

"For God's sake, gentlemen, put up your weapons," he pleaded.

"Oh, it's all right," said the groom, assuringly. "We just wanted to get a glimpse of the galoot that was goin' to forbid this perseedin' to perseed."

"You bet we did, parson," remarked the principal attendant, who stood beside him.

"Sophia Blossom," began the minister, solemnly, "do you take this man whom you hold by the hand to be your lawfully wedded hu—"

"Ee-yaw, yaw-yaw!" broke in the voice of the omnipresent burro, as he put his head in at a broken window and failed to reach the dried grasses on the hat of a woman sitting inside and unconscious of his presence. The woman started at the warm breath on the back of her neck and another woman in the next row turned and leaned back to see "what was the row." At this moment there was a flash, a roar like a cannon, a shower of feathers in the air, suddenly silence and the burro sank back out of the window a carcass. The feathers came from the dried jaybird on the hat of the woman in the front seat, who came in range just as the usher pulled the trigger.

After a little good-natured "joshing" about the good shot and the accident to the hat, for which the groom promised to pay, the ceremony went on without further accident or incident worthy of mention to its completion, the crowd gathered round the happy pair and wished them the usual long life, happiness and prosperity, and the people dispersed.

"Colorado Charlie" and his bride came to the hotel to spend the night before going to his ranch, a thirty-five mile horseback ride away, and I was fortunate enough to receive an introduction and became pretty well acquainted with both, and was agreeably surprised to find how much real refinement is sometimes hidden under the rough and unconventional exterior of the cowboy of the plains and the woman who shares his rough lot with him.—Chicago Journal.

—Moore was a close student of oriental books of travel. He was thus enabled to imitate so closely the style of eastern thought and to so adapt himself to the peculiarities of eastern imagery that his oriental tales read as though written by a Persian or Hindoo. Even during his own lifetime lines of "Lallah Rookh" were sung by the common people in the cities of Persia and India.

The general belief among doctors is that consumption itself is very rarely inherited. But the belief is becoming stronger that the tendency to consumption is very generally transmitted from parent to child. If there has been consumption in the family, each member should take special care to prepare the system against it. Live out doors; keep the body well nourished; and treat the first indication of failing health.

F. A. DUNHAM,

Civil Engineer and Surveyor

109 Park ave. Sewers, pavements and road

The speaker's courage rose no doubt from his position at the back of the room, for the foremost of the assailants seemed less determined. We were only three, and we must have gone down, barricade and all, before a rush. But three are three. And an arquebuse—Croisette's match burned splendidly—well loaded with slugs is an ugly weapon at five paces, and makes nasty wounds, besides scattering its charge famously. This, a good many of them, and the leaders in particular, seemed to recognize. We might certainly take two or three lives; and life is valuable to its owner when plunder is afoot. Besides most of them had common sense enough to remember that there were scores of Huguenots — genuine heretics—to be robbed for the killing, so why go out of the way, they reasoned, to cut a Catholic throat, and perhaps get into trouble! Why risk Montfaucon for a whim? and offend a man of influence like the Vicomte de Caylus, for nothing!

Unfortunately at this crisis their original design was recalled to their minds by the same voice behind crying out: "Pavannes! Where is Pavannes?"

"Ay!" shouted the butcher, grasping the idea, and at the same time spitting on his hands and taking a fresh grip of the ax. "Show us the heretic dog, and go! Let us at him."

"M. de Pavannes," I said coolly—but I could not take my eyes off the shining blade of that man's ax, it was so very broad and sharp—"is not here!"

"That is a lie! He is in that room behind you!" the prudent gentleman in the background called out. "Give him up!"

"Ay, give him up!" echoed the man of the pole-ax almost good-humoredly, "or it will be the worst for you. Let us have at him and get you gone!"

This with an air of much reason, while a growl as of a chained beast ran through the crowd, mingled with cries of "A mort les Huguenots! Vive Lorraine!"—cries which seemed to show that all did not approve of the indulgence offered us.

"Beware, gentlemen, beware," I urged, "I swear he is not here! I swear it, do you hear?"

A howl of impatience and then a sudden movement of the crowd as though the rush were coming warned me to temporize no longer. "Stay! Stay!" I added hastily. "One minute! Hear me! You are too many for us. Will you swear to let us go safe and untouched, if we give you passage?"

A dozen voices shrieked assent. But I looked at the butcher only. He seemed to be an honest man, out of his profession.

"Ay, I swear it!" he cried with a nod.

"By the Mass?"

"By the Mass."

I twitched Croisette's sleeve, and he tore the fuse from his weapon, and flung the gun—too heavy to be of use to us longer—to the ground. It was done in a moment. While the mob swept over the barricade, and smashed the rich furniture of it in wanton malice, we filed aside, and nimbly slipped under it one by one. Then we hurried in single file to the end of the room, no one taking much notice of us. All were pressing on, intent on their prey. We gained the door as the butcher struck his first blow on that which we had guarded—on that which we had given up. We sprang down the stairs with bounding hearts, heard as we reached the outer door the roar of many voices, but stayed not to look behind—paused indeed for nothing. Fear, to speak candidly, lent us wings. In three seconds we had leapt the prostrate gates, and were in the street. A cripple, with two or three dogs, a knot of women looking timidly yet curiously, in a horse tethered to the strap—we saw nothing else. No one stayed us No one raised a hand, and in another minute we had turned a corner, and were out of sight of the house.

"They will take a gentleman's word another time," I said with a quiet smile as I put up my sword.

"I would like to see her face at this moment," Croisette replied. "You saw Mme. d'O?"

I shook my head, not answering. I was not sure, and I had a queer, sickening dread of the subject. If I had seen her, I had seen—oh! it was too horrible, too unnatural! Her own sister! Her own brother-in-law!

I hastened to change the subject. "The Pavannes," I made shift to say, "must have had five minutes' start."

"More," Croisette answered, "if madame and he got away at once, if all has gone well with them, and they have not been stopped in the streets, they should be at Mirepoix's by now. They seemed to be pretty sure that he would take them in."

"Ah!" I sighed. "What fools we were to bring madame from that place! If we had not meddled with her affairs we might have reached Louis long ago—our Louis, I mean."

"True," Croisette answered, softly: "but remember that then we should not have saved the other Louis—as I trust we have. He would still be in Pallavicini's hands. Come, Anne, let us think it is all for the best," he added, his face shining with a steady courage

"Ay, to the rescue!" I replied, catching his spirit. "First to the right, I think, second to the left, first on the right again. That was the direction given us, was it not? The house opposite a book shop with the sign of the Head of Erasmus. Forward, boys! We may do it yet."

But before I pursue our fortunes farther let me explain. The room we had guarded so jealously was empty! The plan had been mine and I was proud of it. For once Croisette had fallen into his rightful place. My flight from the gate, the vain attempt to close the house—these were all designed to draw the assailants to one spot. Pavannes and his wife—the latter hastily disguised as a boy—had hidden behind the door of the hutch by the gates—the porter's hutch, and had slipped out and fled in the first confusion of the attack.

For the servants, as we learned afterwards, who had hidden themselves in the lower part of the house, got away in the same manner, though some of them—they were but few in all—were stopped as Huguenots and killed before the day ended. I had the more reason to hope that Pavannes and his wife would get clear off, inasmuch as I had given the duke's ring to him, thinking it might serve him in a strait. And believing that we would have little to fear ourselves, once clear of his house, unless we should meet the vidame indeed.

We did not meet him, as it turned out; but before we had traversed a quarter of the distance we had to go we found that fears based on reason were not the only terrors we had to resist. Pavannes' house, where we had hitherto been, stood at some distance from the center of the blood storm which had enwrapped unhappy Paris that morning. It was several hundred paces from the Rue de Bethisy where the admiral lived, and what with his comparative remoteness and the excitement of our little drama, we had not attended much to the fury of the bells, the shots and cries and uproar which proclaimed the state of the city. We had not pictured the scenes which were happening so near. Now in the streets the truth broke upon us, and drove the blood from our cheeks. A hundred yards, the turning of a corner, sufficed. We who but yesterday left the country, who only a week before were boys,

Fear, to speak candidly, lent us wings.

careless as other boys, not recking for death at all, were plunging now into the midst of horrors I cannot describe. And the awful contrast between the sky above and the things above us! Even now the lark was singing not far from us; the sunshine was striking the topmost stories of the houses; the fleecy clouds were passing overhead, the freshness of a summer morning was—

Ah! where was it! Not here in the narrow lanes, surely, that echoed and reechoed with shrieks and curses and frantic prayers; in which bands of furious men rushed up and down, and where archers on the guard and the more cruel rabble were breaking in doors and windows, and hurrying with bloody weapons from house to house, seeking, pursuing, and at last killing in some horrid corner, some place of darkness—killing with blow on blow dealt on writhing bodies! Not here, surely, where each minute a child, a woman died silently, a man snarling like a wolf—happy if he had snatched his weapon and got his back to the wall; where foul corpses dammed the very blood that ran down the kennel, and children — little children — played with them!

I was at Cahors in 1580 in the great street fight; and there women were killed. I was with Chatillon nine years later, when he rode through the Faubourgs of Paris, with this very day and his father Coligny in his mind, and gave no quarter. I was at Coutras and Ivry, and more than once have seen prisoners led out to be piked in batches ay, and by hundreds! But war is war, and these were its victims, dying for the most part under God's heaven with en fresh roused from their sleep. I felt on those occasions no such horror. I have never felt such burning pity and indignation as on the morning I am describing, that long-past summer morning when I first saw the sun shining on the streets of Paris. Croisette clung to me, sick and white, shutting his eyes and ears, and letting me guide him as I would. Marie strode along on the other side of him, his lips closed, his eyes sinister. Once a soldier of the guard whose blood-stained hands betrayed the work he had done, came reeling—he was drunk, as were many of the butchers—across our path, and I gave way a little. Marie did not, but walked stolidly on as if he did not see him, as if the way were clear, and there were no ugly thing in God's image blocking it.

Only his hand went as if by accident to the haft of his dagger. The archer—fortunately for himself and for us too—reeled clear of us. We escaped that danger. But to see women killed and pass by—it was horrible! So horrible that if in those moments I had had the wishing-cap, I would have asked but for 5,000 riders, and leave to charge with them through the streets of Paris! I would have had the days of the Jacquerie back again, and my men-at-arms behind me!

For ourselves, though the orgy was at its height when we passed, we were not molested. We were stopped indeed three times—once in each of the streets we traversed—by different bands of murderers. But as we wore the same badges as themselves, and cried "Vive la Messe!" and gave our names, we were allowed to proceed. I can give no idea of the confusion and uproar, and I scarcely believe myself now that we saw some of the things we witnessed. Once a man gayly dressed, and splendidly mounted, dashed past us, waving his naked sword and crying in a frenzied way: "Bleed them! Bleed them! Bleed in May, as good to-day!" and never ceased crying out the same words until he passed beyond our hearing. Once we came upon the bodies of a father and two sons, which lay piled together in the kennel; partly stripped already. The youngest boy could not have been more than 13. I mention this group, not as surpassing others in pathos, but because it is well known now that this boy, Jacques Nompar de Caumont, was not dead, but lives today, my friend, the Marshal de la Force.

This reminds me too of the single act of kindness we were able to perform. We found ourselves suddenly, on turning a corner, amid a gang of seven or eight soldiers, who had stopped and surrounded a handsome boy, apparently about 14. He wore a scholar's gown, and had some books under his arm, to which he clung firmly—though only perhaps by instinct—notwithstanding the furious air of the men who were threatening him with death. They were loudly demanding his name, as we paused opposite them. He either could not or would not give it, but said several times in his fright that he was going to the College of Burgundy. Was he a Catholic? they cried. He was silent. With an oath the man who had hold of his collar lifted up his pike, and naturally the lad raised the books to guard his face. A cry broke from Croisette. He rushed forward to stay the blow.

"See! see!" he exclaimed loudly, his voice arresting the man's arm in the very act of falling. "He has a mass book! He has a mass book! He is not a heretic! He is a Catholic!"

The fellow lowered his weapon, and sullenly snatched the books. He looked at them stupidly with bloodshot wandering eyes, the red cross on the vellum bindings the only thing he understood. But it was enough for him; he bid the boy begone, and released him with a cuff and an oath.

CYCLING COMMENT.

T. J. Carey, of West Front street, is now riding his new Spalding wheel.

Messenger Higgins, of the Postal Telegraph Company, has purchased a Warwick wheel.

Jay Eaton, of the Jersey Wheel Co's racing team, is entered in the indoor race meet at Chicago on May 11th to 16th.

Charles VanMiddlesworth, of Elmwood place, has ordered a Plainfield bicycle from the Plainfield Bicycle Company.

Theo. Kurzhals, Jr., of West Second street, received his new Relay wheel yesterday, and is now prepared to go on the track.

Harry Maddox, known on the racing path as the "Asbury Park Fisherman," has blossomed forth as a bicycle agent in Monmouth county.

A shipment of 22 Cleveland and Crescent wheels were received by the F. L. C. Martin Cycle Company Monday. Fourteen more were received yesterday.

Road racing is going to be a popular pastime among the New England cities this season, and already announcements come from many cities of numerous road races.

The forthcoming road book issued by the Pennsylvania Division of the L. A. W., will, it is said, be one of the most complete publications of the kind in existence. The maps are expected to be exceptionally fine.

It is not unlikely that an official handicapper may be appointed to go the rounds of the National circuit. The Racing Board has the matter under consideration, and believes it would result in better contests than where the cracks who follow the circuit are handicapped by different men three or four times a week.

Very shortly there will be running through the streets of Boston, handsome hyrseless mail wagons for the collection and distribution of mail matter. These horseless wagons will be propelled either by electricity or naphtha. They will be the same long, narrow mail vehicles which are now used on postal cars on the street railways in many cities.

Charles Carpenter, of Rahway, has signed with the Jersey Wheel Company and will ride in their racing team. He is now doing his preliminary training on the road and has made Plainfield his headquarters for the present. Carpenter and Barnett will open the season at Philadelphia on May 16th, when both will ride in a ten-mile professional handicap.

Another race for the supremacy is one between cycling and baseball, says The American Wheelman. Cycling manages usually to give baseball a handicap and beat it out for popular favor. By the way, it is a notable fact that in the revived Olympic games cycling was one of the few modern sports included in the programme.

The Police Commissioners of Newark have decided to detail two policemen in citizens' clothes for duty on the streets in the First Precinct, which is the part of the city most frequented by wheelmen. They will be mounted on bicycles, and will regulate the speed of wheelmen and otherwise curb the recklessness of cyclists now prevalent in the district. The action of the commissioners has the endorsement of the better class of wheelmen.

Among the latest to purchase Cleveland Swell Specials from the F. L. C. Martin Cycle Company are Dr. F. C Ard, John V. Beekman, Jr., G. E. Hall, W. M. Runyon, H. C. Adams, Mrs. W. E. Stelle and Miss Estelle Daniel. Crescent wheels have been purchased by Miss Jessie A. Dayton, of South Plainfield, Mrs. L. H. Burns, John McMurtree, William H. Addis, L. G. Fulton, John Sharkey, P. Corrigan and J. F. Horman. Meredith Dryden has purchased a Cleveland racer.

The one-mile novice race, for club members only, promises to provide lots of sport for the Crescent Wheelmen's Decoration Day race meet in itself. A number of the younger riders are quietly training and expect to spring a surprise on the other competitors when the race starts. Of course there are many that think they can pick the winner, but the chances are that a "dark horse" will appear at the finish. Among those who have signified their intention of entering the race are E. I. Serrell, J. R. Giles, G. R. Rockfellow, T. U. Smith, F. J. Pope, Tom Hannon and Clifford Pierson.

The cycle path fever has struck Jersey and is aided and abetted by the recent law enabling and authorizing municipalities to build cycle paths. The most advanced project of this sort is that of the wheelmen of Monmouth, Mercer and Ocean counties, who have agreed on a route for a path from Asbury Park to Trenton, a distance of forty-five miles. The Mercer county wheelmen are also agitating the building of a cycle path along the Delaware river bank from Camden to Trenton. The wheelmen of Jersey City and Newark have been so encouraged by the prospective success of their South Jersey brethern with the Asbury Park-Trenton path that they have decided to agitate the question of a path from Newark through Harrison to Jersey City, along the old turnpike and Harrison avenue. The excellent stone roads of Essex, Union and Monmouth counties, with the proposed cycle paths, will give the riders of the two wheeled vehicle a continuous roadway from Jersey City to the seaside resorts along the Jersey coast and even to Philadelphia. The craze for century runs will no doubt receive from these projects stimulation which it does not need at present.—New York Sun.

AROUND THE BASES.

T. Lyons will play short stop for the Fishkill Athletic Club, of New York city.

The Somerset Baseball Club of Somerville opened the season last Saturday with a hotly contested game with the strong nine from the Reading Academy, of Flemington, on the Somerville diamond. Despite the chilly weather and the cold east wind quite a number turned out to greet the home team on its first appearance on the diamond. Conover, the local pitcher, had the ball well under control for six innings. In the seventh inning four runs were batted out by the visitors, but Garretson was in put in the box and struck out the following six men, which saved the game. The teams were as follows:

VARIOUS SPORTS.

The entries of the team from Stevens School for the High School athletic games were received too late to be added to the list of entries published in yesterday's Press. The preparatory school from Hoboken will be represented by J. H. Cluckering in the short dashes. W. Sharkey is also entered in the 220 yard dash. S. McClave will ride in the one-fourth mile bicycle and J. Schaeffer in the one mile bicycle race. R. Shippen is the Stevens entry in putting the shot and throwing the hammer. G. Holly and J. Schaeffer are entered in the two mile bicycle race. There will be no Stevens "Prep" boys in either pole vault, high jump or 440 yard run.

At the meeting of the Board of Directors of the Union, Middlesex and Somerset County Game, Protective and Propogating Society held last evening, articles of incorporation were signed, and the properties under control of the society were ordered to be posted according to the law. Favorable reports were made of the game recently liberated. The secretary was ordered to communicate with game commissioners urging the appointment of Percy C. Ohl as a game warden. Complaints were secured regarding the State officers taking bass from the New Market pond for the purpose of stocking of other waters. This pond was originally stocked in 1877 by Mr. Ohl at his own expense. Investigation of the matter was ordered. The committee for purchasing game is to be continued with power.

WHIST.

"Deacon Reed lost the game!" was the exclamation made last night at the Park Club at the conclusion of the third game of whist in the contest between the Long and Short Suitors. The score stood 12 to 11 in favor of the Long Suitors, and all because the "Deacon" lost three points on the last round. He will be forgiven but not forgotten, and the losing team are now wearing sackcloth and ashes until they recover their honors. The Long Suitors have now won two games and the Shorts one.

A Needed Distinction.

She—I think there ought to be some distinctive title by which married men could be distinguished from unmarried ones, as women are designated by Miss and Mrs.

He—Well, a married man might be called "Mr." and an unmarried one "master."

She—I don't like the word master; it lacks dignity, and you know in the old times it was applied principally to persons of low degrees.

He—But it is so eminently a proper term.

She—I don't see just why.

DEMOCRATS AT TRENTON

SENATOR SMITH CHOSEN CHAIRMAN OF THE STATE COMMITTEE.

The Platform of the Convention Declares for Sound Money—Jas. J. Bergen Temporary Chairman-Permanent Officers

(Special to The Daily Press.)

Trenton, May 7th—The first step in the redemption of old Jersey towards placing her once more where she belongs in the Democratic column was taken at just 9:15 last night, when the Democratic State Central Committee, at a largely-attended meeting, held at the Trenton House, made United States Senator Smith its chairman, and he accepted the place with a speech that had the ring of victory in the next campaign in every word that word that he uttered.

There was a large attendance at the meeting of the State Committee, which was presided over by the retiring chairman, E. F. C. Young, of Hudson. Immediately on the election of Senator Smith he was conducted to the rooms of the committee and in a well-timed and peculiarly effective speech accepted the honor conferred upon him by the committee and also took occasion to impress upon the minds of the committee the necessity of active, aggressive work from this time on until the votes are counted on election day in order that the State of New Jersey may once again take her place among the Democratic States.

Last night two of the four delegates-at-large were already assured in the persons of Senator Smith and Allan L. McDermott. For the other two places there were several candidates. Ex-Senator Blodgett is anxious to go to Chicago as one of the delegates-at-large, but there was considerable opposition to him in many sections of the state.

Ex-Senator Fred. C. Marsh, of Elizabeth, was also a candidate for one of the four places and around the hotel corridors last evening his candidacy was the subject of much favorable comment.

Ex-Senator William J. Keyes, of Somerville, was prominently spoken of as one of the delegates. Mr. Keyes is a member of the State Committee, and has a large number of friends among the delegates.

Ex-Assemblyman Wm. J. Thompson was induced this morning to withdraw as a candidate for delegate at large. Ex Judge Albert Tallman, of Gloucester, was agreed upon in Thompson's place, but this did not take into consideration ex-Judge Howard Carrow, of Camden, who decided to stay in the contest as a candidate for the South Jersey membership of the quartette. The four delegates at large agreed upon by the leaders comprise Senator Smith, Allen McDermott, of Hudson, ex-United States Senator Rufus Blodgett, of Monmouth, and ex-Judge Tallman. Notwithstanding the above, it is generally thought that there will be a long drawn out fight between South and East Jersey factions.

The convention convened at high noon today in the Taylor Opera House, and was called to order by Senator Smith, who named ex-Speaker Bergen as temporary chairman. John Matthews, of Union, William Pintard, of Monmouth, and Samuel Semple, of Burlington, were appointed secretaries. Assemblyman John W. Queen, of Hudson, was selected as permanent chairman.

The platform is a strong one and comes without equivocation for sound money. This particular plank of the document is as follows:

"The Democracy of the State of New Jersey in convention assembled do declare that the interests of the people demand that the earnings of trade, agriculture, manufacture and commerce, and especially those of labor, shall be paid in money of the greatest intrinsic value and of the highest standard adopted by the civilized nations of the world. We are, therefore, unalterably opposed to all devices and schemes for the debasing of our currency."

The platform along this same line favors the enactment by Congress of such legislation as will ensure a banking currency ample in volume for all the needs of business. It declares the party opposed to all efforts to materially alter the present just conservative tariff law. Expression of sympathy is extended to Cuba in her fight with Spain. President Cleveland is endorsed for his good administration of office. The last State Legislature is severely scored for its many hypocritical acts and professions. Prosecutor Dungan was elected chairman of the Somerset county delegation, ex-Senator Keys vice-president, and D. J. Carney, secretary.

James E. Martine was made chairman of the Union county delegation. E. H. Atterbury was unable to represent the Third ward, of this city, and Carl Phiefer acted as his alternate. John J. Kenney represented the First ward in place of Michael DeCourcy.

WANTS RECOMPENSE FOR DAMAGES.

John W. James Suing the Bound Brook Electric Light Company.

The case of John W. James, of Plainfield, against the Bound Brook Electric Light and Power Company, for damages came up in Justice Mattison's court this morning. The plaintiff was represented by Lawyer W. S. Angleman and the defendant by Lawyer Suydam. It appears that on the night of November 12th, 1895, a horse and wagon belonging to Mr. James collided with an electric light wire at Bound Brook and the wagon was completely wrecked. The street through which the horse and wagon was driven by Mr. James' boy, it is claimed, is not a public one and has never been accepted by the borough. It is located on the Pierce property and sometime ago poles were erected there and wires strung to furnish light for Mr. Pierce's house. The poles were left standing while the wires were removed. Later Mr. Pierce's superintendent gave the company the privilege of stringing wires to their factory. The wires were run from Main street over the railroad track to the factory. On the night in question the men were not able to finish the wiring and when they stopped work they fastened the wire slanting around the pole standing in the street in question. At the time it was very dark and when an attempt was made to drive to the home of Constable York, who lives at the head of the unaccepted street, the buggy caught in the wire with the result told above. Hence the suit for damages. The plaintiff claimed carelessness, while the defendants held that the plaintiff had no right to drive through the lane, which was a private driveway. A map and photograph of the place was offered in evidence. The plaintiff also claimed that one wire struck the horse, but this is disputed. In several instances both sides agreed. The vital question appears to be whether the company is responsible for the damage. The case was argued for three hours, after which Justice Mattison reserved his decision until Monday morning at 10 o'clock.

JOINING THE SALVATION ARMY.

The Local Corps Increased by Several New Members Last Night.

The Salvation Army had a hallelujah time at their hall on West Second street last evening. Considering all things there was an excellent attendance and all enjoyed the feast of good things provided. Brigadier Evans was in charge and he was assisted by Ensign Marsh and Taylor and Staff Captain Dunham from headquarters. The latter had charge of the music which was added to by three cornets, a guitar and a concertina. Several rousing army songs were rendered and a helpful testimony service followed. Brigadier Evans then took charge and dedicated to the army Ernest Stahl, the infant son of Mr. and Mrs. Christopher Stahl. The service was very interesting and impressive as the mother gave her son to the Lord and the army. The swearing in of Brother Mair as penitent form sergeant was then performed by Brigadier Evans. A very touching portion of the service followed when William Brown, the boy drummer, was enrolled. Immediately afterward his mother and three sisters confessed Christ and joined the army.

Tonight there will be a brass band of eighteen pieces present at the meeting and it is likely that Brigadier Evans will also be there.

A LIVELY RUNAWAY.

A Horse Breaks Loose From a Lawn Roller and Runs Riot.

While a man, employed by Thomas Minford, of Watchung avenue, was rolling the lawn this morning with a horse-roller the framework of the machine broke and frightened the horse. The horse started and the wreck of the roller dragging at its heels increased its fright. It ran down Watchung avenue, barely escaping a collision with Paul Kimball who was riding on his wheel, and turned into North avenue. In front of J. T. Vail's the remains of the roller gave away, but the horse continued until he ran into of the side windows of Miss Lincoln's floral store. A number of the panes of glass were broken and the horse cut just above the eye.

Fred Barker caught the animal just as it plunged into L. A. Hummer's horse and wagon tied in the stable in the rear of Miss Lincoln's store.

Scattered Too Many Handbills.

Alfred Orbann, an employe of Sternberger, the clothier, was arrested at the North Avenue station last night for being disorderly and scattering hand bills on the platform. Special Officer Martin warned him repeatedly to stop, but Orbann became angry. Judge DeMeza suspended sentence on him this morning.

YOUNG AMERICA WAS IN EVIDENCE AT ALL POINTS.

For Once in His Life He Was Able to Get His Parents to Recognize His Solicitations—Best Performance Ever Seen Here

Peanut shucks, aching sides from a too liberal indulgence in a red decoction called lemonade, and a remorseful mind of those who may have been "touched!" is all there is left of the circus. What was Plainfield's pleasure yesterday is the joy of the Newark people today.

It was a great day for Johnnie and for Johnnie's popper, mommer and sisters. But Johnnie, albeit a fine specimen of young America, was prima facie evidence that the circus is no ordinary affair. Johnnie was the first one awake yesterday morning, and the first one to be on the show ground. A city of white tents seemed to arise as if by magic, where an hour before a brindle bovine had been placidly chewing her cud. The clock-like regularity and system with which the circus paraphernalia was put in position to carry out the "greatest show on earth" was a revelation to Johnnie. He implored every official of the circus who seemed to have any power to give him a job to earn his way into the big tent in the afternoon. Such boys as were fortunate enough to enjoy the favor of "carrying water for the elephants" or some other like duty, were the envy of all other youngsters. Johnnie was enthusiastic and when he followed the circus parade down town, and went home for his midday meal he was full of talk. For once in his life his mother listened to his prattle. She had seen the circus parade and that was all the argument needed. Shortly after 1 o'clock found the whole family going towards the show grounds. And they saw the best circus ever presented in this city.

The acrobatic and aerial acts were startling innovations in daring feats, and the equestrian performances were marvels of horse intelligence and training. The act in which John O'Brien uses fifty thoroughbred horses was the best spectcle of its kind ever presented for the amusement of the public. A clever innovation were women clowns and ring mistresses, though it cannot be said that they are a great success. The performance all way through was free from any act or word that might offend the most fastidious.

Before the performances, many of the crowd visited the menagerie tent. The natives of India attracted especial attention. The little dwarf there seemed quite to enjoy his position. Early in the evening a well-known man was leaning over the rope watching the Indian dancers on the platform. The dwarf walked up to him but the man did not notice him.

"Hello," grunted the dwarf as he brought his hand down on the man's back with a resounding slap. The Plainfielder jumped as if he had been shot and the native of India proceeded to explain what a great bargain it was to obtain his picture for five cents.

One new sight was the great number of cyclists that appeared for both afternoon and evening performances. Some left their wheels while many brought them right into the tent. The circus attracted crowds from far and near and there were many strange parties that visited the city. One old fashioned carryall, drawn by a raw-boned horse, contained a remarkable load. The woman of the party, evidently of the "new" variety, although she did come from the country, was in command. Two small children were seated beside her while an old woman and two more children occupied the rear seat while in the bottom, enconsed in a clothes basket, lay a little baby. This strange equipage halted on Front street to view the parade. The smell of the wild beasts excited the horse so that the commander of the expedition climbed out on the shafts and unharnessed the horse and a colered man led it away. They saw the parade undisturbed.

A Plainfield man named Stewart, while going to the circus yesterday afternoon, got into a crowd of people, with the result of having his pocket picked of $30. It was a costly trip, but he could get no satisfaction and was obliged to stand the loss. He will, no doubt, always remember the circus.

Lower Freight Rates.

The Central Railroad of New Jersey has made a general reduction of freight rates all along the road from New York. The rates per hundred to Plainfield are now as follows: First class, 14 cents; second class, 12 cents; third class, 10 cents; fourth class, 8 cents; fifth class, 7 cents; sixth class, 6 cents. The new rate will take effect tomorrow, and will mean a great saving for the local merchants who have big shipments of goods. It is a reduction of 3 cents a hundred pounds.

MARY SAW THE SIGHTS.

BUT THEY WERE NOT AT THE GREATEST SHOW ON EARTH.

She Came From Westfield to See the Circus, But Only Got as Far as the Several Saloons, and Then Went to the Rookery

Of course the circus attracted many visitors to this city, and there were some, sorrowful to relate, that did several things that should have been left undone. Mrs. Mary McGraff was one of the latter. She lives in the old station at Westfield, and does not object to a friendly glass of beer, now and then. Indeed, she was so elated over the fact that she was going to the circus that she drank her full share of four boxes of beer before starting for Plainfield. She came up here on the 7:34 train, and was to meet a friend, but the friend failed to materialize. According to her story, she inquired of a colored man the way to the circus, and then she decided to go and see a friend named Bridget at the Revere House. When she reached there, she said, she found that Bridget had been employed there, but had left there two years ago. She then happened to meet the same colored man at the corner of Park avenue and Fourth street and inquired the way. She indignantly told how a policeman has suddently appeared and arrested her.

Roundsman Frederickson, who made the arrest, had a very different story to tell. When Mrs. McGraff reached here she was feeling happy. As her friend did not appear and it was too late to go to the circus, she struck up an acquaintance with a colored man and proceeded to "do" the town. Together they visited every saloon in the city that they could find and had a glorious time until 11 o'clock when the saloons closed.

The City Hotel was their next stopping place and here they attracted such a crowd that the police had to be called upon to disperse it. The negro escaped and Mrs. McGraff was started down Park avenue. Her companion of the evening met her near Fourth street. After walking about they stopped on the corner of Park avenue and Fourth street. Mrs. McGraff started to disrobe when Roundsman Frederickson arrested and locked her up. The colored individual fled for parts unknown.

Mrs. McGraff was very penitent in the city court this morning after the officer finished his testimony, and City Judge De Meza suspended sentence on her.

STOLE SHOES.

Thieves Enter a Shoe Store at Front and Church Streets.

Sometime during last night thieves broke into Geo. Stagaard's shoe shop, corner of East Front and Church streets, and stole a number of pairs of good shoes which belonged to other people and were left to be repaired. They entered through a window on the Church street side and made way with their booty before anyone appeared. Nothing was known of the affair until this morning, when Mr. Stagaard opened his store and found the window open and the shoes missing. Nothing else of any importance was taken, as very little is kept in the shop. Mr. Stagaard is very sorry to lose the shoes, especially because they are not his property. He has an idea that the theft was committed by some of the circus contingent.

Officer's Heroic Act.

A woman living in Fanwood drove to Plainfield yesterday afternoon with her horse and buggy and attended the circus. When nearing the tents her horse became frightened and she did also. She dropped the reins and gave one scream. The sounds reached the ear of the ever-alert Roundsman Mattox, and he rushed into the road and at the risk of his life caught the frantic animal. One end of the shafts almost penetrated his stomach, but through good judgment he gained the control of the horse, and the woman became calm.

Thieves Nocturnal Raids.

The Mountainside farmers are suffering from the nocturnal raids of thieves, who carry off chickens, bees, grain and other articles. One farmer had a pig stolen, but the animal set up a squealing as the thieves drove toward Newark and they dropped it.

Mr. D. P. Davis, a prominent liveryman and merchant of Goshen, Va., has this to say on the subject of rheumatism: "I take pleasure in recommending Chamberlain's Pain Balm for rheumatism, as I know from personal experience that it will do all that is claimed for it. A year ago this spring my brother was laid up in bed with inflammatory rheumatism and suffered intensely. The first application of Chamberlain's Pain Balm eased the pain and the use of one bottle completely cured him. For sale by T. S. Armstrong, druggist.

A BIG REAL ESTATE ENTERPRISE.

The New Orange Industrial Association Hoping to Establish a City.

For several months interest and curiosity have been excited in Essex and Union counties by the operations of a real estate company which has had men at work on a tract of land about three miles to the south and west of Newark and between South Orange, Elizabeth, Roselle and the Rahway river. The company's officers and employes have preserved an air of mystery in regard to the enterprise that is on foot. They have now disclosed their plan. The organization, which is called the New Orange Industrial Association, hopes to establish a new city. The originator of the idea is C. W. Manahan, Jr., who is said to have successfully carried out other real estate enterprises.

The land secured is about three and one-half miles square. The proposed city is to be called New Orange, the name originally given to the city of New York in 1673. Efforts are to be made to attract manufacturers to the place, and over 100 acres has been reserved for industriul purposes. The association claims to have already secured many industrial establishments. A belt line of railroad will, it is said, go by the doors of the factories, and will connect with the Central Railroad of New Jersey, Lehigh Valley, and Delaware, Lackawanna and Western roads. Besides, electric railroads will be built.

In the centre of the property is Wewanna Lake, which when work on it is completed will be about a mile long and from one hundred yards to half a mile wide. It winds in and out among a series of tree-covered hills. At the western extremity of the lake a casino will be constructed.

CALLED THE CHURCH A NUISANCE.

A Hot Discussion That Took Place in an Episcopal Convention.

At the second day's meeting of the Episcopal convention, held at Elizabeth yesterday, an amendment was proposed to one of the cannons to the effect that hereafter the Bishop and standing committees should have no power to permit the erection of a church building within a quarter of a mile of any existing church. This proposal provoked a long and vehement debate. It was recognized on all sides that the object of attack was the Church of the Redeemer of North Plainfield. This was openly acknowledged by some of the delegates from the Church of the Holy Cross. B. R. Western and C. L. Murphy addressed the convention and the latter closed by saying that "the Church of the Redeemer was a nuisance." The convention, however, by an overwhelming majority, tabled the same, thereby laying it over for one year.

JERSEY AND THE NATION

FAVORITE SONS WHO HAVE BEEN RECOGNIZED BY THE COUNTRY.

The State Has Never Wavered From the Democratic Column But Once, and That Was in the Greeley Campaign.

New Jersey is not of great account territorially in the United States, and her electoral votes, which have varied between seven and nine, but are now ten, have been cast for Democratic candidates so steadily that the political influence of the State has seldom been decisive in National Conventions. From 1852 to 1892 the electoral votes of New Jersey were uniformly cast for the Democratic Presidential candidates with two breaks only. In 1860 the electoral votes of the State were divided, some being cast for the Democratic and some for the Republican candidate, though on the popular vote the State was Democratic. In 1872 there was a large Democratic defection owing to the nomination of Mr. Greeley, and in that year, for the only time in forty years, the Democrats were in a numerical minority.

Though the political importance of the State has not been usually large, New Jersey has not been disregarded in National conventions. The pioneer convention of the Republican party in 1856 nominated a New Jersey man, William L. Dayton, for Vice-President. In 1864 the Democratic convention at Chicago put at the head of the National ticket George B McClellan, of New Jersey. In 1868 Joel Parker, of Freehold, was the first choice of the true-blue Jersey Democrats in the National convention of the Democracy held in New York city. In 1876 Gov. Parker was again the first choice of New Jersey, and in the Democratic National convention of that year at St. Louis he received on both ballots taken the solid support of the Cranberry State. In the Democratic National convention of 1880 Gov. Parker was for the third time favored by the Democrats of New Jersey, and in the National convention of 1884 at Chicago the Jersey Democrats had a candidate of their own in the late Leon Abbett.

The Republicans, in 1888, had among the candidates to choose from Wm. Walter Phelps, of Passaic. He received 25 votes for President on the first ballot, and was afterward favored by many Republicans for Vice-President when it became certain that the Republican nomination for that office would come to the East. Mr. Phelps was the most formidable opponent of Mr. Morton, receiving 119 votes, against 93 for W. O. Bradley, of Kentucky, now Governor of that State. Mr. Morton was nominated on the first ballot, the Republican Convention giving more heed to the preference of New York than that of New Jersey, and with good reason, as afterward appeared, the electoral votes of New York being given to the Republican national ticket, while those of New Jersey went to the Democracy. In the National Convention of the Prohibition party, in 1888, a Jerseyman, Clinton B. Fisk, was put at the head of the national ticket, and he polled 7,000 votes in his own State. In the politi al contest of 1892 New Jersey was not represented in either of the party Conventions. This year an effort is being made to secure for a prominent Jersey Republican, Garret A. Hobart, the Vice-Presidential nomination on the Republican ticket, and the recent Trenton Convention instructed the Jersey delegates to give him a vigorous and undivided support.

No Democratic Jerseyman has yet appeared in the political horizon, and in fact no Democratic Jerseyman has been prominent in a national Democratic Convention since Cleveland's name was first presented. Cleveland is a native of Caldwell, N. J.

To Open the Campaign on July 15th.

Senator Bradley, of Asbury Park, received a letter from President Higgins, of the State Republican League, yesterday announcing that a meeting would be held in the Asbury Park Auditorium on July 15th to open up the national campaign. It is estimated that 5,000 Republicans and independent voters from all parts of the State will be present.

Old Go Out, New Come In.

The final meeting of the old Somerset Board of Freeholders will be held Tuesday and the new board will meet for organization on Wednesday.

For every quarter in a man's pocket there are a dozen uses; and to use each one in such a way as to derive the greatest benefit is a question every one must solve for himself. We believe, however, that no better use could be made of one of these quarters than to exchange it for a bottle of Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhœa Remedy, a medicine that every family should be provided with. HARRISON TO SPEAK

Will Address the Indiana Republican Convention To-day.

FIGHT OF THE M'KINLEY SUPPORTERS

All in Doubt This Morning as To Instructions—Platform for Protection, Reciprocity and Sound Money.

Indianapolis, May 7.—The morning of the day of the republican state convention finds the question of whether or not the delegates-at-large shall be instructed for McKinley somewhat in doubt, largely because it seems to be a matter of indifference with the delegates. Left to themselves they would probably instruct, and Chairman Gowdy of the state committee is doing what he can to have the instructions put through, yet leading republicans talk against it on the ground that McKinley is safe anyhow and there is no use of stirring up bad feeling in the state by forcing through instructions. Last evening the committee on rules and permanent organization of the convention sent a sub-committee to Gen. Harrison's home with an invitation to address the convention and this invitation was accepted. He will probably make a speech shortly after the body organizes. What effect his presence and talk will have upon the proposition to instruct is problematical.

McKinley Conferences.

Two McKinley conferences of delegates were held yesterday, one to "feel the pulse" and one to make a "count of noses" and check up how the delegations in each county stood. This could not be done very thoroughly for only about two-thirds of the counties were represented. They did, however, appoint a committee from each district to arrange to capture the committee on resolutions at the district meeting last night. A committee composed of J. B. Kenner and Frank M. Dice of Crawfordsville was appointed to prepare the resolutions of instructions for McKinley. This they did and it was approved by the meeting. It was agreed that if the committee on resolutions could be captured, it should be inserted as a part of the platform, and if not, it should be offered as a minority report from this committee.

Protection and Sound Money.

The meetings of the district delegations last night made their selections for members of the resolutions, rules and organization and credentials committees, as well as vice-presidents and assistant secretaries of the convention. These committees met immediately after their selection, and the platform committee was in session until a late hour. Most of its discussion was on the McKinley resolutions and the details of planks on state issues. Upon national questions there was no disagreement. The document starts out with a preamble of some length, pointing out the weaknesses of the democratic administration, denouncing its tendency towards a revenue tariff, calling attention to the bond sales and holding it responsible for the business depression of the past three years. The tariff plank declares for a thorough protective policy, supplemented by the reciprocity idea. The currency plank declares for sound money with an added clause pronouncing flatly against the free coinage of silver. While it does not mention the gold standard, it does not waste many words about bimetalism and an international agreement.

PECK BROTHERS' FAILURE.

Receivers Expect To Be Able To Pay Dollar for Dollar.

New Haven, Conn., May 7.—The receivers of Peck Brothers & Co. have issued a circular to the creditors of the concern giving in a general way the present condition of the concern. The statement says that the assets of the company on the most conservative estimate cannot possibly be valued at less than the entire amount of their liabilities. The obligations of the company are placed at $560,000, and it is stated that the receivers hope to pay dollar for dollar.

Mrs. Runyon and Daughter Return Home.

Quarantine, S. I., May 7.—Among the passengers who arrived last evening from Bremen, via Southampton, per steamer Lahn, were Mrs. Theodore Runyon and daughter and eight members of the Boston athletic team who participated in the Olympic games recently held at Athens. James B. Connoly was the only member of the team who did not return by the Lahn.

Christian Workers' Conference.

New Haven, Conn., May 7.—Rev. John C. Collins of this city, secretary of the International Association of Christian Workers, has returned from Pittsburg, where a strong effort is being made to secure the conference for next year. St. Louis and Louisville have also made application for the convention, but the chances are that it will go to Pittsburg.

Bridge Contract Awarded.

Albany, May 7.—Superintendent Aldridge of the state department of public works has awarded contracts for the construction of the Porter avenue bridge in Buffalo, awarding to the Buffalo Dredging company the substructure work at $19,497.75; and to the Buffalo Bridge & Iron works, the superstructure work at $51,500.

Advised To Keep Away from Manitoba.

Liverpool, May 7.—The Mercury of this city prints a communication from the Carpenters and Joiners' union of Winnipeg, Manitoba, in which mechanics and laborers are advised against emigrating to Manitoba. The communication speaks disparagingly of the country generally.

JERSEY PROHIBITIONISTS.

Main Points of the Platform Adopted at the Trenton Convention.

Trenton, May 7.—The platform adopted by the prohibition convention declares that the traffic in intoxicating drinks is the crying evil of the day and its total suppression by law is demanded. It declares that the right of suffrage should not be denied on account of sex; that civil service reform should be extended as far as practicable to all branches of the public service, municipal, state and national; that courts of arbitration should be established with power to settle disputes as well as those between capital and labor; that monopolies of whatever character are unfriendly to the general welfare and should be restrained by effective laws. The democratic party of New Jersey is arraigned because of its flagrant advocacy of the liquor traffic, as is also the republican party of New Jersey because of its continued duplicity, professing friendship to the temperance cause, yet treacherously deceiving its adherents.

Pennsylvania Prohibitionists.

Philadelphia, May 7.—After a lengthy discussion over the silver and tariff planks and a substitute for the preamble wherein the name "Jesus Christ" was omitted the Pennsylvania prohibition convention adopted a platform which contained the usual prohibition plank; favors equal suffrage; the election of the president, vice-president and United States senators by direct vote of the people; the control and if necessary the ownership by the government of railroads and telegraph and telephone lines; opposes trusts and combinations of capital and the granting of public money for sectarian schools; favors arbitration as a remedy for the differences between capital and labor; says that the tariff on imports should be limited to the difference in the cost of labor in this and competing countries; demands stricter immigration laws, and that "the currency of the nation should be issued by the general government without the intervention of individuals or corporations, and should consist of treasury notes which shall be legal tender for the payment of all debts and redeemable in gold and silver bullion at the market value."

CONTESTED ELECTION.

Ex-Judge Bredin To Take Testimony in the Pittsburg Case.

Pittsburg, May 7.—The Municipal league has secured from the county court the appointment of ex-judge James Bredin of Butler county to take testimony in the contest of the February city election, when the republican candidates were declared elected over the league's candidates by from 1,000 to 10,000 votes. The grounds of the contest are an alleged incorrect count and defective depositions, it being alleged that faulty affidavits were made by about 5,000 men, who went to the polls minus tax receipts, naturalization papers, or other documents that would have established a right to vote. The contest is expected to be a long one.

MRS. STETSON'S FUNERAL.

Held in New York at the Little Church Around the Corner.

New York, May 7.—The funeral of Mrs. Kate Stokes Stetson, the widow of the late John Stetson, the well known theatrical manager, took place yesterday afternoon at the Little Church Around the Corner. The casket was covered with flowers. The church was crowded with well known theatrical people and friends of the late manager and his wife. After the funeral services the remains were conveyed to Woodlawn cemetery and were placed temporarily in the receiving vault. The remains will be interred subsequently in the Stokes vault in that cemetery.

EXPELLED FROM CUBA.

Two New York Correspondents Forced To Leave the Island.

Havana, May 7.—James Creelman and Frederick W. Lawrence, correspondents of New York city newspapers, have been expelled from the island on the ground that they have calumniated Capt.-Gen. Weyler, the government and the army, and have attributed insurgents' crimes to the Spanish army. They have been ordered to leave Cuba by the first steamer sailing.

THE SHAH'S ASSASSINATION.

Arrest and Release of the Supposed Instigator in Constantinople.

Constantinople, May 7.—It has been learned that when the news of the death of the shah reached here, Sheik Djem Eleddin, the Persian agitator, who is supposed to have been the instigator of the assassination, was arrested here. Later, however, he was released, owing to lack of evidence.

THE BOERS' PRISONERS.

Their Sentences, It Is Now Stated, Will Be Merely Nominal Fines.

Johannesburg, May 7.—The Diggers' News says that the sentences imposed upon the convicted members of the reform committee will be reduced to nominal fines, that part of the sentences prescribing imprisonment and subsequent banishment being revoked.

CIVIL SERVICE LAW

30,000 More Government Employes Brought Under It.

85,135 Persons Now Working for Uncle Sam Under the New Rules, Which Is To Prevent Their Removal Without Cause.

Washington, May 7.—The president, by his signature yesterday, extended the provisions of the civil service law to 30,000 government employes, increasing the number of positions on the classified lists from 56,736 to 85,135, and with a few minor exceptions between the extremes of officials whose confirmation by the senate is constitutional a requisite, down to mere laborers and workmen. Governmental appointments are withdrawn as far as possible from political influence and protected in their tenure of office by the merit system. The president's signature cancelling all former orders previously issued and substituting the new rules was immediately filed in the state department and went into effect at once, thus forestalling any possible action throughout the country by appointing officials or transferring employes or in any other way evading the rules before being formally notified of them. From the moment of its signature the new order made all government officials directly responsible to the commission for appointments and changes. This revision of the rules divides the executive civil service into five branches, as follows: The departmental service, the custom house service, the postoffice service, the government printing service and the internal revenue service. In the departmental service are classified all officers and employes, except laborers and persons who have been nominated for confirmation, in the several executive departments, the commissions, the District of Columbia, the railway mail service, Indian service, pension agencies, steamboat inspection service, marine hospital service, lighthouse service, mints and assay offices, revenue cutter service, sub-treasuries and engineer departments, and the forces employed by custodians of public buildings. The only exception made in the treasury department is in favor of those in the life saving service.

Reduction of Exempt List.

The number of classified places exempted from examination has been reduced from 2,099 to 775, which are mainly positions of cashiers in the customs, postal and internal revenue services. Indians employed in minor capacities in the Indian service are necessarily put in the excepted list. Almost all of the positions in Washington which have heretofore been excepted have been included in the competitive list. The only classified positions in Washington which will be excepted from examination under the new rules will be private secretaries or confidential clerks (not exceeding two) to the president and to the head of each of the eight executive departments. No positions will hereafter be subject to non-competitve examination, except in the cases of Indians employed in a teaching capacity in the Indian service.

My

Nerves are weak, many people say, and yet they do not seem to know that they are literally starving their nerves. Weak, pale, thin blood cannot give proper sustenance—that is why you are nervous, tired, exhausted. The cure for this condition is to purify, vitalize and enrich your blood. Take Hood's Sarsaparilla fairly and faithfully, and the rich, red blood, which it makes, will soon feed the nerves the elements of true strength they require; they will cease their agitation and will resume their proper place—being under the control instead of controlling the brain and body. Read Miss Bartley's letter:

"I want to express my gratitude for what Hood's Sarsaparilla has done for me. My health has been very poor for three years, due to trouble with my

Kidneys

I was nervous, had pains in my back. I cannot tell what I suffered. My eyesight became affected and I was so despondent I did not have any interest in life. I had two physicians, but my complaints became worse. I was told that I was affected with Bright's disease. A relative urged me to try Hood's Sarsaparilla. I did so and in a short time I began to notice a change in my condition. Things began to appear brighter, my eyes improved and did not trouble me so severely. My appetite returned and I gained strength every day. I am now able to do my own work, and feel perfectly well. I cannot find words to express my gratitude for what Hood's Sarsaparilla has done for me and I gladly recommend it." MISS ELLA BARTLEY, 213½ S. Grant Ave., Columbus, Ohio.

MONEY PROMISED NOT FORTHCOMING

Sub-Committee of Democratic National Committee To Meet To-morrow To Discuss the Matter—Local Treasurer Discouraged.

Chicago, May 7.—Joseph Donnersberger, treasurer of the local democratic committee, practically admits the truth of the sensational story published by the Chronicle, to the effect that the real purpose of the meeting here to-morrow of the sub-committee of the democratic national committee is to determine whether or not the national convention shall be held in Chicago at all; that the financial pledges upon which the convention was voted to Chicago have not been redeemed; that of the $30,000 which should have been deposited to the order of the national committee between April 1 and May 1 only $10,000 has been forthcoming, while $10,000 more should be deposited within the next three weeks; that not another dollar has been furnished, and that the local lists promising subscriptions have not been collected. Treasurer Donnersberger exhibited a telegram from National Chairman Harrity saying: "Was deposit made on April 21 and May 1 as per promise made to our committee? Am disappointed at not having heard from you." To this the committee was compelled to reply in the negative. Mr. Donnersberger added: "The situation is this: We pledged $40,000. Of this we have paid over $10,000 and have $4,000 more in hand. The total subscription is $26,000, so that, even if we collect every cent already subscribed, there is $14,000 more to come from somewhere. To-morrow morning all those who signed the bond will meet and determine how the deficit is to be made up. When we were in Washington and before we agreed to sign that bond, we telegraphed to Chicago asking whether it would be safe for us to do so. A reply was received to the effect that we could go ahead and that the subscriptions would be all right. We do not look at it in that light to-day. Our business men do not refuse us outright, but they do not seem to realize the situation. I must admit that I am discouraged, but still I think we will pull out all right in the end. All depends on the meeting to-morrow morning."

NO EARLY ADJOURNMENT.

Senate Not Likely To Concur in the House Resolution.

Washington, May 7.—It is not believed that the senate will concur in the resolution passed by the house yesterday, which was introduced by Mr. Dingley, rep., Me., authorizing the president of the senate and the speaker of the house of representatives to end the first session of the fifty-fourth congress at 2 p. m. on Monday, May 18. How anxious the members of the house are to go home was well demonstrated by the outburst of applause from both sides of the house which greeted the reading of the resolution and the fact that it was passed without a division. After he had introduced the resolution, Mr. Dingley demanded the previous question, which was ordered, but Mr. Wheeler, dem., Ala., insisted upon time to discuss the resolution. Mr. Dingley yielded to the extent of giving him five minutes, which Mr. Wheeler occupied in denouncing the majority for proposing to desert their posts. He said that during the campaign of 1894 the republican party had pledged itself to the relief of the people from existing depressions. "Caused by the democratic party," interjected Mr. Milliken, rep., Me. Mr. Wheeler's protest had no effect, however, and the resolution was adopted amid applause.

Montreal, May 7.—Messrs. Min, Yun, Kuti and Kin, accompanied by an Austrian named Stein, passed through Montreal last evening for New York enroute to Moscow as representatives of the Corean king at the coronation of the czar of Russia. The Corean envoys traveled in a Pullman car and attracted much attention by the gorgeous and peculiar attire they wore.

Mrs. Whittaker's Examination.

Port Jervis, N. Y., May 7.—The examination of Mrs. Martha Whittaker, accused of poisoning her parents, Jacob and Frances Snyder, is being continued to-day before Justice Conklin, and will probably not be completed before to-morrow. Pending the result she will be in custody at the home of Constable Harvey.

HOLMES EXECUTED

Swung Off in Old Moyamensing Prison This Morning.

HIS LAST NIGHT ON EARTH SLEEPLESS

The Long Hours Mostly Spent in Talking to His Death Watch—He Wept at the Parting with His Counsel.

Philadelphia, May 7.—Hiram W. Mudgett, alias H. H. Holmes, murderer of Benjamin F. Peitzel, his partner in insurance swindles, and numerous other persons, was executed in Moyamensing prison this morning at 10 o'clock. He spent his last night on earth in a high state of nervousness and with little sleep. He passed the greater part of the long hours in talking to his death watch or in reading. His choice of reading varied with his changeful moods. At times he would read his Bible earnestly and then suddenly, with a petulant movement, he would throw the book aside and busily go over the stories in the papers relating to himself which he had so often read. The man's appetite continued good to the last and he ate a hearty breakfast this morning. Father Dailey, his spiritual adviser, called early this morning and received his penitent's last confession and gave him absolution. Of course Father Dailey remained with him to the last.

His Last Business Conference.

Yesterday afternoon George W. Chamberlain, the Chicago real estate man who attended to Holmes' real estate business in that city, was with Holmes for some time. Lawyers Rotan and Moone were present at the interview Mr. Chamberlain had with Holmes, and it is supposed that they were talking of Holmes' business affairs, as Mr. Chamberlain had with him a valise filled with papers. What conclusions were reached is not known, but it is thought that Holmes made no will, but that he will leave the holders of mortgages upon his property to fight out their titles to the same in court. When Holmes bade good-bye to Mr. Chamberlain he did not break down, but exhibited only that emotion which any man might show in saying his last farewell to a friend. He grasped Chamberlain's hand and in a voice which shook a little said: "Good-bye, old man; I'll never see you again, and I shall never forget your kindness to me." Chamberlain shook him by the hand and tears rose in Holmes' eyes, but he quickly forced them back. Holmes was affected much the same way when he bade good-bye to Mr. Moone, one of his lawyers.

Wept When His Lawyer Departed.

The greatest wrench came when Mr. Rotan left the cell. This young attorney has stood manfully by Holmes since his arrest, and believed earnestly in the man's innocence. He clung to his hand when Rotan started to leave the cell and wished him to remain till the time came for mounting the gallows. The prison rules, however, would not permit this, and Mr. Rotan was forced to take his leave from his weeping client. There was no bravado about the man but only the composure of one who had left all hope behind.

Money Offered for Permission To Attend.

The desire to see Holmes die was remarkable. Sheriff Clement was besieged by several thousand applicants to witness the execution and for three days he was literally driven from his office to escape this mob of morbidly curious. So eager were some people to see the hanging that they offered, some $200, some $300 and one man even offered $500 for a ticket. There were about seventy persons present at the hanging. They included the sheriff, officers, the prison officials, the sheriff's jury, which consisted of twelve prominent business men, Holmes's religious advisers, a few whom Sheriff Clement had invited and one representative from each of the Philadelphia newspapers and press associations.

To Be Buried at Philadelphia.

Holmes will be buried in Philadelphia. He had a special horror of the surgeon's knife, and gave the strictest injunction to Mr. Rotan to not permit an autopsy to be held upon his body. Mr. Rotan was present at the execution and immediately after Holmes was cut down claimed his body and will not permit a post mortem.

All But One of the Americans Captured on the Competitor To Be Shot.

Madrid, May 7.—Dispatches received here from Havana say that the American newspaper man, Hamilton, who was captured on board the Key West filibustering schooner Competitor, will be released, but that the other persons captured at the same time will be shot notwithstanding the protests from Washington.

Carpenter Indicted for Murder.

Belvidere, N. J., May 7.—The Warren county grand jury has returned an indictment against Samuel C. Carpenter for the murder of Ray Blackwell at Phillipsburg one year ago. Carpenter was arrested at the time, but was discharged after a hearing before county judge W. H. Morrow, the discharge causing much comment and criticism. Hearing of his indictment, Carpenter surrendered last night.

A Chinaman Ordered Deported.

"Liar" and "imbecile" were a few of the choice epithets that Tillmanized a meeting of the Summit Town Committee a day or two ago when Editor Lane and Dr. Lawrence disagreed on some little points.

We hear that the friends of Freeholder Zergiebel, in Warren township, would be pleased to see him elected director in the organization of the new board. Freeholder Lutkins, of North Plainfield, it is also said, will receive a complimentary vote from the Republican members for the directorship.—Somerset Messenger.

Supt. W. H. Maxwell, of the Brooklyn public schools, in his annual report to the Board of Education denounces the temperance Instruction law. Teaching the evils of liquor to impressionable children, he says, and keeping such subjects before their minds, is most hurtful, and will create a desire for the very things they are taught to avoid.

The individual who has been gloating over his good luck in escaping the omnipresent poll tax, is doomed to disappointment. Through an error the published pamphlets of the laws recorded the poll tax repealed by the last Legislature, and a lynx-eyed State official has discovered that error. It seems that the poll tax. like the poverty stricken, is bound to stay with us here in New Jersey. It is no presumption to say that more schemes are laid to escape the payment of a paltry dollar by the man who exercises his suffrage than even the small boy plans to get into the circus. The poll tax is the bane of the Collectors's existence.

The newspaper cuts of prominent men are used repeatedly. Of course, a man's appearance changes in time, but the old cut goes on forever. The usual change is in whiskers, and from increasing baldness. But sometimes it is different. Senator Rogers, of Camden, is as bald as an egg, and the pictures of him made for the newspapers are not more than three years old. It seemed safe to gamble on his as a fixed face. But last winter the Senator bought a wig. It is a lovely construction, and where he is not known he looks like a youngster. He is no longer the Rogers of the newspaper cut, and it would be only justice to him—considering the cost of wigs—to cover the bald line along the Senatorial dome with a proper representation of hair.—Newark Call.

The New Jersey Prohibitionists yesterday held their State Convention and elected twenty-eight delegates to their National Convention, to be held at Pittsburg on May 28th. About 250 delegates were in attendance, including half a dozen women Mrs. Emma Bourne, of Newark, was elected one of the delegates at large. There were nineteen candidates nominated. Wm. H. Nicholson, of Camden; George Lamont, of Bound Brook; Rev. Dr. James B. Graw, of Trenton, and Rev. Charles H. Mead, of Montclair, were elected by acclamation. A ballot was taken for the other eight delegates at large, and Mrs. Bourne received the fourth highest vote. The twelve defeated candidates were chosen as alternates. Each of the eight Congress districts elected two delegates.

The following is the exact wording of the petition presented to the Common Council last Monday night by the Town Improvement Association, asking for a proper dissemination of city ordinances:

To have compiled, printed and posted, or circulated, or both, in convenient and accessible form, an abstract of such city laws and ordinances as are commonly violated, especially those concerning the health, beauty and cleanliness of the town, in order that all residents may be informed and assist in their observance.

By perusal of this petition it will be seen that the Association did not especially request that ordinances be printed in poster form, a fact which The Press is glad to hear and report. As has already been suggested in this paper, the Association feels the need of a pamphlet containing the ordinances to date which can be distributed all over the city and provide a ready and convenient form of reference. The ordinances have not been published in this form since 1892, and the members of the Improvement Association have found great difficulty in acquainting themselves with the ordinances passed since that time. Their work is hindered because of this condition of affairs. The Common Council should act favorably on the petition.

MR. DRAKE'S TALK OF A BOOM.

The Real Estate Man Says That Mountain Park Will Attract Many.

To the Editor of The Daily Press:—During the past twenty five years how often has it been said the time would come some day, when capitalists would open up and develop the Watchung mountains, north of Plainfield, and offer desirable plots for building purposes for summer residence or otherwise. In these few lines I would like to give yonr many readers some impressions I have gathered from the citizens of Plainfield and particularly the outside world in regard to this enterprise of the Mountain Park Land Company. I have been engaged in a number of successful real estate enterprises and I must say this Mountain Park movement will lead them all. I am very much gratified to hear so many business men in New York say they intend to locate at Mountain Park, as it offers them so many advantages over other summer resorts, on account of its accessibility to New York, where they can attend to business during the day and be with their families on the mountain at night and where they can have the advantages of good drives, good stores for shopping and very many other advantages not offered in the Catskills or other summer resorts. It is also very encouraging to the Mountain Park Company to know the citizens and particularly the business men of Plainfield have endorsed the movement and wished it God speed. This movement of the Mountain Park Company has already gone beyond the lines of Union County and today its merits as a summer residence are being discussed in Philadelphia, Boston, St. Louis and Chicago. The property owners and business men of Plainfield do not as yet realize what this enterprise will do for Plainfield. It will advertise this thriving city, it will attract capitalists and new comers to it. In time thousands will be attracted to view it and the business men of Plainfield will reap great benefit and profit from this new venture. With the continued well-wishes of the citizens of Plainfield, the Mountain Park Company will leave no stone unturned to make their work a success so their name and a benefit to others.

Silas D. Drake.

There is more catarrh in this section of the country than all other diseases put together, and until the last few years was supposed to be incurable. For a great many years doctors pronounced it a local disease, and prescribed local remedies, and by continually failing to cure with local treatment, pronounced it incurable. Science has proven catarrh to be a constitutional disease and therefore requires constitutional treatment. Hall's Catarrh Cure, manufactured by F. J. Cheney & Co., Toledo, Ohio, is the only constitutional cure on the market. It is taken internally in doses from 10 drops to a teaspoonful. It acts directly on the blood and mucous surfaces of the system. They offer one hundred dollars for any case it fails to cure. Send for circulars and testimonials. Address F. J. Cheney & Co., Toledo, O.
Sold by druggists, 75c.

Eczema is a frightful affliction, but like all other skin diseases it can be permanently cured by applications of DeWitt's Witch Hazel Salve. It never fails to cure Piles. For sale by L. W. Randolph, 143 West Front street.

To Offer a Reward of 100 Dollars

Borough Sidewalk Notice.

Notice is hereby given that the ordinance of the Borough of North Plainfield requires that flag sidewalks be laid and prohibits the laying of new board walks or repairing of old board walks.

An impression seems to exist that old board walks may be repaired without violation of the ordinance.

This is not the fact. In every case where any repair of a board walk is necessary stone must be used.

Public notice of this fact is now again given so that no one need feel aggrieved if they are required to replace a newly laid or repaired board walk with stone.

QUEEN OF DRUNKARDS.

The Remarkable Criminal Record of Jane Cakebread.

London's Most Notorious Woman Toper Adjudged a Lunatic—Convicted in Open Court Nearly Three Hundred Times.

It looks as if the last words have now been said on Jane Cakebread. For nearly a generation past the efforts of all London "lady reformers" have been expended upon this unconquerable and picturesque virago and drunkard in vain. Time after time she has scouted all attempts to reform her, and plainly and in profane language assured those who have taken an interest in her that all she wanted was to be left alone and given free entrance to the public houses.

The last famous reformer to plead with her and try to reclaim her, says the New York Journal, was Lady Henry Somerset. For a time it looked as if this noted philanthropist might succeed where all else failed. But now Lady Henry has given up the battle in disgust, Jane Cakebread having tossed up her nose and declined to stay in the comfortable home that was provided for her because, as this awful woman put it, the inmates were not on her level.

The latest news that has come over from London tells of her final removal from the London "pubs," which she has haunted for the best part of 40 years. The other day she was examined as to her sanity, and the doctor of Holloway jail certified that the woman was not responsible for her actions. So they took her to an asylum.

As remarkable as anything in her whole career was the court scene. Age and the piling up of crime have not been able to stale Jane Cakebread's unique pleadings and ravings before the bar of justice. She struggled and shouted and declaimed against the whole English judicial system. She declared that, being a lady, she had a full and perfect right to get drunk and disorderly as often as she chose. She went on to say that she wanted "that $85,000"

WORST DRUNKARD ON EARTH.

she was entitled to, and she wanted it "right off." Being comparatively sober, after having been shut up in Halloway, she declared tearfully that she was in possession of her "proper senses," and yelled that sending her to an asylum was a high-handed outrage.

Jane Cakebread holds the woman's record in the annals of English crime, and she is proud of it. Though never a felon, she has actually been convicted 280 times, mostly on charges of "drunk and disorderly." The English police records have never known of any woman so utterly irreclaimable. Not a feminine trait seems to be left in this haggard and bestial old woman.

The only wonder is that she has not drank herself to death long before this. For probably the best part of 65 years she has been day and night soaking her system with alcohol. Her favorite drink has been gin, though she has not disdained any other beverage, her capacity for beer being abnormal when nothing stronger was offered.

She began to drink at five years of age. Her parents were criminal and rum-soaked. Petty thievery is the most she has ever attempted, and in the social sense she was never a professional woman of the town. Her favorite method of going to the police station was strapped in a hand-barrow and screeching at the top of her voice.

Curious Natural Barometer.

One of the most curious of the many natural barometers consists of a half-pint glass half full of water, a piece of muslin and a leech. The leech must be put in the water and the muslin tied over the top of the glass so that the creature cannot get out again. When fine weather is to be the order of the day the leech will remain at the bottom of the water, coiled up in spiral shape, perfectly motnonless. If rain is to be expected it will creep to the top of the glass and remain there until there is a likelihood of more settled weather. If there is to be a storm of wind it squirms about in the water with violence. For some days before thunder it occasionally moves its body in a convulsive fashion. In frosty weather it behaves in the same manner as in fine weather, and it foretells snow in the same manner that it does rain.

Homicides in United Italy.

"Every two hours a homicide is committed somewhere in Italy," is the startling way in which Baron Garofalo puts the fact that there 4,000 homicides a year in his country, ten times as many as in France, and 35 times as many as in Denmark.

She Will Propose.

The important question: "Shall Women Propose?" has been decided. The Bachelor Girls' club of Paw Paw, Mich., debated it last week, and unanimously decided that she shall.

Correct Physical Proportions.

Some gleaners of human family statistics say that a man or woman of correct proportions is six times as high as the right foot is long.

Considerate.

It is related that when Judge Buxton, of North Carolina, made his first appearance at the bar as a young lawyer, he was given charge, by the state's solicitor, of the prosecution of a man who was charged with some misdemeanor.

There was practically no evidence against the man, but Buxton did his best, and was astonished when the jury brought in a verdict of "guilty."

After the trial one of the jurors tapped the young lawyer on the shoulder.

"Buxton," said he, "we didn't think that man was guilty, but we didn't like to discourage a young lawyer by acquitting him!"

MANY THINGS.

We Are Prone to Concentrate on One Idea.

Products of Nature That Are Manifold Blessings to Man.

Whenever you see a glass of bright, clear, sparkling water, you at once think what delightful drinking water that is. You never think of it as being especially useful for boiling potatoes or for bathing the face. You only think of its power to quench the thirst. And yet this is only one of its many desirable properties.

When you see a bright, hot fire in winter, you think at once how easily you could keep warm by remaining near it. The thought does not occur to you that a fire has a hundred other uses.

Whenever cod-liver oil is mentioned, many people think at once of consumption, as if this was the only disease to which this valuable remedy was adapted. Perhaps this is not strange when we consider the fact that cod-liver oil stands out as the most prominent remedy in this terrible affection. In fact, as water quenches the thirst, and as fire gives warmth, so does cod-liver oil bring health and prosperity to those just beginning to fade from serious lung trouble.

Of late years, however, it has been known that consumption is caused by a germ. It is also known that cod-liver oil does not kill this germ. And there is also the fact that this same oil will cure consumption in its early stages. If it does not kill the germ of the disease, how does it affect a cure?

This is easily explained. Cod-liver oil has a wonderful power to build up and invigorate the whole body. When the body is in this prosperous condition, it can take care of the germs of consumption; that is, it destroys the germs, and thus removes the cause of the disease. For this reason cod-liver oil is called a powerful tonic and reconstructive; while it is also known to be a most valuable food.

From this we can see the value of such a remedy in a number of ailments. There are many persons who begin the work of each day in a thoroughly exhausted condition. They have tried quantities of tonics and iron preparations of all kinds, but without relief. There is no appetite; bowels are constipated; circulation is poor; the lips are pale; the ears are colorless; and the whole body is in a debilitated and most uncomfortable state. Scott's Emulsion of Cod-liver Oil with Hypophosphites changes all this. Soon the blood becomes richer; the heart beats stronger; color returns to the face; digestion is improved; and good health is once more at hand.

Scott's Emulsion contains more pure Norwegian Cod-liver Oil than any other emulsion in the world, that will stand the test of time as being a perfect inseparable emulsion. Ask your doctor.

Croisette was not satisfied with this, though I did not understand his reason: only I saw him exchange a glance with the lad. "Come, come!" he said lightly. "Give him his books! You do not want them!"

But on that the men turned savagely upon us. They did not thank us for the part we had already taken; and this they thought was going too far. They were half drunk and quarrelsome, and being two to one, and two over, began to flourish their weapons in our faces. Mischief would certainly have been done, and very quickly, had not an unexpected ally appeared on our side.

"Put up! put up!" this gentleman cried in a boisterous voice—he was already in our midst. "What is all this about? What is the use of fighting amongst ourselves, when there is many a bonny throat to cut, and heaven to be gained by it! put up, I say!"

"Who are you?" they roared, in chorus.

"The duke of Guise!" he answered, coolly. "Let the gentlemen go, and be hanged to you, you rascals!"

The man's bearing was a stronger argument than his words, for I am sure that a stouter or more reckless blade never swaggered in church or street. I knew him instantly, and even the crew of the butchers seemed to see in him their master. They flung back a few curses at him, but having nothing to gain they yielded. They threw down the book with contempt — showing thereby their sense of true religion; and trooped off roaring. "Tuez! Tuez! Aux Huguenots!" at the top of their voices.

The newcomer thus left with us was Bure—Blaise Bure, the same who only yesterday, though it seemed months and months back, and lured us into Bezers' power. Since that moment we had not seen him. Now he had wiped off part of the debt we looked at him uncertain whether to reproach him or no. He, however, was not one whit abashed, but returned our regards with a not unkindly leer.

"I bear no malice, young gentlemen," he said, impudently.

"No, I should think not," I answered.

"And besides, we are quits now," the knave continued.

"You are very kind," I said.

"To be sure. You did me a good turn once," he answered, much to my surprise. He seemed to be in earnest now. "You do not remember it, young gentleman, but it was you and your brother here"—he pointed to Croisette—"did it! And by the pope and the king of Spain I have not forgotten it!"

"I have," I said.

"What! Have you forgotten spitting that fellow at Caylus ten days ago? Ca! sa! You remember. And very cleanly done, too! A pretty stroke! Well M. Anne, that was a clever fellow, a very clever fellow. He thought so, and I thought so, and what was more to the purpose the most noble Raoul de Bezers thought so too. You understand?"

He leered at me, and I did understand. I understood that unwittingly I had rid Blaise Bure of a rival. This accounted for the respectful, almost kindly way in which he had—well, deceived us.

"That is all," he said. "If you want as much done for you let me know. For the present, gentlemen, farewell!"

He cocked his hat fiercely, and went off at speed the way we had ourselves been going, humming as he went:

"Ce petit homme tant joli,
Qui toujours cause et toujours rit,
Qui toujours baise sa mignonne
Dieu gard' de mal ce petit homme!"

His reckless song came back to us on the summer breeze. We watched him make a playful pass at a corpse which some one had propped in ghastly fashion against a door—and miss it—and go on whistling the same air—and then a corner hid him from view.

We lingered only a moment ourselves; merely to speak to the boy we had befriended.

"Show the book if anyone challenges you," said Croisette to him, shrewdly. Croisette was so much of a boy himself, with his fair hair like a halo about his white, excited face, that the picture of the two, one advising the other, seemed to me a strangely pretty one. "Show the books and point to the cross on them. And Heaven send you safe to your college."

"I would like to know your name if you please," said the boy. His coolness and dignity struck me as admirable under the circumstances. "I am Maximilian de Bethune, son of the Baron de Rosny."

"Then," said Croisette, briskly, "one good turn has deserved another. Your father, yesterday, at Etampes—no, it was the day before, but we have not been in bed—warned us—"

He broke off suddenly; then cried: "Run! run!"

The boy needed no second warning, indeed. He was off like the wind down the street, for we had seen, and so had he, the stealthly approach of two or three prowling rascals on the lookout for a victim. They caught sight of him, and were strongly inclined to follow him; but we were their match in numbers. The street was otherwise empty at the moment; and we showed them three excellent reasons why they should give him a clear start.

His after-adventures are well known: for he, too, lives. He was stopped twice after he left us. In each case he escaped by showing his book of offices. On reaching the college the porter refused to admit him, and he remained for some time in the open street exposed to constant danger of losing his life, and knowing not what to do. At length he induced the gatekeeper, by the present of some small pieces of money, to call the principal of the college, and this man humanely concealed him for three days. The massacre being then at an end, two armed men in his father's pay sought him out and restored him to his friends. So near was France to losing her greatest minister, the Duke de Sully.

To return to ourselves. The lad out of sight, we instantly resumed our purpose, and trying to shut our eyes and ears to the cruelty, and ribaldry, and uproar through which we had still to pass, we counted our turnings with a desperate exactness, intent only on one thing—to reach Louis de Pavannes, to reach the house opposite to the Head of Erasmus, as quickly as we could. We presently entered a long, narrow street. At the end of it the river was visible, gleaming and sparkling in the sunlight. The street was quiet; quiet and empty. There was no living soul to be seen from end to end of it, only a prowling dog. The noise of the tumult raging in other parts was softened here by distance and the intervening houses. We seemd to be able to breathe more freely

"This should be our street," said Croisette.

I nodded. At the same moment I espied, half way down it, the sign we needed and pointed to it. But ah! were we in time? Or too late? That was the question. By a single impulse we broke into a run, and shot down the roadway at speed. A few yards short of the Head of Erasmus we came one by one, Croisette first, to a full stop. A full stop!

The house opposite the bookseller's was sacked! gutted from top to bottom. It was a tall house, immediately fronting the street, and every window in it was broken. The door hung forlornly on one hinge, glaring cracks in its surface showing where the ax had splintered it. Fragments of glass and ware, flung out and shattered in sheer wantonness, strewed the steps; and down one corner of the latter a dark red stream trickled—to curdle by and by in the gutter. Whence came the stream? Alas, there was something more to be seen yet, something our eyes instinctively sought last of all. The body of a man.

It lay on the threshold, the head hanging back, the wide glaring eyes looking up to the summer sky whence the sweltering heat would soon pour down upon it. We looked and shuddered at the face. It was that of a servant, a valet who had been with Louis at Caylus. We recognized him at once, for we had known and liked him. He had carried our guns on the hills a dozen times, and told us stories of the war. The blood crawled slowly from him. He was dead.

Croisette began to shake all over. He clutched one of the pillars, which bore up the porch, and pressed his face against its cold surface, hiding his eyes from the sight. The worst had come. In our hearts I think we had always fancied some accident would save our friend, some stranger warn him.

We looked shuddering at the face.

"Oh, poor Kit!" Croisette cried, bursting suddenly into violent sobs. "Oh, Kit! Kit!"

CHAPTER X.

HAU, HAU, HUGUENOTS!

His late majesty, Henry the Fourth, I remember—than whom no braver man wore sword, who loved danger, indeed, for its own sake, and courted it as a mistress, could never sleep on the night before an action. I have heard him say himself that it was so before the fight of Arques. Croisette partook of this nature, too, being high-strung and apt to be easily over-wrought, but never until the necessity for exertion had passed away; while Marie and I, though not a whit stouter at pinch, were slower to feel and less easy to move—more Germanic, in fact.

I name this here partly lest it should be thought after what I have just told of Croisette that there was anything of the woman about him—save the tenderness; and partly to show that we acted at this crisis each after his manner. While Croisette turned pale and trembled, and hid his eyes, I stood dazed, looking from the desolate house to the face stiffening in the sunshine, and back again; wondering, though I had seen scores of dead faces since daybreak, and a plenitude of suffering in all dreadful shapes, how Providence could let this happen to us. To us! In his instincts man is as selfish as any animal that lives.

I saw nothing indeed of the dead face and dead house after the first convincing glance. I saw instead with hot, hot eyes the old castle at home, the green fields about the brook, and the gray hills rising from them; and the terrace, and Kit coming to meet us, Kit with face and parted lips and avid eyes that questioned us! And we with no comfort to give her, no love to bring back to her!

A faint noise behind as of a sign creaking in the wind, roused me from this most painful reverie. I turned round, not quickly or in surprise or fear. Rather in the same dull wonder. The upper part of the bookseller's door was ajar. It was that I had heard opened. An old woman was peering out at us.

As our eyes met, she made a slight movement to close the door again. But I did not stir, and seeming to be reassurred by a second glance, she nodded to me in a stealthy fashion. I drew a step nearer, listlessly. "Pst! Pst!" she whispered. Her wrinkled old face, which was like a Normandy apple long kept, was soft with pity as she looked at Croisette. "Pst!"

"Well!" I said, mechanically.

"Is he taken?" she muttered.

"Who taken?" I asked stupidly.

She nodded towards the forsaken house, and answered: "The young lord who lodged there? Ah! sirs," she continued, "he looked gay and handsome, if you'll believe me, as he came from the king's court yester even. As bonny a sight in his satin coat, and his ribbons, as my eyes ever saw! And to think that they should be hunting him like a rat to-day!"

CYCLING COMMENT.

Theo. Kurzhals, Jr., has received his new Relay wheel.

Edward S. Randolph, of West Eighth street, is riding a new Zimmy wheel.

Miss Addie Weaver, of Grove street, is planning a wheeling trip to Reading, Pa.

A shipment of fifteen Crescent wheels were received by the F. L. C. Martin Cycle Company yesterday.

The Millburn Township Committee has suspended the speed ordinance for two hours on May 30th, the day of the road race.

William M. McCutchen and Raymond A. McGee have decided to enter the two-mile bicycle race in the High School games Saturday. They will make it lively for the other competitors.

T. J. Carey, while riding his wheel on West Front street, Tuesday, slipped in the mud in front of a trolley car. He had a very narrow escape from testing the new fenders while Coddington's truck, which was going by, demolished his wheel.

Coasting contests promise to become very popular this season. None has yet been held in this vicinity, but in Buffalo they are all the rage. The first event of the kind hereabouts is scheduled for the 23d inst., under the auspices of the New York Athletic Club.

The Aladdin Lamp Company, of Newark, have two factories making their lamps, and still cannot fill all their orders. They have made arrangements to supply several foreign countries next season. The F. L. C. Martin Cycle Company represent them in this city.

Two of the employes of Garret Q. Packer have purchased Crescent wheels from the F. L. C. Martin Cycle Company. They are A. J. Stiglitz, upholsterer, and Henry Vermeule, cabinet-maker. Frank Pope, a clerk for Joseph Gavett, is also riding a Crescent purchased at the same place.

New Jersey is to have a Good Roads Association. The Hudson County Wheelmen have began the movement, and a committee has been appointed to complete the organization. It is the intention of the promoters to get the horsemen interested in the movement, as they argue that the drivers and riders of the horse are interested in good roads just as much as the wheelmen.

It is very probable that the Kings County Wheelmen will have a larger representation in the Irvington-Millburn handicap than any other club. Capt. Needham has thirty scorchers in mind who he thinks stand a good chance of getting prizes, and this number will probably line up. Among the lot will be Rohr, Earl, Peters, Perham, Ross, Hall, Relyea, Burt, Laws, Young, O'Hanlon, Paul, Beasley, Waters, Doup, Paige and Needham.

He who looks for bargains in pneumatic tires, says the New York Times, is entitled to little sympathy when his tire gives out at a critical time and perhaps causes him to walk miles before he can get it repaired. A cheap tire is a poor investment under any circumstances, for, in order to be low-priced. It must be cheap both in material and construction. There is only one method of cheapening rubber and that is by adulterating it, and, as adulteration reduces resiliency and wearing qualities to a mimimum, it is poor economy.

"Any one who wishes to get the most out of a vacation, both in healthful invigoration or pleasure," says a writer in Harper's Weekly. "will find a wheeling tour superior to any other means. Nothing so completely takes the mind from business; the wheel demands and will have all the attention that is not absorbed by the scenery, or circumstances of the trip; business and the ordinary cares of life are quite forgotten. The lungs receive a thorough revivifying, and the circulation starts into healthful activity; sleep becomes sound, appetite voracious, and digestion perfect. Certainly this is an ideal condition for an overworked brain-worker or a man enslaved in the routine of business."

In the testing department of the Pope Manufacturing Company is a most curious machine used for testing the strength of wheels. A large wooden wheel, around the circumference of which are fixed at odd intervals blocks of wood of irregular sizes, is designed to represent a rough road, a road far rougher, in fact, than the average rider would care to encounter. This wheel is kept revolving at a speed equaling in distance fourteen miles per hour, which is a far severer ordeal than any rider ever subjected a bicycle wheel. Against this unequal surface, with spokes taut and tire inflated, a brand-new wheel, fresh from the factory, is pressed by means of a bar on which the bicycle wheel rotates. At the end of this bar are heavy weights and suitable springs calculated to equal the strength of the heaviest rider. Under such heroic treatment a bicycle wheel must be made of the strongest material to remain for any length of time. Thirteen hours is considered a fair trial for an ordinary wheel, while the general average for a Columbia wheel is about fifty hours before any weakness manifests itself.

A RED-HOT CONVENTION.

THE DEMOCRATS HAVE A LIVELY TIME AT TRENTON.

A Strong Attempt Made to Elect F. C. Marsh as a Delegate-at-Large—Unable to Break the State Committee's Slate.

The Democraiic State Convention yesterday elected U. S. Senator James Smith, Allan L. McDermott, ex-Senator Rufus Blodgett, and ex-Judge Albert R. Talman as delegates at large to the National Convention, and adopted a strong sound money platform. Assemblyman John Wahl Queen, of Hudson county, was made the permanent chairman of the convention. Ex-Assemblyman Bergen, who was designated as temporary chairman by the State Committee, declined to permit his name to be used as a candidate for permanent chairman. This was in pursuance of an understanding reached yesterday morning by which there was a change in the slate arranged the night before, and ex-Senator Blodgett and ex-Judge Talman were agreed upon for delegates at large. This arrangement was made between the Hudson and Essex leaders, and under it Blodgett withdrew his opposition to Queen for chairman.

The new deal angered the friends of ex-Senator Fred C. Marsh, of Union County, and ex-Judge Carrow, of Camden, who were candidates, and led to an uproar in the Convention that surpassed anything of the kind ever seen at Trenton. After the roll had been called for a ballot, the Marsh and Carrow men made a raid on the Hudson and Essex delegations with a demand that Blodgett and Talman be dropped and their votes given to Marsh and Carrow. For fifteen minutes the Convention was like a bear garden. Delegates in every part of the hall were on their feet demanding recognition from the Chair, and quarrelling and arguing with one another. Chairman Queen kept cool and refused to recognize any one until order had been restored, and finally, to assist in quieting the delegates, he signalled to the band in the balcony. The music drowned the noise, and order was at last restored.

In the mean time Allan L. McDermott had been working vigorously with the Hudson delegation, beseeching them to disregard the agreement by which Queen had been made Chairman and to give their votes to Marsh. Senator Smith, from a private box, despatched messages to the Essex delegation, urging them to stand firm. The result was a great victory for Senator Smith, the new Chairman of the State Committee. Hudson and Essex both stood to the agreement and the delegations voted solidly against Marsh and Carrow, two of the most popular and able young delegates in the State, and in favor of ex-Senator Blodgett, whose name was vigorously hissed and who was denounced as a traitor to the party. They also voted in favor of ex-Judge Talman, who is unknown except to a few persons in Camden and Gloucester counties. The first and only ballot resulted: Smith, 964; McDermott, 964; Talman, 884; Blodgett, 577; Marsh, 413; Carrow 301.

Delegate Lane, of Union, had a resolution adopted endorsing Senator Smith's course in Congress, but there was quite a large vote in opposition to it.

As Chairman Hays read the resolutions, the financial declaration was vigorously applauded, but the references to the tariff question were received with a silence which seemed ominous in contrast with the applause that followed the reading of the sections favoring coast defences and a strengthened navy, the endorsement of the Cleveland Administration, and sympathy for the struggling Cuban patriots.

The Convention voted to elect no alternates at large, as there were no indications of a contest, and the delegates from remote districts wanted to catch their trains. The State Committee, on ex Senator Edwards' motion was authorized to appoint alternates if they shall deem it necessary.

The district delegates were announced and ratified as follows:

First District—Henry M. Harley, of Camden; George M. Betchner, Cumberland.

Second—James W. Lanning, Mercer; J. Frank Budd, Burlington.

Third—George A. Helme, Middlesex; James J. Bergen, Somerset.

Fourth—Lewis J. Martin, Sussex; Elias C. Drake, Morris.

Fifth—Henry D. Winton, Bergen; Munson Force, Passaic.

Sixth—Gottfried Krueger and Edward P. Meany, Essex.

Seventh—William D. Daly and William D. Edwards, Hudson.

Eighth—Fred. C. Marsh, Union; Thomas F. Noonan, Hudson.

The Union county delegation chose ex-Senator Marsh for a district delegate when it was learned that he was not to be elected a delegate at large, and the delegation joined the Hudson county end of the district and elected ex-judge Thomas F. Noonan, of Bayonne, over Mayor Hartford, of Orange, whom the Essex county men had slated for the place. This was in retaliation, because the Essex men last night had been pledged to support Marsh, but broke away from him in the morning by the agreement made between the Essex delegation, ex-Senator Blodgett, and ex-Assemblyman William J. Thompson, of Gloucester city.

Although the Convention made no formal declaration in favor of a Presidential candidate, there was no mistaking its sentiment. Chairman Queen, in making his address, mentioned the names of President Cleveland, ex-Govs. Pattison, Campbell and Russell. The President's name was applauded. Pattison's and Campbell's were both applauded and cheered, but there was a demonstration that lasted for several minutes when Russell's name was mentioned, and there were repeated cheers for "Billy Russell, of Massachusetts." Russell is clearly the popular candidate with the voters, but New Jersey's votes at Chicago will probably be cast for Grover Cleveland if his name is presented in the Convention.

Besides the short address of Senator Smith in calling the Convention to order and the remarks of Temporary Chairman Bergen and Permanent Chairman Queen, the only speech was made by Charles T. Atkinson, of Burlington county, in nominating Judge Carrow. He denounced the slate that had been agreed upon, referred to ex-Senator Blodgett as one who "had recently returned to the Democratic fold," and criticised the leaders for crowding out the young men. He said it seemed impossible to get Judge Carrow's name before the convention.

"You're a liar!" shouted a Camden delegate.

"No, I'm not a liar," replied Atkinson. "It's the truth. The young Democracy seems to be not entitled to representation, though their candidates are abler and as sound on the money question as any Democrat. If I've stirred up strife or stirred up a hornets' nest, let 'er come, I'm glad of it, and can stand it better than anybody else."

The speech excited the sympathy and applause of the delegates, but not their votes.

Chairman Bergen's speech was mainly a forecast of what the platform would be, and Chairman Queen's was an arraignment of the recent Republican Legislature for refusing to carry out its promises of retrenchment and reform; and a demand for the equal taxation of railroad property, which he said would be the issue next fall in New Jersey, and every candidate for the Assembly would be pledged on the subject when he was nominated.

A GUBERNATORIAL BEE.

Senator Roger Wants a Renomination to Prepare to Succeed Gov. Griggs.

The most important political news developed at the State House, Trenton, yesterday, among the politicians who gathered in the corridors, was the announcement that Senator Maurice Rogers, of Camdem, will be a candidate for a third term. It is unusual for a Senator in New Jersey to sit beyond six years, particularly from a large county like Camden.

There is more back of this announcement than appears on the surface, and the politicians at Trenton believe that it means that Rogers is keeping before the public to continue in line for the next gubernatorial nomination. He was one of the seven candidates in the field last fall. Those who are familiar with Camden County politics say that Speaker DeRousse is likely to get the nomination, in spite of all Mr. Rogers' claims.

Mrs. Parkhurst Re-elected President.

The American McAll Mission held its second day's session at Elizabeth yesterday at the Westminister Presbyterian church. The election of officers resulted in the choice of Mrs. Charles H. Parkhurst for president, and nearly all of last year's officers were chosen. Mrs. James A. Garfield was elected one of the vice presidents.

For Breach of Promise.

The trial of James McDermott for breach of promise comes up before City Judge DeMeza and a twelve men jury tomorrow morning at the city court rooms on West Front street. John Goodwin will also be tried on the charge of being disorderly at the North Avenue station.

Boisterous at Music Hall.

Charles Lee visited Music Hall last night in an intoxicated condition and was arrested and locked up. He paid $5 for his fun this morning.

MAKE TOO MUCH NOISE

THEODORE KURZHALS SAYS THE SALVATIONISTS ARE A NUISANCE.

His Wife Has Been Prostrated By the Noise of the Army—He Will Make a Complaint to City Judge This Afternoon

Theodore Kurzhall, Sr., who conducts the barber shop on West Second street, just off Park avenue, declares that the Salvation Army is a nuisance in the neighborhood and this afternoon he will appear before City Judge DeMeza and make a formal complaint against them as such. Mr. Kurzhals says they are an annoyance because of their demonstrative manner of conducting warfare against Satan. Their object and endeavors meet with the approbation of Mr. Kurzhals, but the accompanying clamor attendant thereto is vehemently condemned by him, and it is because of this last condition that he makes the complaint.

Mr. Kurzhals' family lives over the barber shop and right next door are the barracks of the Army. Mrs. Kurzhals is of a very nervous temperament. Since the advent of warm weather when the heat made it necessary for the Salvationists to open their outside doors and windows while conducting their meetings, the thumping of drums, and clapping of cymbals and tambourines has tended to increase her nervousness, and on several occasions, Mr. Kurzhals says, she has been confined to her bed with sickness.

Mr. Kurzhals stood it as long as he could and finally appealed to the staff officers to suppress the din which accompanies the service. The officers agreed to do so. However, since the Volunteers were started in this city, the Salvationists have left no stone unturned to maintain an active interest in the Army, and as noise is considered one of the essential elements in this direction, Mr. Kurzhals did not get the relief that he expected. Mr. Kurzhals thinks the officere did not intentionally continue to annoy his family, but when they became enthused they simply forgot and did just what they were requested not to do.

The climax came last night when the Army brass band was brought to town. They tooted vociferously at the barracks during the evening and about nine o'clock Mr. Kurzhals found his wife prostrated in the hall in a hysterical condition.

Dr. Probasco, the family physician, had treated Mrs. Kurzhals several times for this same trouble. He told Mr. Kurzhals that his wife's collapse was undoubtedly caused by the excessive noise of the Army, and suggested that the next time she was affected to call Dr. Tomlinson in order that his opinion of the matter might be secured. If it was the same as Dr. Probasco's why he would have corroborative testimony to present to the City Judge in making a complaint. Consequently Dr. Tomlinson was called and prescribed remedies which finally relieved her high nervous condition. He coincided with Dr. Probasco as to the cause of her prostration.

This was the straw that broke the camel's back, metaphorically speaking, and Mr. Kurzhals' patience gave out. He declared war against the Army and this morning he told a Press representative that he was either going to make the organization leave his neighborhood or else conduct their meetings in a more quiet manner.

Owing to the absence of City Judge DeMeza from the city this morning, Mr. Kurzhals was unable to make a complaint against the Army as a nuisance, but he will do so this afternoon.

A Band to Enthuse Salvationists.

The attendance at the Salvation Army last evening was very large and everyone had a good time. The attraction was the army brass band from headquarters New York, which rendered several soul-inspiring selections during the evening. There were also short, helpful talks by the members of the band and the local army. Brigadier Evans was unable to be present as he organized a new corps at Jersey City. After the meeting a coffee supper was served to all present. The collection amounted to $10, for which the soldiers are very thankful.

Mr. D. P. Davis, a prominent liveryman and merchant of Goshen, Va., has this to say on the subject of rheumatism: "I take pleasure in recommending Chamberlain's Pain Balm for rheumatism, as I know from personal experience that it will do all that is claimed for it. A year ago this spring my brother was laid up in bed with inflammatory rheumatism and suffered intensely. The first application of Chamberlain's Pain Balm eased the pain and the use of one bottle completely cured him. For sale by T. S. Armstrong, druggist.

STEAM ROLLER TO WORK NIGHTS.

Business Men on Park Avenue Petitioned to That Effect.

The long wished-for time when Park avenue, between North avenue and Front street, will be smooth again is rapidly drawing near, and this morning the steam roller began to pick up the surface of that thoroughfare between Second street and North avenue. There has always been considerable trouble among the horses in the vicinity of the roller, but when the roller appeared in the business section, it is much worse. The business men of that portion of the avenue saw that their trade would suffer considerably by having the roller in operation during the business hours of the day as no horses or carriages could remain in the street, so a petition was started asking that the work be done nights. The petition, signed by all the business men of that section, was presented to Street Commissioner Meeker, who speedily granted the request, and the roller was returned to upper Park avenue to give the finishing touches to the road bed at that point.

The work between North avenue and Front street will be finished during the hours of night, thus obviating the difficulty.

A DIME SOCIABLE.

Entertaining Affair Given by Young Ladies at Vincent Chapel.

The dime social at the Vincent chapel, given by the Young Ladies' Mission Circle, last evening, was a success. The attendance was not what the programme or the efforts of those in charge deserved, but that did not hinder those that did come from spending a very pleasant evening.

The entertainment came first and consisted of vocal solos by Miss Margaretta Barnes and Louis H. Bond and selections on the violin by Clarence Mills. Miss Gertrude Sharpe acted as accompanist. Then followed a "conversation" party and several games while refreshments brought the sociable to a close.

The entertainment committee consisted of Miss Eva Jenkins, Miss Laura Mulford and Miss Humble. The committtee in charge of the refreshments consisted of Mrs. Percy Davis Miss Gertrude Sharpe, Miss Alice Jenkins and Miss Anna Smalley.

A DR. JEKYL-MR. HYDE AFFAIR.

Police Arrest a Woman Who They Think is Mrs. McGraff, But Are Not Sure.

The visit of Mary McGraff to this city Wednesday evening made a decided impression on the police force and when Patrolman Cooney arrested a drunken woman on Park avenue last night, whose face greatly resembled that of Mrs. McGraff, they supposed, of course, she had tried it again. The name she gave, Maria McGrath, lent the same impression.

The woman was arraigned before City Judge DeMeza this morning and said she had never been arrested before in this city Her gown was different from that of Mary McGraff, but there was a decided resemblance between the two women. The police thought they were the same person, but Maria said no. Judge DeMeza suspended sentence.

A Social Affair.

Miss Mary Hazell, the young daughter of Mr. and Mrs. T. E. Hazell, of Westervelt avenue, entertained a few friends at her home yesterday afternoon and evening from 5 to 8 o'clock, the event being the celebration of her birthday. The affair was in charge of Mrs. Hazel, who arranged it, and the happy event will long be remembered by those present.

WIENBERGER IN COURT.

THE CLOTHING MAN DECLARES HE CAME TO PLAINFIELD TO STAY.

Dean, Who Made the Complaint Against Wienberger, Says He Did It to Get Half the Fine—Newcorn Reserves Decision.

The case of George Dean against M. Wienberger, the West Front street clothier, came up before Justice Newcorn in the city court room this morning. Lawyer H. C. Runyon appeared for Mr. Dean, and Lawyer Angleman for M. Wienberger.

The first witness called was Mr. Dean. He stated that he went into Mr. Wienberger's store and purchased a pair of socks for 15 cents. He had no conversation with anyone previous to the purchase. When asked by Mr. Angleman why he went there he said he thought that he might as well get one-half of the fine as anybody. He produced the socks in court and Mr. Angleman asked him if he purchased them as a souvenir, to which he replied that he did.

Mr. Potter, of Summit, was placed on the stand and said that as an agent he rented Mr. Weinberger a store at that place with the idea that he was going to stay, but he only remained one month, owing to the fact that business was poor, as he claimed. Mr. Potter claimed that Weinberger would not sign a lease. Mr. Taylor, the owner of the Summit store, testified substantially the same. Mr. Angleman asked for a non-suit on the grounds that Mr. Wienberger had not been adjudged guilty, but the motion was denied.

The case continued with City Clerk MacMurray on the stand who said that the defendant had no city or State license. Frank Jones, of the firm of Powlison & Jones, said that the defendant had taken their unexpired lease till April 1st, 1897. He had stated that he would take it for a year and perhaps longer. Mr. Jones said he did not sign the lease. The defendant agreed to pay $55 per month. The lease was produced in court as evidence. The agent, A. P. Miller, who rented the store was also put on the stand and testified to having rented the store. Mr. Wienberger was called and said that he had come to Plainfield to stay. He liked the town and the doctors had recommended that his wife go to the country on account of her health. His lawyer offered as evidence the defendant's bank books, bills of sale from the New York clothing houses, The Daily Press and News, containing his advertisements, a lease with the Gas Company, a catalogue where the goods were purchased and the lease on the store for eleven months.

The plaintiff attempted to prove that the business of the defendant came under the act which provides for fraud in the bankrupt sale of wearing apparel, but the evidence seemed to prove that the latter had come to stay. He had made arrangements to have his store fixed suitably to carry on the clothing business.

Justice Newcorn, after hearing both sides of the case, reserved his decision till next Monday morning at 10 o'clock.

For every quarter in a man's pocket there are a dozen uses; and to use each one in such a way as to derive the greatest benefit is a question every one must solve for himself. TO BE VOTED ON AGAIN

Question of Women Delegates To Go Back to Methodist Churches.

RESULT OF CONFERENCE COMPROMISE

Its Adoption a Concession on Both Sides, Neither Majority Nor Minority Surrendering—Report of the Committee—Points of Disagreement.

Cleveland, May 8.—The compromise adopted by the Methedist Episcopal conference yesterday permitting the women elected as lay delegates to retain their seats on condititon that this action be not construed as a precedent has the effect of referring the question back to the churches to be voted on again. The adoption of the compromise was a concession by both sides. Neither party gave in on the principles held by it, and neither majority nor minority surrendered. The rumor that great pressure has been brought to bear on the women to retire cannot be traced to any reliable source. The report of the committee showed that the members were agreed that the question of the eligibility of women to vote in the conference was a constitutional one, and that the general conference had the power to interpret the constitution. The committe recommended the modification of the constitution changing the qualifications of a delegate to the general conference by using the words lay delegate instead of layman, thereby making the admission of women legal. The committee also reported in favor of referring the proposed amendment to the annual conferences of the following year, and that a two-thirds vote of the general conference and a three-fourths vote of the annual conference be required to enact this recommendation into a law. The report said that inasmuch as the question had not been judicially passed upon, those who had seats upon the floor could retain them without prejudice. The report provides for the resubmission of the question to the annual conferences during the next four years. The report further provided that the action of this general conference should be without any prejudice to the rights of any women delegates to any future general conference, under the constitution, as such general conference may construe or interpret it.

Points of Disagreement.

Rev. Dr. Kynett moved the adoption of the report and said: "It is needless to say that there are questions on which we could not agree. While the debate was progressing, many from both sides were in free consultation. Brethren of both sides thought that a compromise should be made. Neither party was asked to surrender any of its convictions. Neither has surrendered and the brethren of the majority want it distinctly understood that they have not surrendered their positions, that the law of 1872 includes women. Out of deference to the opinions of those who differed with the majority, they consented to the referendum. The women are allowed to remain on their seats with the understanding that their seats are unchallenged. The committee was pained that the women delegates had been asked to retire from the conference." Rev. Dr. J. B. Craw, who refused to sign the report of the committee on eligibility said: "In the interest of harmony and because I love the church, I am willing to accept every part of that report except that part which proposes to waive the challenge and admit these women. Up to this time we have failed to receive the authority from the annual conference to admit women to this conference, and I cannot consent to their admission under any circumstance without stultifying my conscience."

Bishop Andrews' Opinion.

Just where the three ladies who withdrew stand is a question. The conference has given them the right to sit in the convention with the understanding that their seats are challenged, but it is noticed that they are not to be interfered with. But it is claimed that the ladies by their voluntary withdrawal from the conference have relinquished all their rights. Bishop Andrews is of the decided opinion that they are out. Speaking of the communication from the ladies Bishop Andrews said: "It is probable that no action will be taken by the conference on the communication, as the conference is not a body which has any control over them. They occupied seats and relinquished them and the conference is powerless. It is not necessary to take action on it, as it is purely a personal matter with them and they had a right to do so. In my judgment, they are no more members now than any other outsider."

The division was made on the basis of the bids in the separate exhibits. Each exhibit and the bids of both companies thereon were compared and the firm making the lowest proposal was given the award in that particular class. The amount of the Carnegie contract will be $1,660,518.20 and that of Bethlehem $1,462,191.80, a total of $3,122,710. SHREWD TO THE LAST

Holmes' Plans To Baffle Any Attempt at Grave Robbing.

HIS BODY ENCASED IN CEMENT

Two Men Stood Guard Over the Remains Last Night in the Cemetery Vault—To Be Buried Some Time To-day.

Philadelphia, May 8.—Murderer Holmes' body was guarded over last night in the vault in Holy Cross cemetery by two men who were employed at his request several days ago. It will be buried some time to-day. Holmes, in his desire to escape the surgeon's knife, showed his remarkable cunning to the last. When the cheap pine coffin was received at the jail after the body had been lowered from the scaffold it was noticed that it was large enough for two bodies of the size of Holmes'. When the remains were received at the cemetery vault this was very soon explained. The last act in the receiving vault was performed at Holmes' express command. The lid of the coffin was taken off and the body was lifted out and laid on the ground. Then the bottom of the coffin was filled with cement; the body was then replaced in the coffin and completely covered with the cement. It was Holmes' idea that this cement would harden around his body and prevent any attempt at grave robbery. Holmes made no will and left no confession. This is according to Mr. Rotan. He says he knows he made no will, and, while the murderer gave him a big bundle of papers, the lawyer says that he is confident that those papers relate only to private business matters. As yet Mr. Rotan has had no opportunity to examine them.

Looking for Holmes' Accomplices.

The last chapter in the famous Holmes' case may not have been written. Holmes had accomplices both in his criminal operations and his murders, and the police of Chicago are now gathering up the threads which will bring these accomplices to justice. This is one of the objects of Mr. Chamberlain's visit here, and he had a consultation with Mr. Rotan to-day in relation to the papers left by Holmes. Mr. Rotan has not yet had time to examine them, and he has promised to send copies of these papers to Mr. Chamberlain.

Mrs. Pitezel's Grief.

Mrs. Pitezel was seen after Holmes was hanged. About all she could say between her sobs was that she was glad that Holmes had received his just deserts, but that his death would not return to her her husband and children. Mrs. Pitezel will return to her home in Galva, Ill., next week.

SCAVENGER LIVER.

Your Liver Will Cleanse Your System if It's Kept Well.

Your liver is a storehouse and a scavenger. It stores up digested food for use when wanted. It arrests and throws out dangerous poisons which are trying to get into your circulation.

Indigestion disorders your liver, by creating poisons that paralyze it. Biliousness, and other disorders, are caused by these and other poisons passing your liver and infecting your whole system.

This is a simple explanation of many disorders which often seem incurable. But they are only incurable because not understood. If you will treat your stomach with Shaker Digestive Cordial, all these disorders will disappear. The cause will have been removed.

Shaker Digestive Cordial is a gentle, vegetable tonic, which aids you to digest your food. It cures the disorders caused by the poisons of undigested food, and prevents your stomach from disordering your liver.

It relieves almost immediately the following symptoms, viz.: headache, dizziness, nausea, mental depression-weakness, lethargy, fever, stomach, ache, bad taste, flatulence, constipation, loss of appetite jaundice, emaciation, general debility, nervousness, neuralgia, offensive breath, anaemia, rheumatism, etc.

It makes you feel well and strong. It cures you when nothing else will.

RECENT BOND SALES

Composition of Committee which Will Conduct Investigation.

HILL SURPRISED AT THE VOTE

Only He and Five Other Democrats Said Nay to the Passage of the Peffer Resolution Members Indulge in Silver Speeches.

Washington, May 8.—The senate finance committee, which is the committee that is to investigate the recent sales of government bonds, as provided for by the Peffer resolution, passed yesterday by a vote of fifty-one yeas to six nays, consists of six republicans, six democrats and one populist. The vote was a surprise to Senator Hill, who has antagonized the resolution ever since its introduction. Although in his closing speech he appealed to the democratic members to vote against the resolution, which he characterized as an attack upon the secretary of the treasury by republicans and populists, only five members of his party voted with him. In the discussion which took place before the vote, the resolution was opposed by Senator Palmer, dem., Ill., on the ground principally that the purpose of the investigation was to procure material to affect unfavorably the public mind on the silver question. A charge was made against the administration by Senator Vest, dem., Mo., for allowing members of the cabinet to neglect their official duties and absent themselves from Washington in order to make speeches against the free coinage of silver. He alleged that a recent democratic convention in Michigan had been controlled by federal office-holders who, under pressure from Washington, had deserted the cause of free coinage, and he declared that if the national democratic convention at Chicago was overawed and overriden in that way its action would not be that of fairly elected delegates, fairly expressed.

House of Representatives.

There is nothing of general public importance upon the programme of the house to-day. Much comment has been aroused by the action of Mr. Pickler, rep., S. D., yesterday, and one veteran member said it reminded him of some of the sessions of the fifty-first congress. The member from South Dakota, having been unable to secure as long a session as he desired for the consideration of private pension bills, used all manner of dilatory tactics to accomplish his purpose. Finally his attention was called to the fact that his action tended only to defeat his own expressed purpose, as those bills could only be taken up by unanimous consent. He took this as a veiled threat that unanimous consent would not be granted him when he desired to bring those bills before the house, and he remarked that he "accepted service." There the incident stopped.

Cruiser Brooklyn Nearly Completed.

Washington, May 8.—An indication that the new armored cruiser Brooklyn is nearly finished was given yesterday in the payment of the twenty-fifth instalment of the contract price for the vessel to the builders, the Cramps of Philadelphia. This shows that the Brooklyn is five-sixths completed. Of the thirty instalments into which the contract price was divided, two more only will be paid before the cruiser is preliminarily accepted by the government.

Morton Saves a Murderer's Life.

Albany, May 8.—Gov. Morton has commuted to imprisonment for life the sentence of William Plucker of Arcade, Wyoming county, condemned to death for the murder of Silas Martin, Nov. 27, 1895. The men were deadly enemies. Martin assaulted him on the day of the tragedy, and it culminated in the shooting. Judge Childs, before whom Plucker was tried, recommended executive clemency, as did District Attorney Charles of Wyoming county.

FATAL RAILROAD WRECK.

Passenger Train Derailed at Boston and Two Men Are Killed.

Boston, May 8.—By reason of a misplaced switch the passenger train from New York on the Old Colony division of the New York, New Haven & Hartford railroad was derailed in the yard just outside the Park Square station about 7:30 last night. One man was killed and three badly injured. The train was just entering the station when the smoking car, the second in the train, was overturned. Two day coaches in its rear both left the rails and when the train stopped one was standing almost at right angles to the other. In the smoker were nearly twenty passengers, one of whom was killed and three others injured. One of these died later at the Massachusetts General hospital. One of the victims was W. J. Dow, living on Savin Hill avenue, Dorchester. He was a merchant in business on Washington street. Mr. Dow leaves a wife and one son about 20 years of age. Immediately after the accident the police ambulance and a detail of officers were summoned and the most seriously injured, J. E. Long, of Watertown, was removed to the Massachusetts General hospital, where he died at 8.40. He was found to have sustained a fracture of the pelvis and internal injuries. H. J. Sheldon, an engineer on the Providence division of the New York, New Haven & Hartford railroad, who was riding in the smoking car, sustained severe general bruises and a cut on one leg. He also went to the General hospital, but later left for his home in Mansfield. His injuries are not serious. The other man injured was a Providence business man on his way to Readville.

London, May 8.—The Right Hon. A. J. Balfour, government leader, stated in the house of commons last night, in response to a question, that the negotiations with the Canadian government for the establishment of a fast steamship service between Great Britain and Canada had not yet been completed. When established the vessels will call at a port in Ireland and carry the Australian mails.

Fisheries and Game Commission.

Albany, May 8.—The state fisheries, game and forestry commission has designated secretary F. H. Mitchell of Norwich to have charge of its New York office. The commission has appointed Charles A. Taylor of Oswego as assistant secretary at a salary of $1,200 and $200 expenses.

Tamsen Calls on Gov. Morton.

If the spirit shown in the Democratic State Convention yesterday prevails at Chicago to any extent, Billy Russell will make them all hustle.

The Democrats are holding a memorial service in Trenton today over the death of their party.—Unionist Gazette.

It was the liveliest corpse Trenton has seen in many a day.

Thomas W. Britt, of Summit, has been appointed game and fish warden for this district. This is the office that Israel D. TenEyck and Percy C. Ohl, of this city, were candidates for. It is understood that Mr. Ohl has been offered the deputyship of the office for this district.

The most popular act of the Democratic State Convention yesterday was its declaration for sound money. It stands out and above all other planks at present as the most important. There was no equivocating there. New Jersey Democrats are for sound money and the declaration was a wholesome example for the rest of the country.

The property owners whose land faces on Madison avenue, between Front and Second streets, are much incensed at the canal-like excavation which has been made in the roadbed of that thoroughfare. The sidewalks will have to be lowered three feet to be on a level with the roadbed, and the property owners feel that the city should do this work. Even then their buildings will deteriorate in desirability and be lowered in value by reason of steps which will be needed to get into the doors.

Farmer James E. Martine delights being in the thickest of a political battle, and at the Democratic State Convention yesterday he was in the front rank. His clarion voice and strong arguments formed the opening wedge which precipitated the fight to make Frederick C. Marsh, of Elizabeth, a Delegate-at-Large, and which nearly defeated the plans of the State committee. The intense sincerity which characterized his remarks had much to do with the stampede of many delegates to Mr. Marsh's side and had it not been for the stoic disposition and unflinching decision of Bob Davis, of Hudson County, Mr. Martine would doubtless have carried his point. Mr. Martine was not only chairman of the Union county delegation, but also presiding officer of the Eighth District Congressional caucus. In the latter position his executive ability was taxed to its utmost to bring order out of the chaos which the discordant elements brought about

No disastrous results may be expected as the outcome of the lively time at the State Convention yesterday. True, the fight was a bitter one, but it has stirred the party from that lethargy and laxity which has characterized its actions at the polls for the last two years, and whatever embitterment may now rankle some of the participants will give way to party loyalty when the candidates are named at Chicago. The reconstruction of the State Committee, wielded in power as it is by the general sentiment of the State at large, will materially tone down the policy of those leaders who have become somewhat unpopular, but who have retained their places by local rather than State opinion and influence. Of course, it is a source of regret to the Democrats of this county to see a man like Frederick C. Marsh defeated in his aspirations for election as a Delegate-at-Large, but there was consolation, at least, in sending him as a Congressional delegate, though the honor might not be such a great compliment.

A Mixedup Affair.

The horse was tied to another wagon and became frightened. The result was that one wagon was completely wrecked, while the other was badly damaged. The horse did not get away as the man was nearby when the accident happened.

—Tomorrow "only," Saturday, May 9th, VanEmburgh & Son will sell one hundred and fifty pair of fine corsets at the ridiculous low price of 29 cents a pair, which is a big loss to the maker, and a big gain to all those who avail themselves of this opportunity.

—Charles Smith, the young assistant at the store of Joseph Gavett, had a serious accident Wednesday afternoon that necessitated his absence from his regular duties yesterday. He was trying to lower one of the large iron doors on the sidewalk over the opening into the cellar, when the other one fell, striking him in the arm badly spraining it. He will not have the full use of his arm for some time.

THEATRICAL.

At the Broadway Theatre, New York city, the record of De Wolf Hopper's second week which terminated last Saturday night, was but a repitition of his first, for the auditorium, boxes and balcony, as well as the gallery have been crowded at every performance with multitudes of delighted and enthusiastic auditors, to see and hear John Philip Sousa and Charles Klein's "El Captain" with its sprightly marches and melodious musical numbers, its wealth of superb scenic and costume effects and continuity of action, its carefully selected and evenly balanced cast and splendidly drilled chorus of pretty girls and comely young men. "El Captain," which is a decided novelty in comic opera, has made a most emphatic impression, and it bids fair to enjoy as long, if not a longer run, than any of its successful predecessors evolved by Mr. Hopper at the Broadway theatre. De Wolf Hopper is a universal favorite with the general public, and it is not too much to say that he has never been seen to greater advantage than in this opera which has instantly bounded into the favor and affections of New York theatre-goers.

High School Notes.

The regular weekly drill of the High School Military Company was held yesterday morning at 9:10 o'clock on the school grounds. The company was divided into two squads consisting of those who had taken the drill all winter, and the awkward squad was made up of the remaining boys of the school. The young ladies' company also drilled for the first time this year. Captain George Edwards was in command. The company will parade on Decoration Day.

Delicate Dress Goods.

Some gowns are so dainty in the weave, so delicate in tint, that they seem to soil by being looked at—one or two wearings making them unpresentable, NOT USELESS. We make a specialty of cleaning fine fabrics, the more delicate the material, the better the results. Sometimes an accident will ruin a gown, without injuring the texture. We dye them then, sometimes we get a prettier effect than the original color. Fine goods stand redying. The finer the material the better the new color. We charge so little for cleaning or dyeing, that even if you are in doubt as to the result, it's worth while to experiment. Want a new evening gown for a dollar or two? Laundry drivers will receive your work.

There is more catarrh in this section of the country than all other diseases put together, and until the last few years was supposed to be incurable. For a great many years doctors pronounced it a local disease, and prescribed local remedies, and by continually failing to cure with local treatment, pronounced it incurable. Science has proven catarrh to be a constitutional disease and therefore requires constitutional treatment. Hall's Catarrh Cure, manufactured by F. J. Cheney & Co., Toledo, Ohio, is the only constitutional cure on the market. It is taken internally in doses from 10 drops to a teaspoonful. It acts directly on the blood and mucous surfaces of the system. They offer one hundred dollars for any case it fails to cure. Send for circulars and testimonials. Address F. J. FIRE IN NEW BRUNSWICK.

Factories Quickly Wiped Out, the Loss Aggregating $40,000.

William Henderson's foundry and blacksmith shop, at No. 11 Water street, New Brunswick, was found on fire early yesterday. The fire gained great headway, owing to a confusion in the alarm system. At last a general alarm was rung in and the whole fire department responded. The fire speedily spread to the new works of the Empire Machine firm, W. E. and Walter Burns, proprietors.

The building is three stories, and besides the Burns plant contained that of the Crawford Manufacturing Company, makers of the "Stop Motion" for knitting machines, and Joseph Tice's telephone manufactory. The firemen, after two hours of hard fighting, succeeded in extinguishing the fire. Sparks flew in profusion, carried by a strong east wind, and neighboring buildings took fire, but these flames were soon put out.

The factories were practically ruined, and much machinery was damaged. The loss is estimated at $40,000, with insurance for about one-fourth.

Charles Greenwald, ex-chief engineer of the fire department, Mr. Wagner and Mr. Meyers were injured.

AFTERMATH OF THE GREAT SHOW.

Incidents That Made a Small Circus For Those Interested.

Even after the "greatest show on earth" had departed, there was plenty of excitement. Such a large gathering was sure to lose something. Joe Beek was the first to discover anything of value, as he claims to have found a lady's gold watch on the ground where the ladies' dressing room was located. A lad named Perrine also found a silver watch. One young man, who was industriously hunting among the debris, suddenly came upon a flat-headed adder and had another little circus of his own.

The feed, hay and bedding that remained on the field, caused no end of trouble. A number of men appeared and started to carry it away. Each claimed to have purchased it and war seemed imminent. Nobody was able to produce a receipt for it and, at last, an owner of part of the land appeared and carted most of it away with the help of some of his neighbors.

Station Agent Erickson, at Netherwood, was a loser by the show, as someone quietly appropriated his stock of yesterday morning's papers from the Union News Company. The wrapper was found in the park minus its contents.

—The last of the Y. M. C. A. star course entertainments will be a concert by the Cecelia Club, led by Prof. Fitzhugh, on May 21st. Prof. P. Ludwig Conde will also assist.

Borough Sidewalk Notice.

Notice is hereby given that the ordinance of the Borough of North Plainfield requires that flag sidewalks be laid and prohibits the laying of new board walks or repairing of old board walks.

An impression seems to exist that old board walks may be repaired without violation of the ordinance.

This is not the fact. In every case where any repair of a board walk is necessary stone must be used.

Public notice of this fact is now again given so that no one need feel aggrieved if they are required to replace a newly laid or repaired board walk with stone.

THAT ASTOUNDING SUSAN

Hermit Miles' Christmas Hunt on Indian Run.

He Got Some Venison and Then Two Wolves Interfered—Susan a Widow If She Had Not Been a Remarkable Woman.

"WOLVES was wuth twenty-five dollars apiece time me an' Susan lived on our clearin'," said old Cuthbert Miles, the Indian Run hermit, "an' wunst I was so hot foot to git a couple, 'count o' the bounty on 'em, that I come pooty nigh never bein' heerd on ag'in. I wouldn't a ben, nuther, if it hadn't a ben fer Susan. Nothin' surer'n that, sir!

"'Twas the day afore Chris'mas, an' me an' Susan was going to Parks', five mile down the creek, nex' day to eat Chris'mas dinner.

"'Susan,' I says, 'seems to me I ought to go out an' git a deer, so's we kin take some ven'son 'long with us tomorrow, as sort of a Chris'mas present to Joe an' Sally Ann. Hadn't I?' I says.

"'Course ye had!' says Susan. 'Git a nice fat one.'

"So I took ol' flint lock an' went out. I hadn't gone more'n two miles 'fore I jumped up as nice an' fat a buck as I ever see. I let ol' flint lock holler, an' I see by the way the buck twitched his tail an' sprung away that I had touched him and touched him bad. I went on, an' found the snow all splattered with blood, an' blood markin' the deer's trail.

"'Here's goin' to be a saddle o' ven'son,' I says, 'setch as'll make Joe an' Sally Ann Parks glad they come into these here woods!' I says.

"I follered the deer's track, thinkin' how tickled Susan'd be when she sees that nice, fat deer, and the blood got thicker an' thicker, an' the buck's tracks slower an' slower, till I know'd I'd soon come up to him dead or dyin'. Pooty soon, though, I seen somethin' that jist made my blood bile. Some other tracks showed in the snow, right along the deer's. They was wolf tracks—two on 'em, a follerin' the deer!

"'This is sad,' I says. 'That nice, fat buck o' Joe's an' Sally Ann's goin' to be fodder fer two 'tarnal wolves! This is sad!'

"I hurried on, an' hadn't gone a hundred yards when I come square out on the wolves an' the buck. The buck was down, an' the wolves was tearin' an' gnashin' away at him tremendous. I up an' blazed away at one o' the wolves, and hit him bad. Away they both went, the wounded one havin' a hard time of it, an' leavin' lots of his worthless blood stainin' the snow as he went. Goin' up up to the buck I see he was dead, an' the wolves had tore him so that my blood took to bilin' wüss'n ever.

"'Them wolves is wuth twenty-five dollars apiece,' I says, 'an' I'm bound to hev 'em, but if they wasn't wüth a cent I'd hev 'em anyhow, jist fer their mummixin Joe an' Sally Ann's deer,' I says, 'an' disapp'intin' Susan,' I says.

"So I follered the bloody wolf track. The two devourin' varmints kep' together, an' I know'd where one went t'other un'd go. They led me a tol'able long chase, an' they'd a led me a longer un if the one wolf hadn't a ben wounded so bad. The trail led to an openin' in a ledge o' rocks, an' there, squattin' right in it, was the well wolf. I whanged away. Old flint lock didn't seem to be feelin' jest up to the mark that day. By rights she ought to tumbled the deer square in its tracks, an' she oughtn't to let the first wolf git away, an' now she hadn't acted square with me in dealin' with the second wolf. She had tumbled it, o' course, but not so it'd stay tumbled, an' the wolf drug itself back into the hole, though it was a hard job fer it.

"'Cats!' I says. 'You ain't treatin' me right, flint lock,' I says. 'I'm afeard you've give me a bad job here,' I says. 'But I've got to hev them wolves,' I says. 'If I'd go home an' tell Susan I let a couple of wolves git away from me,' I says, 'she'd give me a look an' say: "Moses, I'm ashamed o' ye!" an' she'd more'n likely say: "Milk the heifer; I'll go an' git them wolves myself," setch an astoundin' woman is Susan.'

"That's what I said to ol' flint lock, an' laid her down more in sorrow than anger. Makin' an inspection o' the openin' in the rocks, I seen that it run in amazin' narrow fer three or four feet, an' then spread out into quite a nice showin' of a cave.

"'That entry to them wolves' house is awful close work for the eyes!' I says. 'There's got to be some tight squeezin' done 'fore I git in to hev it out with them wolves,' I says. 'But they'n in there, an' they've sp'iled Joe an' Sally Ann's deer, an' they've disapp'inted Susan, an' they'n worth twenty-five dollars apiece!' I says. 'I've got to hev 'em, squeeze or no squeeze!' I says.

"So I took my buckhorn-handled huntin' knife in one hand an' started in. By wigglin' an' squeezin' an' twistin' an' turnin' like an' eel goin' up a dam, I got half through the narrow entry, when I heerd a terrible objection to my goin' any furder. There was an ugly growl first, then a snarl, then a snappin' o' jaws, an' then the hull of 'em together, an' then the wolf that made 'em sprung fer me an' socked its teeth in my left shoulder. I had my knife in my right hand, an' I didn't engage to lay there un' let the wolf do all the sockin', so I begun to sock the wolf with the knife. The wolf hadn't skeert me, fer I was 'spectin' somethin' o' that kind; but the fight hadn't no more'n begun 'fore I diskivered somethin' that jist turned me cold from head to foot, an' it seemed to me as if I could feel my hair turnin' white.

"'Susan!' says I, 'I'm afeard yer as good as a widder!'

"What was the diskivry I made? Why, sir, I was stuck as fast in that narrow place as if I'd a-ben built in there when it was made! I couldn't wiggle ahead, nor I couldn't wiggle backwards. I didn't keer fer the wolf.

SHE SNUCK AROUND.

As fer a matter o' that, layin' there half on my side, I socked my knife so hard an' so fast into that wolf that he was a goner 'fore he could do more'n give me that first sock with his teeth in my shoulder. T'other wolf was dead, I knew, or he'd been makin' some kind of a fuss. So wolves didn't cut no figger in the situation at all. It was me bein' held fast in the bowels o' the earth, so to speak, gittin' wedged there tighter an' tighter the more I tried to get myself loose, an' no more chance o' anyone comin' by there than there was o' them rocks openin' of their ownselfs an' lettin' me out. The weather was overpowerin' cold an' gettin colder. I knowed that Susan wouldn't think nothin' o' my bein' away not until some time after dark, an' then she couldn't do nothin' till mornin'.

"'Susan,' I says, 'then ye'll be a widder!'

"'Twan't that I was afeard to die that I felt so tremendous awful 'twixt them narrow rocks, but it was the thoughts o' leavin' Susan all alone on the clearin'. So I'd work away ag'in, choppin' the rocks with my knife, hopin' to make a hole big enough to let me out, but the way I lay I couldn't git to work where it'd do any good, or I could a done it in time. At last, after, I guess, three hours o' work, I was jest petered all out. I couldn't hardly raise my head nor my hands no more, an' the cold was eatin' in to the very marrow o' my bones. I don't know how long I laid there like that, but by an' by I heered somethin' at the openin' outside, an' then some one hollers' in an' says:

"'Be ye dead or alive?'

"It was Susan! Of all things in the world, Susan! But I mowt a know'd it. Astoundin' woman that she was, I mowt a know'd it!

"'Susan!' I says, 'I'm betwixt and between!'

"Then I told her the fix I was in an' how I run into it deliberate an' with my eyes open. Susan, she crept in, an' she took my knife, an' she dug, an' she pried, an' she chipped. She kep' it up fer an hour, an' made room enough fer me to turn in. A few more chips an' chops an' pryin' an I squeezed my way out. An' me an' Susan both sot down on the snow an' hugged an' bellered. Then by an' by Susan got up an' crawled in an' dug out the two dead wolves. An' how do ye s'pose it happened that Susan come along an' rescued me? If she hadn't ben an' astoundin' woman she wouldn't a ben there an' she'd ben a widder. Not long arter I had left the clearin to go an' git Joe an' Sally Ann a deer fer Chris'mas, a wolf come sneakin' up an' was nosin' around to git one o' Susan's chickens. Susan diskivered it, an' bein' as sly as the wolf, she snuck around with her clothes pounder, an' 'fore the wolf know'd what wos up, she fetched him a whack with it that sent him endways. But he was up agin' fore Susan could git in another lick, an' started fer the woods. The whack with the clothes pounder had hurt him so bad that he couldn't run fast, an' what does Susan do but start on his trail. She could keep him in easy sight, but couldn't quite come up with him. She kep' on, though, hoping that he'd hole up 'fore long, an' then she'd git him.

"As it happened the wolf took a course that brought him squar to where t'other wolves had ketched an' tore my buck. Soon as Susan see the dead buck she know'd what had happened, an' the bloody trail leading away from it, an' my tracks on the trail, kind o' sot her to thinkin', an' she give up the wolf she was chasin' an' took my trail. Consekently she wa'n't a widder, an' we had a jolly Chris'mas at Parks' next day, though we didn't hev no nice fat deer to give 'em for a present. Lord! what times we did usety hev on that clearin'! An' how astoundin' Susan was!"—N. Y. Sun.

Out in the rain

A good drenching in a cold rain is often the beginning of consumption. Yet no one claims that the germs of this disease exist in the rainwater. Then how was this brought about? The exposure was followed by a cold; the vitality was lowered; the cough continued for some weeks; the throat and lungs became congested; and thus all the conditions were favorable for the consumption germs.

Scott's Emulsion

of Cod-liver Oil, with Hypophosphites, does not directly attack these germs and kill them. But it does tone up the whole system and restores the body to health before serious harm is done. The germs of consumption thrive best when the system is weakened and the throat and lungs congested. Do not delay until it is too late, but treat your cough early. Cod-liver oil and the hypophosphites, in the form of Scott's Emulsion, are the very best remedies.

"JUST AS GOOD" IS NOT SCOTT'S EMULSION.

The woman's words were few and simple. But what a change they made in my world! How my heart awoke from its stupor, and leapt up with a new joy and a new-born hope! "Did he get away?" I cried eagerly. "Did he escape, mother, then?"

"Ay, that he did!" she replied, quickly. "That poor fellow, yonder—he lies quiet enough now. God forgive him his heresy, say I!—kept the door manfully while the gentleman got on the roof and ran right down the street on the tops of the houses, with them firing and hooting at him; for all the world as if he had been a squirrel and they a pack of boys with stones!"

"And he escaped?"

"Escaped!" she answered, more slowly, shaking her old head in doubt. "I do not know about that! I fear they have got him by now, gentlemen. I have been shivering and shaking upstairs with my husband—he is in bed, good man, and the safest place for him—the saints have mercy upon us! But I heard them go with their shouting and gunpowder right along to the river, and I doubt they will take him between this and the chatelet! I doubt they will."

"How long ago was it, dame?" I cried.

"Oh! maybe half an hour. Perhaps you are friends of his?" she added, questioningly.

But I did not stay to answer her. I shook Croisette, who had not heard a word of this, by the shoulder. "There is a chance that he has escaped!" I cried in his ear. "Escaped, do you hear?" And I told him hastily what she had said.

It was fine, indeed, and a sight to see tears dry in his eyes, and energy and the blood rush to his cheeks, and the and muscle of his face. "Then there is hope!" he cried, grasping my arm. "Hope, Anne! Come! Come! Do not let us lose another instant. If he be alive let us join him!"

The old woman tried to detain us, but in vain. Nay, pitying us, and fearing, I think, that we were rushing on our deaths, she cast aside her caution and called after us aloud. We took no heed, running after Croisette, who had not waited for our answer, as fast as young limbs could carry us down the street. The exhaustion we had felt a moment before when all seemed lost—be it remembered that we had not been to bed or tasted food for many hours—fell from us on the instant, and was clean gone and forgotten in the joy of this respite. Louis was living and for the moment had escaped.

Escaped! But for how long? We soon had our answer. The moment we turned the corner by the riverside, the murmur of a multitude, not loud, but continuous, struck our ears, even as the breeze off the water swept our cheeks. Across the river lay the thousand roofs of the Ile de la Cite, all sparkling in the sunshine. But we swept to the right, thinking little of that sight, and checked our speed on finding ourselves on the skirts of the crowd. Before us was a bridge—the Pont au Change, I think—and at its head on our side of the water stood the Chatelet, with its hoary turrets and battlements. Between us and the latter, and backed only by the river, was a great open space half-filled with people, mostly silent and watchful, come together as to a show, and betraying, at present at least, no desire to take an active part in what was going on.

We hurriedly plunged into the throng, and soon caught the cue to the quietness and the lack of movement which seemed to prevail, and which at first sight had puzzled us. For a moment the absence of the dreadful symptoms we had come to know so well—the flying and pursuing, the random blows, the shrieks and curses and battering on doors, the tipsy yells, had reassured us. But the relief was short-lived. The people before us were under control. A tighter grip seemed to close upon our hearts as we discerned this, for we knew that the wild fury of the populace, like the rush of a bull, might have given some chance of escape—in this case as in others. But this cold-blooded ordered search left none.

Every face about us was turned in the same direction; away from the river and toward a block of old houses which stood opposite to it. The space immediately in front of these was empty, the people being kept back by a score or so of archers of the guard set at intervals, and by as many horsemen, who kept riding up and down, belaboring the bolder spirits with the flat of their swords, and so preserving a line. At each extremity of this—more noticeably on our left where the line curved round the angle of the buildings—stood a handful of riders, seven in a group, perhaps. And alone in the middle of the space so kept clear, walking his horse up and down and gazing at the houses, rode a man of great stature, booted and armed, the feather nodding in his bonnet. I could not see his face, but I had no need to see it. I knew him, and groaned aloud. It was Bezers!

I understood the scene better now. The horsemen, stern, bearded Switzers for the most part, who eyed the rabble about them with grim disdain, and were by no means chary of their blows, were all in colors and armed to the teeth. The order and discipline were of his making; the revenge of his seeking. A grasp as of steel had settled upon our friend, and I felt that his last chance was gone. Louis de Pavannes might as well be lying on his threshold with his dead servant by his side, as be in hiding within that ring of ordered swords.

It was with despairing eyes we looked at the old wooden houses. They seemed to be bowing themselves towards us, their upper stories projected so far, they were so decrepit. Their roofs were a wilderness of gutters and crooked gables, of tottering chimneys and wooden pinnacles and rotting beams. Amongst these I judged Kit's lover was hiding. Well, it was a good place for hide and seek—with any other player than Death. In the ground floors of the houses there were no windows and no doors; by reason, I learned afterwards, of the frequent flooding of the river. But a long wooden gallery raised on struts ran along the front, rather more than the height of a man from the ground, and access to this was gained by a wooden staircase at each end. Above this first gallery was a second, and above that a line of windows set between the gables. The block—it may have run for 70 or 80 yards along the shore—contained four houses, each with a door opening on to the lower gallery. I saw indeed that but for the vidame's precautions Louis might well have escaped. Had the mob once poured helter-skelter into that labyrinth of rooms and passages he might with luck have mingled with them, unheeded and unrecognized, and effected his escape when they retreated.

But now there were sentries on each gallery and more on the roof. Whenever one of the latter moved or seemed to be looking inward—where a search party, I understood, were at work—indeed if he did but turn his head, a thrill ran through the crowd and a murmur arose, which once or twice swelled to a savage roar such as earlier had made me tremble. When this happened the impulse came, it seemed to me, from the farther end of the line. There the rougher elements were collected, and there I more than once saw Bezers' troopers in conflict with the mob. In that quarter too a savage chant was presently struck up, the whole gathering joining in and yelling with an indescribably appalling effect: in derision of the old song said to be popular amongst the Protestants. But in the Huguenot version the last words were of course tranposed.

Hau! Hau! Huguenots!
Faites place aux Papegots!"

We had worked our way by this time to the front of the line, and looking into one another's eyes, mutely asked a question; but not even Croisette had an answer ready. There could be no answer but one. What could we do? Nothing. We were too late. Too late again! And yet how dreadful it was to stand still among the cruel, thoughtless mob and see our friend, the touch of whose hand we knew so well, done to death for their sport! Done to death as the old woman had said like any rat, not a soul save ourselves pitying him! Not a soul to turn sick at his cry of agony, or shudder at the glance of his dying eyes. It was dreadful indeed.

"Ah, well," muttered a woman beside me to her companion—there were many women in the crowd—"it is down with the Huguenots, say I! It is Lorraine is the fine man! But after all yon is a bonny fellow and a proper, Margot! I saw him leap from roof to roof over Love Lane, as if the blessed saints had carried him. And him a heretic!"

"It is the black art," the other answered, crossing herself.

"Maybe it is! But he will need it all to give that big man the slip to-day," replied the first speaker, comfortably.

"That devil!" Margot exclaimed, pointing with a stealthy gesture of hate at the vidame. And then in a fierce whisper, with inarticulate threats, she told a story of him, which made me shudder. "He did! And she in religion, too!" she concluded. "May our Lady of Loretto reward him."

The tale might be true for all I know, horrible as it was! I had heard similar ones attributing things almost as fiendish to him, times and again; from that poor fellow lying dead on Pavannes' doorstep, for one, and from others besides. And the vidame in his pacing to and fro turned towards us, I gazed at him fascinated by his grim visage and that story. His eye rested on the crowd about us, and I trembled, lest even at that distance he should recognize us.

And he did! I had forgotten his keenness of sight. His face flashed suddenly into a grim smile. The tail of his eye resting upon us, and seeming to forbid us to move, he gave some orders. The color fled from my face. To escape indeed was impossible, for we were hemmed in by the press, and could scarcely stir a limb. Yet I did make one effort.

"Croisette!" I muttered—he was the rearmost—"stoop down. He may not have seen you. Stoop down, lad!"

But St. Croix was obstinate and would not stoop. Nay, when one of the mounted men came, and roughly ordered us into the open, it was Croisette who pushing past us, stepped out first with a lordly air. I, following him, saw that his lips were firmly compressed, and that there was an eager light in his eyes. As we emerged, the crowd in our wake broke the line, and tried to pursue us; either hostilely or through eagerness to see what it meant. But a dozen blows of the long pikes drove them back, howling and cursing to their places.

I expected to be taken to Bezers; and what would follow I could not tell. But he did always it seemed what we least expected, for he only scowled at us now, a grim mockery on his lip, and cried: "See that they do not escape again! But do them no harm, sirrah, until I have the batch of them!"

He turned one way and I another, my heart swelling with rage. Would he dare to harm us? Would even the vidame dare to murder a Caylus' nephew openly and in cold blood? I did not think so. And yet—and yet—

Croisette interrupted the train of my thoughts. I found that he was not following me. He had sprung away, and in a dozen strides reached the vidame's stirrup, and was clasping his knee when I turned. I could not hear at the distance at which I stood what he said, and the horseman to whom Bezers had committed us spurred between us. But I heard the vidame's answer.

"No! no! no!" he cried, with a ring of restrained fury in his voice. "Let my plans alone! What do you know of them? And if you speak to me again, M. St. Croix—I think that is your name, boy—I will—no, I will not kill you. That might please you, you are stubborn, I can see. But I will have you stripped and lashed like the meanest of my scullions! Now go, and take care!"

Impatience, hate and wild passion flamed in his face for the moment—transfiguring it. Croisette came back to us slowly, white-lipped and quiet.

"Never mind," I said, bitterly. "The third time may bring luck."

Not that I felt much indignation at the vidame's insult, or any anger with the lad for incurring it; as I had felt on that other occasion. Life and death seemed to be everything on this morning. Words had ceased to please and annoy, for what are are words to the sheep in the shambles? One man's life and one woman's happiness—outside ourselves we thought only of these now. And some day, I reflected, Croisette might remember even with pleasure that he had, as a drowning man clutching at straws, stooped to a last prayer for them.

We were placed in the middle of a knot of troopers who closed the line to the right. And presently Marie touched me. He was gazing intently at the sentry on the roof of the third house from us; the farthest but one. The man's back was to the parapet, and he was gesticulating wildly.

"He sees him!" Marie muttered.

I nodded almost in apathy. But this passed away, and I started involuntarily and shuddered, as a savage roar, breaking the silence, rang along the front of the mob like a rolling volley of firearms. What is it? A man posted at a window on the upper gallery had dropped his pike's point, and was levelling it at some one inside; we could see no more.

But those in front of the window could; they saw too much for the vidame's precautions, as a moment showed. He had not laid his account with the frenzy of a rabble, the passions of a mob which had tasted blood. I saw the line at its farther end waver suddenly and toss to and fro. Then a hundred hands went up, and confused angry cries rose with them. The troopers struck about them, giving back slowly as they did so. But their efforts were in vain. With a scream of triumph a wild torrent of people broke through between them, leaving them stranded; and rushed in a headlong cataract towards the steps. Bezers was close to us at the time. "S'death?" he cried, swearing oaths which even his sovereign could scarce have equalled. "They will snatch him from me yet, the hellhounds!"

He whirled his horse round and spurred him in a dozen bounds to the stairs at our end of the gallery. Then he leaped from him, dropping the bridle recklessly; and bounding up three steps at a time, he ran along the gallery. Half a dozen of the troopers about us stayed only to fling their reins to one of their number, and then followed, their great boots clattering on the planks.

My breath came fast and short, for I felt it was a crisis. It was a race between the two parties, or rather between the vidame and the leaders of the mob. The latter had the shorter way to go. But on the narrow steps they were carried off their feet by the press behind them, and fell over and hampered one another and lost time. The vidame, free from this drawback, was some way along the gallery before they had set foot on it.

How I prayed—amid a scene of the wildest uproar and excitement—that the mob might be first! Let there be only a short conflict between Bezers' men and the people, and in the confusion Pavannes might yet escape. Hope awoke in the turmoil. Above the yells of the crowd a score of deep voices about me thundered, 'a Wolf! a Wolf!" And I too, lost my head, and drew my sword, and screamed at the top of my voice, "a Caylus! a Caylus!" with the maddest.

CYCLING COMMENT.

The F. L. C. Martin Cycle Company received a new Dayton wheel yesterday.

The First National Bank, of Bound Brook, has taken the agency for the Crescent wheel.

The Jersey Wheel Company has already sold six wheels and has orders for as many more.

Abram H. Cornish, clerk at the law offices of Assemblyman W. R. Codington, has a new Plainfield wheel.

A meeting of the committee on runs of the Y. M. C. A. Cyclers will be held this evening and a schedule of runs arranged.

The Jersey Wheel Company have received a Royal tandem which can be seen at their handsome salesrooms on North avenue.

The Irvington Wheelmen will have a run to the Millburn road race and the meet at the Crescent Oval on Decoration Day.

W. J. Roome, of Sycamore avenue, has received a '96 combination Crescent tandem purchased from the F. L. C. Martin Cycle Company.

The road book committee of the New Jersey Association announces that the '96 road book of the division will not be ready for distribution before the end of this month.

C. M. Murphy, H. C. Wheeler and E. B. Kiser will sail for France on May 20th to compete against foreign riders. This puts an end to the alleged arrangement of Murphy to compete against a locomotive in California this month.

H. J. Martin, of the Plainfield Cycle Company, has made the following sales: G. L. Hughes, S. C. Schaffer, Gales; Abram Hornish, Charles Van-Middlesworth, Harry Campbell, D. M. Quick, Robert Ballentine, Plainfields; A. G. Lazzie, Wm. Crawley, Centurys; G. Flemmer, Manhattan. Mr. Martin has also sold a Plainfield wheel to a Brooklyn man and expects an order for three more from that place.

It is reported that a number of professional racing men are in training on Springfield road for the Irvington-Millburn road race on May 30th. If the race committee of the Metropolitan Association of Cycling Clubs accepts their entries it will prevent many amateur riders from competing, as it is understood that Chairman Gideon will soon define the standing of an amateur who competes against a professional in a road race.

The first of the Jersey wheels appeared yesterday and it certainly comes up to the claims of its manufacturers. This wheel is one of the track racing machines and will be shipped to Philadelphia today for Jay Eaton's use. Eaton is now training at the Pt. Breeze track. The wheel is geared to 80 and weighs a trifle less than 20 pounds. The running qualities of the Jersey are fine while the introduction of forks, instead of the double back braces to the rear wheel, give it unusual rigidness. The color is the light Jersey blue. The regular road wheels will be royal blue.

Many of the drivers in this city, both of delivery wagons and private equipages, have the very dangerous habit of turning their vehicles around in the street without looking behind them first. A number of cyclists have already come to grief by running into some other object in their efforts to avoid collision, and no little profanity has been set loose by this practice. The rider is kept guessing regarding the movements of the wagon in front of him. Wheelmen are entitled to as many privileges as are carriages or wagons, although some drivers don't seem to realize the fact.

The time for the opening of the wheelmen's racing season is near, and it will formally begun in the east with the race meet of the Crescent Wheelmen at Plainfield on May 30th, says The Evening Post. The change in the racing rules of the League of American Wheelmen has forced nearly all of the favorite semi amateur riders (Class B) into the professional ranks and left but a few of the prominent Class A or amateur riders. Among the professional riders who will compete on the New York circuit will be Zimmerman, Bald, Murphy, Cooper, Sanger, Kluge, Silvie, Smith, Blauvelt, Wheeler and Waller. In the amateur ranks will be Owen, Henshaw, Granger, Brock, Leipold, Barrett, Barbia, Wise, Roome, White, Roe, Harrison, Goodman, Judge and Thompson. Of these Hedstrom, Owen, Granger and Earl will occupy the position on scratch the most number of times, while the others will probably be allowed but very small handicaps. The National meet circuit of the New York Division will run only through June, but a fall circuit will be arranged. The Riverside Wheelmen, Quill Club Wheelmen and Kings County Wheelmen are the only local clubs thus far to obtain permits for race meets. Road racing will be much in favor among the clubs in the Metropolitan District unless the Racing Board of the League decides to legislate against it. Tandem races will also figure largely on the programmes of local meets for the first time. All things considered, the outlook for racing this season is promising, more particularly for the amateur than the professional rider.

VARIOUS SPORTS.

Irwin Cooley, of Westervelt avenue, who is a student at Cornell College, has made the Cornell athletic team and will contest in the running high and broad jump. In the high jump he clears 5 feet, 8 inches, and in the broad jump he jumps over 20 feet.

The first scholastic athletic meet in New Jersey this year will be held at the Crescent Oval tomorrow afternoon by the Plainfield High School Athletic Association. The entry list is a good one and includes the best school athletes of Northern New Jersey. Plainfield will be represented by the athletic team of the High School and the bicycle riders from Leal's School. The games will be well worth witnessing, and the High School boys deserve the support of their towns-people.

GOLF.

The Hillside Tennis and Golf Club have engaged Wallace Kirk, an expert in the game of golf, to take charge of their course. Mr. Kirk has lately been connected with the Larchmont Golf Club. He will give instructions to those who desire to learn the game.

AMONG THE STEPPERS.

Jed Smalley has sent his horse Harry to the Greenbrook farm for the spring.

The special match at the Gentlemen's Driving Park tomorrow will be between Thomas Brantingham's Myrtle Twig, Woodbrook Farm's St. Albans and Chas. C. Brower's Highland Boy. There will be other contests also.

WATER WAS THE THEME.

A LIVELY DISCUSSION IN THE BOROUGH COUNCIL LAST NIGHT.

An Attempt Made to Compel the Street Railway to Sprinkle Somerset Street for the Privilege of Changing Their Guage.

If "temperance" had been the chief topic for discussion at the adjourned meeting of the Borough Council last evening. the words of the Councilmen would have passed into history as advocating, in the strongest sense, that great essential commodity, "cold water," in a way that would have scared the natives who enjoy a glass of something else occasionally. It is safe to say that never before in the history of the borough has water received such consideration. It has always been conceded that pure water was necessary, but the manner in which some of the Councilmen talked last evening the impression was given that it was absolutely so. The discussion arose over the petition of the street railway company asking for the priviledge of narrowing the guage of the tracks in the borough. A few days ago the street committee met the officials of the railroad in regard to the matter and practically it was settled, that is until last night, when Mr. Woolston presented the report of the street committee through Borough Counsel Reed. The report recommended that the petition of the company be granted, that fourteen days be allowed them to make the change, that the street be replaced in its former condition, that the Council at any time have the priviledge of changing and repairing the pavement in the roadway if it was deemed necessary, and that the company pay one-third of the cost of same which is to be done to the satisfaction of the Council, and that while the tracks are being changed the Street Commissioner is to be paid by the company for his time while overseeing the work, also that a bond for $5,000 is to be filed for the faithful performance of the same.

Mr. Woolston then offered a resolution that the committee's report be received, adopted and that the Clerk be authorized to execute the necessary papers toward carrying out the contract.

At this point the discussion about water began. Mr. McLaughlin has always advocated the use of water, but no one supposed thas he would actually fight for it, but such was the case. He arose to his feet and stated that a number of the residents on Somerset street had called on him and asked him to secure, if possible, the sprinkling of Somerset street, from one end of the trolley line to the other in the borough, by the railroad company. He thought that the citizens should be considered, and he made a motion which was seconded by Mr. Lounsbury, that the railroad company sprinkle Somerset street from the borough line to the end of their tracks, from April 1st to October 1st.

Mr. Woolston said that at the committee meeting, Mr. Riker for the company had explained the matter, and said that they could not establish the precedent of watering the streets and that they could not go to that expense. Mr. Woolston, continuing, said that the committee held out very strong, but it was learned that it was inconsistent to ask it. The trolley was a benefit to the residents. Every street is annoyed by dust and few pay for sprinkling. The people on Somerset street were troubled no more than those living on other streets.

Mr. McLaughlin said that it was the duty of the Councilmen to look out for the borough's interest, and he thought the company would sprinkle if the clause was inserted. The taxpayers should be considered.

Mr. Lounsbury stated that there was one thing to be considered and that is, the trolley raises and scatters more dust than any other thing on wheels on account of it being so close to the ground. The necessity of sprinkling was apparent through the admission by the company as stated by Mr. Woolston. Just at present the borough is to be considered. It is well enough for Mr. Riker to say the Company can't sprinkle, but if we say they can't change their guage they would soon come to it.

Mr. Valiant considered the trolley a convenience and it was a question as to whether changing the guage was not a greater convenience than the reverse. He thought there was a possibility that the company would not water the streets, then there would be a howl from the very people who now want the water.

Mr. McLaughlin thought that the company was obliged to change their tracks and when the Cooncil asked a favor they ought to grant it.

It was stated that Mr. French charged twenty-five cents for sprinkling a fifty feet front, whereupon Mr. Woolston stated that most of the residents along the street sprinkle and would continue to do so. There was no reason why the company should water Somerset street and not other borough streets.

At this stage of the discussion the Mayor took a hand and Mr. Lounsbury took the chair. He said that he was present at the recent conference of the street committee and the officials of the street railway. The council had talked over the subject and outlined various concessions. As for himself he was opposed to the trolley. The steam railroad has to buy every foot of land they use, while the trolley people come along and ask for our well macadamized streets, and are not willing to give anything. The council is sworn to protect their constituents interests, but what are they confronted with? The people compel the granting of franchises. Some real estate agent has a piece of ground in the suburbs he wants to make some money on, and then he says that he wants the trolley to boom up that section. Thus there is a pulling and hauling between the people and their govering body. "I saw that situation when the franchise was granted for the borough road," said he. Somerset streeet is only thirty feet wide, and they took the back bone of the borough. The people said they had to pay 50 cents for carriages and they wanted the street railway because it was cheaper. The trolley people knew the condition of affairs. If the people had kept quiet the council would have extracted good terms. "We are handicapped," said the mayor, "and I don't perform a single act in my official capacity wherein I have not the interest of the people at heart, no matter what my friends say. The trolley company has been operating a good road. They now ask us for the priviledge of narrowing the tracks. To be sure, they have not kept their contract, so far as keeping their portion of the street in repair is concerned, but now they agree to pay one-third of this expense and let us do the work to our own satisfaction. The comprny occupy about nine feet of the roadway. We stuck out for the water, but Mr. Riker told us that most of the people from the brook to the Hillman bridge watered the street. The street would have to be watered if the track was not there. The question now is, do we want the tracks left as they are, or do we want them changed and have the priviledge of riding continously all over the city? Which will benefit us the most?"

Mr. Peck followed by saying that if there was any way of securing the water he was in favor of it. but if not, he was in favor of signing the contract just the same.

Counsel Charles A. Reed was given permission to speak as a taxpayer, and stated that he used to live on Somerset street before the tracks were laid, and that he with others had to pay to have the street sprinkled. The people wanted the trolly, and it built the borough up and has benefitted the residents living along the line.

He did not think, however, that the borough should demand more benefits from the company than the residents along the line receive. He thought the company should be compelled to water in front of his house, if they were going to water Somerset street. Everybody in the borough was to be considered, as the railroad benefits all

The Mayor then called for a vote on the amendment as offered by Mr. McLaughlin and the amendment was lost. Messrs. McLaughlin and Lounsbury supported it. Messrs. Valiant, Peck and Woolston voted against it. The original motion then came up for discussion, and Mr. Lounsbury said that if the company was going to give the borough adequate compensation, he would not object. "When this matter is settled, it is final," said he. "The Watchung avenue opening is one of the strongest arguments. The borough will have to pay between $30,000 and $35,000 to open that street, simply because the trolley road runs through Somerset street, which is the main outlet and inlet. The opportunity is now offered to get something. We give them the priviledge for one-third, and that makes it final. I don't think we get all we should. I am a patron of the road and ride probably more than other member." Mr. Valiant said that it is not obligatory on the company to change the guage and they might illude them. Mr. Woolston in speaking for the last time asked the question "What are we giving the company? If we were giving them a revenue so that they could pay a dividend, it would be different."

Mr. McLaughlin concluded by saying that Mr. Riker was interested in some real estate in the borough and would want further consideration for the company and he ought to be will-

THE SHOW OF RAG DOLLS

A UNIQUE ENTERTAINMENT GIVEN AT THE FIRST PRESBYTERIAN CHURCH.

Young People Disguised in Rags and Masks Make Fun for a Large Number of People—Names of Those Who Took Part.

A troupe of live rag dolls furnished no end of fun at the church sociable of the First Presbyterian church last evening, and the audience was kept in a continual roar by the funny actions and sayings of this remarkable band. The programme opened with a pleasing piano duet by Miss Josephine Petrie and Miss Olive Newell. Then came a grand march of the novel entertainers, the rag dolls. They consisted, of course, of a number of the young people of the church dressed in some simple summer gown, while their faces were concealed by large masks of cheesecloth with remarkable faces painted on them in the style of the rag doll. And the faces! They were certainly a wonderful lot, for black faces, white faces, scowling faces, smiling faces, and other kind of faces with a grand and glorious mixture of expressions, were all in evidence. Then followed a rag doll school with Miss Mary Kellogg as teacher and Miss Nora Williams and Edward Petrie as the capped and aproned nurses to look after the children. The children, dolls, or whatever they were, were represented by the following: The Misses Agnes Blair, Grace E. Overton, Eleanor T. VanDeventer, Helen Boice, Margaret Cave, Pansy Herring, Edith L. Pruden, and Mary A. Luckey, and Percy Dayton, Frank Flannery, Herbert Martin, John Petrie and Fred J. Bettman.

The school was divided into a morning and afternoon session. In the morning the children showed how little they knew about the different studies. Many of the answers to the questions of the teacher were very very witty which were duly appreciated by the audience.

In the afternoon session, exercises were held in honor of Josiah Methuselah Bettman, and the life of this honored individual was read by one of the cheesecloth-faced beings whose voice sounded very much like that of Fred. J. Bettman. A remarkable essay on girls was read by Frank Flannery and another on rabbits was read by that awkward son of Ham, impersonated by Percy Dayton. Miss Edith L. Pruden read an original poem on the circus, while "The Story of the Camel" was read by Miss Mary A. Luckey. The children also generally misbehaved despite the nurses.

This decidedly novel kind of entertainment was gotten up by Miss Flora Petrie who arranged the questions and answers, made the selections and designed and painted the remarkable faces.

The entertainment was under the charge of the social committee of the Christian Endeavor Society of which Miss Agnes Blair is chairman.

The refreshments that followed the entertainment were provided by a committee of ladies consisting of Mrs. J. M. Bettman, Mrs. Robert Radford, Mrs. W. H. Shotwell, Mrs. Henry Lounsbury and Mrs. J. M. Dayton.

The Netherwood Soon to Open.

The Daily Press reported recently the sale of the Hotel Netherwood to Dr. Shermer, of New York, and in connection with the above it is understood that Mr. Crossman, of New York, retains an interest in the property, having disposed of a portion of it to Dr. Shermer. The place will undoubtedly be known as the Townsend Sanitarium. Preparations are now being made to open the building at an early date.

At a meeting of the Elizabeth Board of Trade last night a resolution was adopted by a large majority demanding that the Freeholders refuse the use of the county roads for the building of trolley roads.

Mr. D. P. A year ago this spring my brother was laid up in bed with inflammatory rheumatism and suffered intensely. The first application of Chamberlain's Pain Balm eased the pain and the use of one bottle completely cured him. For sale by T. S. Armstrong, druggist.

SHE WAS A LIVING TORCH

AN OLD LADY SERIOUSLY BURNED THIS NOON.

Mrs. Aldrich Was Building a Fire in a Stove When Her Clothes Caught Fire—Seriously Burned Before Put Out.

Mrs. Charlotte Aldrich, a widow aged 74 years, and mother of Alonzo Aldrich, of Sherman avenue, met with an accident today about noon which will probably result in her death.

Mrs. Aldrich lives in a small house on Sherman avenue, about 300 feet to the rear of her son's home. The fire in her kitchen stove was was nearly burned out and she was rebuilding it when her clothes caught fire from the flames.

In a second they were all aflame and temporarily deranged, she ran outdoors and began to scream. There was no one in the house at the time, but her cries attracted the attention of Alex Jeffers and another man who were working in the fields nearby. They rushed at once to where Mrs. Aldrich was standing, and taking off their coats, wrapped them around her and smothered the flames.

Word was then sent to Mrs. John F. Wieckers, corner of Grant avenue and West Eighth streer and she telephoned for Dr. Endicott.

He responded quickly and upon examination learned that about two-thirds of Mrs. Aldrich's body was burned to almost a crisp and that she was suffering the most agonizing pain. Her wounds were dressed and as soon as possible she was moved to the hospital in the ambulance where everything possible is being done for her.

The chances are that owing to her advanced age and the extent of her injuries she will not recover from the accident.

The latest report from the hospital states that Mrs. Aldrich is sleeping quietly.

MOUNTAIN TROLLEY EXTENSION.

A Possibility That the Railway May Not Be Built to the Hotel.

A conference between the Plainfield Street Railway officials and the stockholders of the Mountain Park Inn is being held this afternoon at the office of J. H. French to decide whether or not to build the trolley road to the hotel. The hotel people are anxious to have the road built and the railway officials are willing to build it, but only under certain conditions, and this is where the hitch is. The railway company own a plot of property on the mountain which they intend to convert into a big picnic ground for the use of the public if the extension is made. But to this the stockholders of the hotel seriously object, as they claim that if the mountain is made a place of rendezvous for picnic parties, etc., the desirability of the hotel for boarders who desire quietude will be injured.

The railway company insist that to run the road simply for the patrons of the hotel would not pay them. A part of the right of way has been secured for the extension, but the rest of it depends on the hotel and railway people agreeing this afternoon.

Artist Artisans Exhibition.

At the Artist Artisans Institute, on Twenty-third street, New York, an exhibition of the students' work is being held. Several students from Plainfield are among the exhibitors. Miss Carrie Elliott has some studies in still life and china painting, Miss Myra Clark has studies in still life. Miss Elise Horn some specimens of designing, and Roy Cahoone pen and ink drawings from life.

To Exhibit in the Borough.

The management of Hunting's circus made application last evening to the borough authorities for the privilege of exhibiting at that place on May 22d. This morning the license was granted by Clerk Arnold and the circus will pitch their tents at the corner of Somerset street and Summit avenue.

Miss Sophie Rudd is much improved in health and expects to be able to leave the hospital at New York and return to her home on Clinton avenue in a short time.

How To Treat a Wife.

(From the Pacific Health Journal.)

First, get a wife; second, be patient. You may have great trials and perplexities in your business, but do not therefore, carry to your home a cloud or cloudy brow. Your wife may have trials, which, though of less magnitude, may be hard for her to bear. A kind word, a tender look, will do wonders in chasing from her brow all clouds of gloom. To this we woul add always keep a bottle of Chamberlain's Cough Remedy in the house. It is the best and is sure to be needed sooner or later. Your wife will then know that you really care for her and wish to protect her health. For sale by T. S. Armstrong, druggist.

BEFORE THE GRAND JURY.

Theodore Kurzhals Takes Formal Action Against the Salvationists.

Unless some steps toward a settlement are taken at once, the county authorities will be called upon to assist in forcing the Salvation Army to suppress that essential element of their service—noise.

The movement against the army was started by Theodore Kurzhals, Sr., who keeps a barber shop next to the barracks, as was exclusively stated in yesterday's Press. Yesterday afternoon Mr. Kurzhal's complained to Corporation Counsel Craig A. Marsh that the noise in the meetings of the army had become unbearable, and that his wife's health had been injured by the strain on her nerves.

Mr. Marsh brought the matter before Prosecuting Attorney Fred C. Marsh who will call the attention of the Grand Jury to the matter.

After Mr. Kurzhals had seen the Corporation Counsel, the latter notified the local leader of the Salvation Army regarding the complaint. Mr. Kurzhals told a Daily Press reporter this morning that there was no disturbance last evening at all, as the bass drum was not used in the indoor meeting. He had decided, however, to let the matter take its course so as to prevent further trouble. Mr. Kurzhals does not appear to have the slightest enmity for the Army but looks on the matter as a painful necessity.

A DELIGHTFUL EVENT.

Mr. and Mrs. E. McCarthy Entertain at Their Home on Race Street.

A very delightful evening was spent at the home of Mr. and Mrs. E. McCarthy, of Race street, by a number of their friends, last evening. There was music during the evening by John Konneff on his violin, cornet solos by Tom Trainor, and solos on the accordian by Miss M. McCarthy. Dancing was the attraction for most of the evening. A bountiful collation was served toward the close. Among those present were: The Misses Jacot, the Misses McCarthy, and the Misses Bridget Connoly, Kate McMann, Maria McCaffery, Kate Judge, Lena Thornhart, Agnes Fitzgerald, Winnie Kane, Lizzie Fitzgerald, Kate Eganney, and Fathers Miller and Malloy, Patrick Kane, Mr. Eganney, Tom Trainor and John Konneff. The young women were all members of the Children of Mary.

NO BOSSISM THERE.

James E. Martine Talks About the Democratic State Convention.

J. E. Martine was asked by a reporter of The Press today as to whether he feared that the strife at the State Convention would in any degree be carried into the campaign.

"No!" said he with emphasis. "Our contest ended with the convention. The delegates-at-large are all men of high social and intellectual standing and sterling Democrats. Such contests are natural in a convention that is made up of independent citizens who wear no collar of bossism. In this the two parties are widely different. The Republican conventions are as smooth as a Sunday-school convention for the reason that the delegates are but there to do the bidding of the bosses. Let no Republican flatter himself that the Democratic party is dead, or no Democrat fear that our party will be asleep in the great contest this fall."

FELL FORTY FEET.

A Painter's Miraculous Escape From Serious Injuries.

H. J. Ewings, a painter, residing in Brooklyn, fell a distance of 40 feet this morning off a scaffold erected on F. A. Barnaby's house on Plainfield avenue. He and some other men were at work painting the house, when Ewings made a misstep and fell to the ground, a distance of 40 feet. He received severe injuries to his back and a laceration of the chin. The ambulance was sent for immediately and the man was removed to the hospital, where several stitches were taken in the cut and proper treatment given to his injuries. It is not thought that he will be confined very long, though how he escaped without breaking any bones is a mystery.

Obste Principils

is the way the old scholars had of putting it, when they handed down the precaution to "resist beginnings." Everyone recognizes this to be a wise precaution, and in no direction is its wisdom more strongly indicated than in diseases of the eye, the "beginnings" of which, and the sure method of checking their painful growth, can be reliably ascertained only by a scientific optical test. This is free to all at Collier's, 103 Park avenue.

HOW TO FIGHT BEETLES.

ENTOMOLOGIST SOUTHWICK GIVES MANY PRACTICAL METHODS.

The Spray Nozzle With Some Poisonous Substance Will Exterminate the Bugs—How the Work Should Be Done.

Dr. Southwick, Entomogist of New York, addressed the Town Improvement Society last evening in the Y. M. C. A. hall. The attendance was very good, completely filling the seating capacity of the hall. Dr. Southwick is one of the foremost Entomologists of this country and proved a very interesting speaker, holding the close attention of his hearers throughout.

He showed and fully explained the uses of the various instruments essential in properly caring for trees. Views of inside growths of trees were shown and the speaker explained how these growths gradually split the tree until a hole is formed to the outside, which admits water and the latter soon rots the soundest tree when once it gets inside. A very interesting por- of the lecture was that in which the speaker exhibited various styles and makes of ladders, in minature form, which are used in reaching any desired height to sprinkle trees to rid them of the elm beetle or other bugs and worms destructive to the growth of the tree. One was on the plan of a step ladder on a large scale and the other an extension ladder, the same as used in the fire department. Following these came an exhibit of the style of pole used to spray the tree with. It was a bamboo stick, in three sections, which could be made any desired length, on the top of which was the nozzle used in spraying. The hose which would convey the liquid to the nozzle, was connected to the pole near the top so that the entire outfit could be moved around at will to any desired position. Styles of hose and nozzles were shown and the speaker said that the association could purchase and entire outfit at a cost of about $100, this to include a pump which would be necessary to force the liquid to the nozzle and said that a spray could be thrown fifty feet with ease. He cautioned his audience against a too liberal use of the spraying solution upon the trees, as it would injure them. Two men with a regular outfit could easily spray 150 trees a day, providing the trees were not to large.

At the close of the lecture, the speaker answered numerous questions which a number of his hearers brought up in a very clear way and fully explained the best modes of extinction for numerous bugs and insects which one is forced to contend with in every day life.

At the close of the lecture the association, by a unanimous vote, extended thanks to Dr. Southwick for his very entertaining and instructive talk.

The Coming Choral.

"The Swan and the Skylark," which will be one of the works rendered by the Choral Society at the concert next Thursday, is the principal event of the Cincinnati May Festival. "The Transfiguration" will also be rendered at the concert. The leading roles will be sung by Madame Eleanor Meredith Mechling, soprano, Miss Mary Louise Clary, contralto, William H. Rieger, tenor, and Heinrich Meyn, baritone. "The Transfiguration" was composed for the Gloucester Festival, England, in September last, and has not been sung in this country before this spring.

A Severe Accident.

Miss Moore, who lives with her sister, Mrs. Armstrong Mulford, on East Fifth street, met with a severe accident a few days ago while at her sister's home in Brooklyn. She was standing on top of a step-ladder when suddenly she was precipitated to the floor through a break in the ladder. An examination was made and it was learned that there was a fracture of the leg and a sprained wrist. The physicians say that she will be confined to the house for six weeks.

Not Encouraging.

The Netherwood extension of the street railway system was actually opened last Monday evening about 6 o'clock by a trial trip of car No. 6 over all the road. This extension rivets the trolley chain between Plainfield and Netherwood. Will the line ever be extended to Elizabeth? Nit. Not until somebody dies.—New Jersey Contractor.

For every quarter in a man's pocket there are a dozen uses; and to use each one in such a way as to derive the greatest benefit is a question every one must solve for himself. We believe, however, that no better use could be made of one of these quarters than to exchange it for a bottle of Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhœa Remedy, a medicine that every family should be provided with. ENGLAND'S DILEMMA

The Government Seriously Worried Over the Transvaal Affair.

AN INQUIRY CANNOT BE AVOIDED

Colonial Secretary Chamberlain's Reply in the House of Commons to a Request for a Statement of the Government's Position.

London, May 9.—That the Transvaal disclosures are causing the government no end of worry is now plainly apparent and a searching inquiry into the matter by parliament can not be avoided. When the liberal leader, Sir William Harcourt, asked the government in the house of commons yesterday afternoon to make a statement regarding the raid against the Boers, Mr. Chamberlain's perplexity was quickly noticed. Sir William said that the opposition had hitherto not unduly pressed the government on this important matter, but the time had now arrived for the house to be informed of the government's intention in he case. The responsible directors of the British Chartered South Africa company at Cape Town and Johannesburg were, he said, the authors of the raid, and Dr. Jameson was only their subordinate. The government was responsible for the acts of the chartered company to the nation and to the world The partisans of the company were trying to pass off on the credulity of the people that the raid was an impulsive action to protect the people of Johannesburg against outrage. But he could not think of anything more revolting than the low slang of the cipher dispatches which showed the true aspects of the affair.

Defends Rhodes.

Replying, Mr. Chamberlain said that in regard to the chartered company he did not dispute the authenticity of the cipher telegrams which the Transvaal authorities had published, although there were as yet no legal proofs that they indicated complicity on the part of the directors of company. What, he continued, was regarded the actual invasion of the Transvaal there was reason to believe that Mr. Rhodes had expressed his disapproval of an l had endeavored to stop the raid. Did the opposition, he asked, demand the punishment of Mr. Rhodes? Whatever may have been Mr. Rhodes' errors, he had also rendered great services, which could not be forgotton. Mr. Rhodes was now deprived of power for mischief and the directors of the chartered company had shown their confidence in him by deferring their acceptance of his resignation. Considering the disturbed state of Rhodesia and the influence of Mr. Rhodes in that territory he did not blame the directors for their show of confidence.

Not Time for an Inquiry.

The government, he said, adhered to their promise to make a searching inquiry into the action of the chartered company, but he held that such an inquiry must not be opened until the judicial proceedings connected with the Transvaal raid were ended, Then, he said, he would propose an inquiry by a joint committee of both houses. Mr. Chamberlain said that he had not threatened President Kruger, but had claimed the right to make friendly representations. President Kruger promised to consider these representations, and the government awaited the fulfilment of his promises. In the meantime he had asked Sir Hercules Robinson, governor of Cape Colony, to come to England, but the request for him to come was not intended as a recall.

Labouchere Denounces Rhodes.

Henry Labouchere, who is a bitter opponent of the British South Africa company, then addressed the house. He described the company as a gang of shady financiers who were running a gambling concern with the union jack flying over it. Cecil Rhodes, he said, had uttered deliberate falsehoods, basely deceiving Gov. Robinson, and had, when prime minister of Cape Colony, disgraced and dishonered the high tradition that British ministers did not make money from their positions. Mr. Labouchere concluded by declaring that he regretted the decision of Mr. Chamberlain, who was fettered by the cabinet.

Irwin V. Gord, the negro whom the police captured at Harper's Ferry, W. Va., after a two day's search, has confessed to the detectives that he committed the crime.

Instead of Reduced Wages.

Biddeford, Me., May 9.—The mule spinners' and loom fixers' unions have appointed a committee to meet agent Robert McArthur of the Pepperell and Laconia mills and present a request that instead of the contemplated reduction in wages a short time schedule be adopted or a temporary shutdown be made, to offset over-production, which has been assigned as one of reasons for reducing wages.

Offer To Compromise Rejected.

Newark, N. J., May 9.—An offer of compromise made by the wood contractors at the Builders' exchange was rejected by the 800 striking carpenters at their quarters yesterday afternoon. The bosses offered 27 1-2 cents an hour. The strikers want $2.75 per day. Unless the full scale is agreed to by Monday a big sympathetic strike will occur.

COLD IN HEAD

Nerve

Excitement, overwork and worry are ruining the health of thousands of women. Pure Blood is required to feed the nerves, a good appetite and digestive strength are demanded to keep the body strong and vigorous, and to restore the exhausted energies there must be sound and refreshing

Sleep

By its power to respond to all these needs Hood's Sarsaparilla has proved itself the greatest friend of women. Thousands write that they have been given health and strength by its use. It is the great blood purifier, and consequently the true nerve tonic.

"I feel that I should be wanting in common gratitude should I fail to tell the benefit my wife has derived from Hood's Sarsaparilla. She became seriously ill from running ulcers, caused by poorness of and was strongly advised by a friend to try Hood's Sarsaparilla. She said it had cured her and would no doubt cure my wife. So we tried it, and to say that its effect is wonderful, is only using a mild expression. It appears to be building up a new constitution for her; and, as we are a family of eleven, there are eleven of us rejoicing at the result.

"If the foregoing induces only one person, suffering in the same manner, to try Hood's Sarsaparilla, I shall feel more than rewarded." ELIJAH PACKER, 585 Monroe Street, Brooklyn, N. Y.

THEY GOT OFF EASY

Opinion of Prosecutor in the Boy Train Wreckers' Case.

THEIR YOUTH ALONE SAVED THEM

To Be Taken to Auburn Prison Next Week To Begin Their Long Sentences—Talk of an Early Pardon Already Heard.

Rome, N. Y., May 9.—J. W. Hildreth, Theodore Hibbard and Herbert Plato, who yesterday were sentenced for wrecking the Central-Hudson fast mail train near Rome on Nov. 19 last, will be taken to Auburn prison next week to begin serving their time. It is believed that they will be in prison but a short time when efforts will be made to have them pardoned. Although Hildreth, convicted of murder in the second degree, was sentenced to imprisonment for life, and the other two to forty years each, twenty years on each of two indictments charging them with manslaughter in the first degree, to which they pleaded guilty, the authorities are disappointed that the boys could not be convicted of murder in the first degree. The district-attorney looks upon the result of the trial as an indication of the difficulty of convicting those so young of a capital crime owing to the sympathies of the jurors being aroused. Hildreth took his sentence as coolly as he has regarded all the other proceedings of the trial, but his father was so visibly affected that many in the courtroom were moved to tears. Hibbard's aged father and sister wept bitterly when he was sentenced. None of Plato's relatives were in court. Each boy, like Hildreth, took his sentence unconcernedly. Only once during the six hours which the jury spent in deliberation was any instruction asked for, and that was on the question of the different degrees of murder, the jury being under the impression that there were three instead of only two. It is stated that on the first ballot the jury stood seven for conviction of murder in the first degree, two for acquittal, and three blank. On the second ballot the vote was two for murder in the first degree, seven for second degree, one third degree, one not guilty, one blank. The third ballot stood nine for murder in the second degree, two not guilty, one third degree. Then the jury came into court and asked for instructions, after receiving which they again retired and took another ballot and returned to the court in a short time with the verdict of guilty of murder in the second degree.

To Rehabilitate the Ranger.

Washington, May 9.—If a report made to Secretary Herbert by the naval board on construction is adopted, the United States ship Ranger, built nearly a quarter of a century ago by John Roach, at Chester, Pa., will be made into practically a new vessel. The scheme contemplates a thorough overhauling of the Ranger's machinery, the construction of a light spar deck and other changes that will cost about $100,000.

Big Arrival of Italian Immigrants.

New York, May 9.—The French line steamer Chandernager, which arrived yesterday from Marseilles and Naples, brought 972 Italian steerage passengers. The passengers were closely examined by health officers and found well. As a precautionary measure, however, the entire steerage compartment was thoroughly disinfected with sulphuric gas and the vessel was washed out with a powerful solution of bi-chloride of mercury.

To Turn Out Double Eagles.

Philadelphia, May 9.—The presses at the United States mint in this city which have been stamping silver dollars and subsidiary coin for two months, will shortly also begin turning out double eagles. Gold bars to the value of $2,000,000 are now stored in the mint and all of this will be coined prior to the annual shut down which will take place on June 30 and last for two weeks.

Sunken Wreck Passed at Sea.

Boston, May 9.—Capt. Hock of the tug Robert H. Rathbun, just arrived from Perth Amboy with a tow of barges, reports that off Minots' light a vessel's masthead is visible above the water, standing almost perpendicularly, undoubtedly attached to a sunken wreck. The wreckage lies directly in a line between Minots' and the lightship.

Spanish Prosecutor Insists on Death for Competitor's Crew.

PROTEST FROM CONSUL WILLIAMS

Two of the Prisoners Born in the United States—The Court Martial's Findings Will Probably Be Submitted to Madrid for Approval.

Havana, May 9.—A court-martial opened yesterday at the arsenal here for the trial of the men who were captured by a Spanish warship on the alleged filibustering schooner Competitor, belonging to Key West. The prisoners were Alfredo Laborde, born in New Orleans; Owen Milton of Kansas, William Kinlea, an Englishman, and Elias Bedia and Teodoro Maza, both Cubans. Capt. Ruiz acted as president of the court, which consisted of nine other military and naval officers. All the accused pleaded not guilty. Several witnesses admitted that when the men were captured they were not armed, and offered no resistance. Despite this fact, however, the prosecutor, Lieut. Suarz, asked the court-martial to convict the prisoners of filibustering and to impose the death sentence upon all of them. Counsel for the defence made a long review of the evidence, and demanded the acquittal of Maza. He argued against the others being sentenced to death, and declared that the evidence showed that mercy should be extended to them. The court martial has as yet rendered no judgment. It is said that its finding will be submitted for approval to the government at Madrid. During the course of the proceedings a letter was read from the American consul general, Ranon O. Williams, protesting against the trial. Consul General Williams abstained from attending the court martial.

Official Report of Progress of the War.

Gen. Linares reports that his command has succeeded in dislodging the forces of Jose Maceo from the entrenched camp occupied by them in the province of Santiago de Cuba. In the fighting that took place before the rebels retreated seventeen of the insurgents were killed. The troops, according to the report, lost only two killed and seven wounded. Another official report issued to-day states that the combined forces of Gens. Altamira and Inclan have driven the rebels under Antonio Maceo into a different position in the hills at Guaramaya, near Bahia Honda, province of Pinar del Rio. The report makes no mention of any rebel loss, but states that the Spaniards had seven killed and twenty-five wounded. Among the latter are one captain and two lieutenants.

Successful Filibustering Expedition.

Kingston, Jamaica, May 9.—Cuban residents here have received advices announcing the safe arrival in Cuba of an expedition in aid of the insurgents which recently left this island. The vessel conveying the expedition was chased by a Spanish cruiser and compelled to land her men and cargo in the vicinity of an encampment of government troops, which, however, was avoided by a flank movement.

SENSATION AT CAMDEN.

A Former City Official's Accounts Short—Grand Jury Recalled.

Camden, N. J., May 9.—The grand jury for the April term of the Camden courts was recalled to appear before Supreme Court Justice Garrison this morning. While all those concerned declined to throw any light upon the matter it is learned that the experts who had been at work on the city's books for many months discovered a shortage in the accounts of a former city official. The reported defalcation and the summoning of the grand jury created a great stir in political circles.

Sloop Partially Destroyed by Fire.

Providence, May 9.—The sloop Magnet, owned by Gilbert King of this city, partially destroyed by fire at East Greenwich, was one of the finest thirty-footers on the bay. She was insured for $2,500, which will barely cover the loss.

Fair and Warmer Tonight and Sunday.

At 2 o'Clock Leggett's Thermometer Registered 75 Degrees.

A Nebraska man who was ill and knew he must die, insisted upon having his funeral sermon delivered while he was yet alive, that he might know just what was said of him. The preacher naturally demurred at this but the sick man maintained that as it was to be his funeral he should have his way. And he did.

The contest made to elect Frederick C. Marsh a delegate-at large over Rufus Blodgett was gallantly fought. Marsh was not really a candidate himself. He practically withdrew when informed that his withdrawal would enable the election of Mr. Queen as permanent chairman and result in the retirement of William J. Thompson. Before the convention came together he was selected as a district delegate by the Union county men, and the contest in the convention was purely spontaneous on the part of his admirers. There is no doubt that he could easily have been elected over Blodgett had he entered the lists a week ago.—World.

JAPAN'S NEED.

A Returned Missionary Tells of the Religious Condition in That Country.

The prayer meeting of the Crescent Avenue church Christian Endeavor Society last night was one of great interest and instruction. The meeting was led by Miss Hesta Marsh who, after opening the meeting, introduced the speaker, George P. Pierson. Mr. Pierson is a returned missionary and intends to take up his work in the fall in the field of Japan. The Christian Endeavor Society of the Crescent Avenue church have pledged themselves to support Mr. Pierson. In the course of Mr. Pierson's address he spoke as follows:

"Let me thank you all for the assurance which I have received that my support is to be looked after by you. It gives me great pleasure to speak to my best friends and the words which I would ask your attention to are those which are found in the latter part of the ninth chapter of Matthew. 'But when He saw the multitudes, He was moved with compassion on them, because they fainted, and were scattered abroad, as sheep having no shepherd. Then saith He unto His disciples, the harvest truly is plenteous, but the laborers are few; Pray ye therefore the Lord of the harvest, that He will send forth laborers into the harvest.' This passage is a direct and exact discription of the people of Japan today. They are sheep which have wandered out upon the mountains; they are as sheep having no shepherd. It is a faithful picture of Japan and of the other nations; they are lost sheep. They have no shepherd, no leader, no Saviour, no Christ. They are a united people, in language, laws, in devotion to their emperor, but sad to relate they are not a religion.

"The students of the nation are broad minded men and very easily dealt with. They rear English literature and have learned many of the ways of the west. They are beginning to see the folly of old beliefs and are searching for something better; they are looking for Christ and we should be ready to take Him to them. The cry is for more laborers, more Christian workers not necessarily foreign missionaries, although there is great need of more of such, but more workers at home. 'The fields are white to harvest but the laborers are few.'"

Who Pays For It?

To the Editor of The Daily Press:—I would like to ask if it's true that our policemen on duty at night are furnished a midnight supper at the expense of this expense of this city? I am told such a supper is furnished them each night. If so, who pays the cost? Are our taxes not high enough, without this silly and unheard of expense? Some of these days the citizens and taxpayers of this city will wake up to the fact that we are under a very costly administration, and may vote something beside a "straight Republican ticket." Taxpayer.

A HACKMEN'S QUARREL.

James McArdle Made a Complaint Against John Goodwin—Both Fined.

The hackmen had more grievences to settle in the city court this morning. John Goodwin was the prisoner in this racket, and James McArdle, who is employed by Patrick Keely, made the complaint. The cause of the trouble was some offensive language that Goodwin was alleged to have used. Charles J. McNabb was counsel for Goodwin, and managed to prove that McArdle was as disorderly as Goodwin, and struck or attempted to strike the latter. The judge thought both men equally guilty, and after a severe reprimand, fined them each $5.

An Elegant Soda Water Fountain.

An elegant new soda water fountain now graces the pharmacy of T. S. S. Armstrong, at the corner of North and Park avenues. It is an elaborate and costly affair, and from it is drawn a delicious glass of soda water. The fountain was made by John Matthews expressly for Mr. Armstrong. It is equipped with improvements which no other fountain possesses, one of the most important being the syrup tanks, which are easily taken from their position and cleaned from whatever sediment may accumulate there during the day. The syrup does not come in contact with anything but glass and rubber, and is therefore sure to be free from any contamination The fountain is made of Tennessee marble, with a rim of Mexican onyx at the upper edge. The faucets and trimmings are silver plated. It is surmounted by an oak frame in which is set beveled French plate glass, making a most imposing appearance. The fountain is now in running order.

Your Physical Condition

needs attention at this time. If you are tired, weak and nervous, it is clear that your blood is impure, and without doubt there has been too much over-work or strain on brain or body. The course of treatment for such a condition is plain and simple. The blood must first be purified so that the nervous system, and in fact all the organs will be fed upon pure blood. Intelligent people without number have testified that the best blood purifier, nerve tonic and strength imparting medicine is Hood's Sarsaparilla. Nervousness, loss of sleep and general debility all vanish when Hood's Sarsaparilla is persistently taken; in a word health and happiness follow after taking Hood's Sarsaparilla.

Some gowns are so dainty in the weave, so delicate in tint, that they seem to soil by being looked at—one or two wearings making them unpresentable, NOT USELESS. We make a specialty of cleaning fine fabrics, the more delicate the material, the better the results. Sometimes an accident will ruin a gown, without injuring the texture. We dye them then, sometimes we get a prettier effect than the original color. Fine goods stand redying. The finer the material the better the new color. We charge so little for cleaning or dyeing, that even if you are in doubt as to the result, it's worth while to experiment. Want a new evening gown for a dollar or two? There is more catarrh in this section of the country than all other diseases put together, and until the last few years was supposed to be incurable. For a great many years doctors pronounced it a local disease, and prescribed local remedies, and by continually failing to cure with local treatment, pronounced it incurable. Science has proven catarrh to be a constitutional disease and therefore requires constitutional treatment. Hall's Catarrh Cure, manufactured by F. J. Cheney & Co., Toledo, Ohio, is the only constitutional cure on the market. It is taken internally in doses from 10 drops to a teaspoonful. It acts directly on the blood and mucous surfaces of the system. They offer one hundred dollars for any case it fails to cure. Send for circulars and testimonials. Address F. J. To Offer a Reward of 100 Dollars

Borough Sidewalk Notice.

Notice is hereby given that the ordinance of the Borough of North Plainfield requires that flag sidewalks be laid and prohibits the laying of new board walks or repairing of old board walks.

An impression seems to exist that old board walks may be repaired without violation of the ordinance.

This is not the fact. In every case where any repair of a board walk is necessary stone must be used.

Public notice of this fact is now again given so that no one need feel aggrieved if they are required to replace a newly laid or repaired board walk with stone.

Dated May 6th, 1896.

CHICAGO REDEEMS HERSELF.

Complies with Her Agreement and Will Not Lose the Democratic Convention.

Chicago, May 9.—The democratic national convention will be held in Chicago and at the Coliseum in accordance with the original programme. This was the decision announced by National Chairman Harrity at the close of the special meeting of the sub-committee on the convention of the national democratic committee last evening. All the obligations under which the convention had been voted to Chicago have been complied with. With the exception of Senator Gorman every member of the sub-committee was present at the meeting. Even chairman E. E. Well of the Wisconsin state central committee, who has been at death's door for months, came down from the Cream City to attend. The sub-committee in executive session appointed the following committees: On press and telegraph accommodations and facilities: S. P. Sheerin, Logansport, Ind.; E. C. Wall, Milwaukee; John C. Prather, St. Louis. On decorations and music: Thomas H. Shirley, Louisville; B. T. Cable, Chicago; U. C. Wallace, Washington. The latter was also selected as a member of the committee on arrangements, to succeed Senator Gorman of Maryland, who had notified the committee of his inability to serve. The committee adjourned to meet again in this city on the 29th inst. No tickets of admission to the convention will be issued until July 6. Application for press tickets should be made to S. P. Sheerin, chairman of the sub-committee on press and telegraph, Logansport, Ind.

CLERKS FOR CONGRESSMEN.

Action Taken Yesterday by the House Will Cost Uncle Sam $500,000 a Year.

Washington, May 9.—The action of the house yesterday in voting to provide the members with yearly clerks, the same as the senate, instead of for the sessions of congress only, increases the expenses of the government about $500,000 a year. It was not until 1893 that the house went even so far as that. The action was preceded by an animated debate of an hour or more, in which a dozen members took part. The principal opposition to the resolution introduced by Mr. Hartman, rep., Mont., and reported by the committee on accounts, without recommendation, was upon the ground that the treasury was not in condition to meet the increased expense, and two or three members suggested that the services of clerks were not needed. The resolution was warmly advoted by Messrs. Hartman and Henderson, rep., Iowa. Before being passed the resolution was amended so as to exclude representatives who are chairmen of committees having annual clerks.

THE FULFINCH STATE HOUSE.

Favorable Report on the Measure for Its Preservation.

Boston, May 9.—The house committee on ways and means has voted, seven to four, for the preservation of the Bulfinch state house, for whose salvation petitions have been received from hundreds of prominent men in many places. The seven affirmative votes were cast by Messrs. Lowell of Boston, Stevens of Malden, Mellen of Worcester, Harwood of Newton, Clarke of Wellesley, Gallivan of Boston and Weymouth of Fitchburg. The four negative votes were cast by Messrs. Humphrey of Dedham, George of Haverhill, Gillmore of Cambridge and Bouve of Hingham. The efforts to save the building have doubtless succeeded, for a marked change of sentiment in the legislature has occurred, and it seems certain that the majority report against the Tuttle bill will be accepted.

ABYSSINIAN CAMPAIGN.

The Italian Government Announces Its Plans in the Chamber of Deputies.

Rome, May 9.—In the chamber of deputies the government announced last night that Kasala would be retained. It was added that it was to Italy's interest to concurrently fulfil the claims of Great Britain's friendship. Adigrat, having been relieved, would be abandoned. The ransom of the Italian prisoners held by the Abyssinians would be negotiated with King Menelik. Twelve battalions of troops now in Abyssinia would be recalled on Gen. Baldissera's advice The government repudiated the idea of abandoning Erythrea. It would fortify the frontier and construct roads and a railway in the colony.

Another Civil Service Order.

Washington, May 9.—The president has issued an order extending the civil service rules to the interstate commission. This brings all offices in the commission here and outside of Washington within the classified service, except those requiring the president's nomination and confirmation by the senate. The order, which takes effect immediately, makes a total of about 85,200 positions now under the federal civil service rules.

The Cohoes' Bridge Accident.

Troy, N. Y., May 9.—Only one person, Existe Vincelette, boss of the repair gang, was drowned by the falling of an arch of the Cohoes bridge yesterday, although a number of workmen and boys were hurled into the water.

Offers To Compromise at 20 Per Cent.

Lowell, Mass., May 9.—J. Frank Puffer, doing business under the name of Puffer & Son, furniture dealers, has filed a petition in insolvency. The liabilities are stated at $50,000, and an offer is made of 20 per cent.

Fireman Probably Fatally Injured.

New York, May 9.—Battalion Chief William Shaw of the New York Fire department fractured his skull last night at a fire by falling into a subcellar, a depth of twenty-five feet. He will probably die.

CASTORIA

for Infants and Children.

MOTHERS, Do You Know that Paregoric, Bateman's Drops, Godfrey's Cordial, many so-called Soothing Syrups, and most remedies for children are composed of opium or morphine?

Do You Know that opium and morphine are stupefying narcotic poisons?

Do You Know that in most countries druggists are not permitted to sell narcotics without labeling them poisons?

Do You Know that you should not permit any medicine to be given your child unless you or your physician know of what it is composed?

Do You Know that Castoria is a purely vegetable preparation, and that a list of its ingredients is published with every bottle?

Do You Know that Castoria is the prescription of the famous Dr. Samuel Pitcher. That it has been in use for nearly thirty years, and that more Castoria is now sold than of all other remedies for children combined?

Do You Know that the Patent Office Department of the United States, and of other countries, have issued exclusive right to Dr. Pitcher and his assigns to use the word "Castoria" and its formula, and that to imitate them is a state prison offense?

Do You Know that one of the reasons for granting this government protection was because Castoria had been proven to be absolutely harmless?

Do You Know that 35 average doses of Castoria are furnished for 35 cents, or one cent a dose?

Do You Know that when possessed of this perfect preparation, your children may be kept well, and that you may have unbroken rest?

Well, these things are worth knowing. They are facts.

The fac-simile signature of Chas. H. Fletcher. is on every wrapper.

A RIGHT START.

The Child is Lucky Who Gets the Proper Kind of One.

Not Wealth or Position Alone Means "Starting Right"—Health Counts for Something.

When a child is born to very wealthy parents, we are inclined to say, "what a start in life it has." If it is a girl, the father may give a bridal present of a million dollars. If a boy, the father may take him in partnership, and give him many millions.

But what does all this amount to if the family history shows that there is a marked tendency to the development of serious disease? What comfort, if one expects that every slight cold may terminate in consumption; or every nervous pain indicate approaching nervous prostration, or even insanity? Wealth cannot make happiness when pain is present, and the shadow of approaching disease always hovering near.

Happy is the child who inherits a sound constitution. He laughs at a little cold, and does not mind a darting pain or two. But, alas, many of us inherit a tendency to weak lungs, an inability to endure exposure, or some weakness of the nervous system. Yet, with a perfectly sound ancestry, we may still suffer from all these and other complaints.

It is a great gift to have a strong nervous system. Neuralgia, sciatica, nervous dyspepsia, inability to concentrate the mind, sleeplessness, and nervousness are symptoms of weak nerves. Opiates and other narcotics, do not strengthen nerves; they weaken, debilitate. To be sure they may quiet a temporary pain, but the real cause, which is one of weakness, remains.

Weak nerves call for food and nerve tonics. The hypophosphites are generally acknowledged to be the best nerve tonics. They tone up the whole nervous system, and every part of the body responds. Cod-liver oil supplies a valuable food to all the tissues; while the medicinal agents which naturally exist in this oil exert their good effects also. Scott's Emulsion is a combination of the best cod-liver oil and the purest hypophosphites. It is called an emulsion, because the oil is emulsified or digested. Hence it is more acceptable to invalids, and all those who do not have very strong digestive powers. One dose of Scott's Emulsion may not quiet pain, but one bottle will often so strengthen the nervous system that no pain will be present to quiet.

Nearly twenty-five years ago the proprietors of Scott's Emulsion discovered a process of emulsifying Cod-liver Oil, so as to remove from it almost entirely its obnoxious fishy taste and smell, and at the same time increasing its food and remedial properties. They found also that by combining the Hypophosphites with it that they added still further to its power.

Since that time thousands of imitations have come into the field, but the original has never been equalled.

Thousands of eyes besides mine were strained on the foremost figures on either side. They met, as it chanced, precisely at the door of the house. The mob leader was a slender man, I saw; a priest, apparently, though now he was girt with unpriestly weapons, his skirts were tucked up and his head was bare. So much my first glance showed me. It was at the second look

A scene of wildest uproar and confusion.

—it was when I saw the blood forsake his pale, lowering face and leave it whiter than ever, when horror sprang along with recognition to his eyes, when borne along by the crowd behind he saw his position and who was before him—it was only then when his mean figure shrank and he quailed and would have turned but could not, that I recognized the coadjutor.

I was silent now, my mouth agape. There are seconds which are minutes; aye, and many minutes. A man may die, a man may come into life in such a second. In one of these, it seemed to me, those two men paused, face to face; though, in fact, a pause was for one of them impossible. He was between—and I think he knew it—the devil and the deep sea. Yet he seemed to pause, while all, even that yelling crowd below, held their breath. The next moment, glaring askance at one another like two dogs unevenly coupled, he and Bezers shot shoulder to shoulder into the doorway, and in another jot of time would have been out of sight. But then, in that instant, I saw something happen. The vidame's hand flashed up above the priest's head and the cross-hilt of his sheathed sword crashed down with awful force, and still more awful passion, on the other's tonsure! The wretch went down like a log, without a word, without a cry! Amid a roar of rage from a thousand throats, a roar that might have shaken the stoutest heart and blanched the swarthiest cheek, Bezers disappeared within.

It was then that I saw the power of discipline and custom. Few as were the troopers who had followed him—a mere handful—they fell without hesitation on the foremost of the crowd, who were already in confusion, stumbling and falling over their leader's body, and hurled them back pell-mell along the gallery. The throng below had no firearms and could give no aid at the moment; the stage was narrow; in two minutes the vidame's people had swept it clear of the crowd and were in possession of it. A tall fellow took up the priest's body, dead or alive I do not know which, and flung it as if it had been a sack of corn over the rail. It fell with a heavy thud on the ground. I heard a piercing scream that rose above that babel—one shrill scream!—and the mob closed round and hid the thing.

If the rascals had had the wit to make at once for the right-hand stairs, where we stood with two or three of Bezers' men who had kept their saddles, I think they might easily have disposed of us, incumbered as we were by the horses; and then they could have attacked the handful on the gallery on both flanks. But the mob had no leaders, and no plan of operations. They seized, indeed, two or three of the scattered troopers, and tearing them from their horses, wreaked their passion upon them horribly. But most of the Switzers escaped, thanks to the attention the mob paid to the houses and what was going forward on the galleries; and these, extricating themselves, joined us one by one, so that gradually a little ring of stern faces gathered about the stair-foot. A moment's hesitation, and seeing no help for it, we ranged ourselves with them; and, unchecked as unbidden, sprang on three of the led horses.

All this passed more quickly than I can relate it; so that before our feet were well in the stirrups a partial silence, then a mightier roar of anger at once proclaimed and hailed the reappearance of the vidame. Bigoted beyond belief were the mob of Paris of that day, cruel, vengeful and always athirst for blood; and this man had killed not only their leader, but a priest. He had committed sacrilege! What would they do? I could just, by stooping forward, command a side view of the gallery, and the scene passing there was such that I forgot in it our own peril.

For surely in all his reckless life Bezers had never been so emphatically the man for the situation—had never shown to such advantage as at this moment when he stood confronting the sea of faces, the sneer on his lip, a smile in his eyes; and looked down unblenching, a figure of scorn, on the men who were literally agape for his life. The calm defiance of his steadfast look fascinated even me. Wonder and admiration for the time took the place of dislike I could scarcely believe that there was not some atom of good in this man so fearless. And no face but one—no face, I think, in the world, but one—could have drawn my eyes from him. But that one face was beside him. I clutched Marie's arm and pointed to the bareheaded figure at Bezers' right hand.

It was Louis himself; our Louis de Pavannes. But he was changed indeed from the gay cavalier I remembered, and whom I had last seen riding down the street at Caylus, smiling back at us, and waving his adieux to his mistress! Beside the vidame he had the air of being slight, even short. The face which I had known so bright and winning, was now white and set. His fair, curling hair—scarce darker than Croisette's — hung dank, bedabbled with blood which flowed from a wound in his head. His sword was gone; his dress was torn and disordered and covered with dust. His lips moved. But he held up his head, he bore himself bravely with it all; so bravely, that I choked, and my heart seemed bursting as I looked at him standing there forlorn and now unarmed. I knew that Kit seeing him thus would gladly have died with him; and I thanked God she did not see him. Yet there was a quietness in his fortitude which made a great difference between his air and that of Bezers. He lacked, as became one looking unarmed on certain death, the sneer and smile of the giant beside him.

What was the vidame about to do? I shuddered as I asked myself. Not surrender him, not fling him bodily to the people? No, not that; I felt sure he would let no others share his vengeance, that his pride would not suffer that. And even while I wondered the doubt was solved. I saw Bezers raise his hand in a peculiar fashion. Simultaneously a cry rang sharply out above the tumult, and down in headlong charge towards the farther steps came the band of horsemen, who had got clear of the crowd on that side. They were but ten or twelve, but under his eye they charged, as if they had been 1,000. The rabble shrank from the collision, and fled aside. Quick as thought the riders swerved; and changing their course, galloped through the looser part of the throng, and in a trice drew rein side by side with us, a laugh and a jeer on their reckless lips.

It was neatly done; and while it was being done the vidame and his knot of men, with those who had been searching the building, hurried down the gallery towards us, their rear cleared for the moment by the troopers' feint. The dismounted men came bundling down the steps, their eyes aglow with the war-fire, and got horses as they could. Among them I lost sight of Louis, but perceived him presently, pale and bewildered, mounted behind a trooper. A man sprang up before each of us, too, greeting our appearance merely by a grunt of surprise. For it was no time to ask or answer. The mob was recovering itself, and each moment brought it reinforcements, while its fury was augmented by the trick we had played it, and the prospect of our escape.

We were under 40, all told; and some men were riding double. Bezer's eye glanced hastily over his array and lit on us three. He turned and gave some order to his lieutenant. The fellow spurred his horse, a splendid gray, as powerful as his master's, alongside of Croisette, threw his arm round the lad and dragged him dexterously on to his own crupper. I did not understand the action, but I saw Croisette settle himself behind Blaise Bure—for he it was—and supposed no harm was intended. The next moment we had surged forward and were swaying to and fro in the midst of the crowd.

Extreme Prostration

From Fevers

of every description, especially typhoid, is the doctor's fear and the patient's danger; medicine is of but little avail, sufficient nourishment to create new strength to carry the patient over the crisis is what is necessary, a persuading of the great machinery of the body to go on with its work is the end sought after; hence physicians recommend that greatest of concentrated food preparations, that creator of strength, maker of flesh tissue, and blood enricher, which, putting the vital organs in their normal condition, enables them to dispel disease. Dr. G. Curson Young of Phillipsburgh, N. J., says, "I have used Bovinine with great satisfaction. One case, an old lady of seventy years, convalescing from typhoid fever, but very slowly, gastric irritation complicated with extreme prostration gave but a faint hope of recovery. I gave her Bovinine, —a complete restoration to health followed."

CYCLING COMMENT.

Edward S. Randolph, of West Eighth street, has bought a Pierce wheel.

Captain Israel Jones, of the defunct Victor Wheelmen, has purchased a new Columbia.

Albert P. Simmonds, of Watchung avenue, is riding a new blue-rimmed Columbia wheel.

Miss Blimm, of Somerset street, is now riding a new wheel which she enjoys exceedingly.

Charles Butts and Garfield Pike went on a bicycle ride to Elizabeth and Rahway yesterday.

Robert Gentle, the chief consul of the New Jersey Division of the L.A.W, will act as referee at the Decoration Day meet of the Crescent Wheelmen.

It has been decided by the race committee of the Metropolitan Association of Cycling Clubs to reject the entries of professional riders for the Irvington-Milburn road race on May 30th.

A ten mile road race is being arranged between two of the fast colored cyclists of this city, John Scott and Peter Simmonds. It will be held on Park avenue about the last of this month.

Many wheelwomen have been troubled to get a bicycle boot that will comfortably fit both foot and ankle. Doane & Edsall are now selling an adjustable bicycle boot that does away with that difficulty.

The Niantic Wheelmen, of Jersey City, will hold a century run to New Brunswick and return on Sunday, June 7th. The run will be conducted by a committee consisting of Captain Hayes, First Lieutenant Bigalke and Second Lieutenant La Rue. A banner will be presented to the club having the largest number of survivors, and medals will be presented to all who finish.

The "Plainfield" wheel has made its appearance and is now on exhibition at the makers store on Park avenue. The Plainfield Cycle Company have endeavored to place a strictly high grade wheel on the market, and they have succeeded. The wheel is made in Plainfield by Plainfield people, and those who have seen it agree that it is one of the best on the market. There are several new and advantageous features about it, that makes it worthy of the careful attention of all interested in wheels. H. J. Martin is at the head of the company and he can be seen at all times.

This season has never been equalled among the cycle dealers of the country as the demand for wheels is something enormous. The F. L. C. Martin Cycle Company has been right in the heart of the rush. Among their latest purchasers of Crescents wheels are Miss May Hughes, Miss Julia Heenan, of South Plainfield, Harry H. Roeder, John Roman, Mrs. E. P. Thorn, L. W. Elberson, James Belgin, Harry W. Fraleigh and Miss Saunders. W. J. Dodd has bought a Crescent racer and W. J. Roome a Crescent tandem. A ladies' Cleveland Swell Special was purchased by Mrs. W. L. Saunders.

An expert repairer in the employ of one of the local cycling establishments states that there are many more punctures in this vicinity this year than ever before. The increase is more than can be accounted for by the greater number of wheels now in use. The tires have improved in quality, but the punctures are worse than ever. He accounts for this rapid growth in the number of punctures by the poor condition of the roads and the numerous small stones that are scattered about the roadway. The condition of the roads is the cause, he thinks, for so many accidents recently. The riders in trying to evade the sewer trenches or other rough places are often forced to go to either one side or the other of the road, and collisions are numerous in consequence.

Cycling is to play a prominent part among the Y. M. C. A. members this summer, and the cycling division promises to be one of the most enterprising of all the different departments. The membership of the division has greatly increased, while the memories of last year's enjoyable runs have made the old members anxious to open the season at once. The arranging of a schedule of runs was left at the annual meeting in the hands of a committee on runs, consisting of Charles B. Morse, chairman, Clarence Brouard, Curtis M. Thorpe and Captain Thomas A. Cuming. The committee met last evening and Physical Director C. W. Nichols was also present. After considerable discussion the following schedule was adopted:

Saturday afternoon, May 16, to Metuchen.
Thursday evening, May 21, to Summit; a league run, starting at 7 o'clock.
Monday evening, May 25, to Somerville.
Thursday evening, May 28, to Rahway.
Thursday evening, June 4, to Westfield; a league run, starting at 8 o'clock.
Saturday afternoon, June 6, to Springfield; a special business men's run.
Thursday evening, June 11, to New Brunswick.
Thursday evening, June 11, to Orange; a league run, starting at 7 o'clock.
Saturday afternoon, June 20, to New Providence, via Washingtonville.
Saturday afternoon and evening, June 27, to Boynton Beach; a picnic run.
Thursday evening, July 2, to Elizabeth.
Saturday, July 4, to Trenton; a century run.
Thursday evening, July 9, entertainment of the league.
Saturday afternoon, July 11, to Metuchen; a special business men's run.
Thursday evening, July 16, to Stelton, via New Market.
Thursday evening, July 23, to Rahway; a league run, starting at 7:30 o'clock.
Monday evening, July 27, to New Brunswick, via Bound Brook.
Thursday evening, July 30, to Westfield, via Locust Grove.
Saturday afternoon and evening, August 1, to Morristown.
Thursday evening, August 7, to New Brunswick; a league run, starting at 7:30 o'clock.

With the exception of the league runs, all the evening runs start at 7:30 o'clock, and the afternoon runs at 3 o'clock.

The American Wheelman, of New York, one of the leading cycling journals of the world, will publish a daily cycling paper beginning May 24th. This will be the first daily cycling paper published in the English language. It will be issued each morning, and will sell for one cent. Full telegraphic and cable reports will be received, and regular news letters will be published. Nothing more clearly shows how popular and great is the cycling industry than such a move as this. The paper will be six columns wide, four and eight pages.

VARIOUS SPORTS.

The business men's class in the Y. M. C. A. gymnasium still continues despite the warm weather. The members were so much pleased with their work during the winter and the general improvement in their health, that they have decided to continue the light exercises through the summer. The class met as usual last evening and was well attended. When Physical Director Nichols is unable to be present, Superintendent Harry M. Maxson will lead the class.

A Pretty Wedding.

A pretty wedding was celebrated at St. Mary's church by Rev. Father Murphy on Wednesday when Thomas O'Leary was united in marriage to Miss Elizabeth Hickey, both of this city. Charles O'Leary, of New York, was best man and Miss Johanna Hayes was bridemaid. The bride was neatly attired in a suit of cream-colored nun's veiling, trimmed with white satin and pearls. The bridemaid wore a steel-colored dress, trimmed with cut-steel and spangles. The bride carried a bouquet of white roses and the bridemaid a bouquet of pink roses. After the ceremony a reception was held at the home of Mrs. McCarthy on Lee place, a sister of the bride. The presents were valuable and numerous.

A Serious Charge.

Joseph McDermott, of Elizabeth, was arraigned before City Judge DeMeza on a serious charge this morning. He pleaded not guilty, and the judge, after hearing the testimony, reserved his decision until next Saturday morning.

UNITED STATES SUPT.

Family of Hon. William R. Smith Made Well by Paine's Celery Compound.

"To him who in the love of Nature
Holds communion with her visible forms,
She speaks a various language."

No one has a deeper insight into nature's ways than the superintendent of the extensive botanic gardens of the United States at Washington.

No one knows so well as he what precious opportunities come with the spring.

Supt. Smith, like most scientific persons, firmly believes that every one would be benefited by taking a spring remedy while the blood is readiest to be purified and invigorated.

Paine's celery compound is the only genuine spring remedy worthy of that name, in the opinion of Supt. Smith. He writes:

Washington, D. C., March 4, 1896.

Gentlemen—The female members of my household are more than delighted with Paine's celery compound. I learn from other friends that its popularity is steadily growing. It aids digestion, and in view of the prevalence of dyspepsia, it is one of the benefactions of the age.

Very Respectfully,
Wm R. Smith.
Supt. U. S. Botanic Garden.

Paine's celery compound is as far removed as the poles from the many trivial, unscientific preparations that call themselves spring remedies. It has earned the complete confidence of men and women the world over.

It is exclusively employed in families where nothing short of the best of everything pertaining to health will do.

It has lived up to the most sanguine expectations of physicians who naturally look for extraordinary results from the discovery of so eminent a physician as Prof. Edward E. Phelps, M. D., LL. D., of Dartmouth medical school.

That Paine's celery compound does cure positively and permanently all diseases arising from impure blood or decline in the vigor of the nerves is cheerfully attested by thousands of earnest men and women.

Weakness, depression, irritability, pain and languor tell that the nervous matter in the brain, nerves and spinal cord, is not getting sufficient nourishmen.

To quickly furnish a fresh and abundant supply of nutriment for every tissue of the body is the purpose for which Paine's celery compound was first prepared. This rapid production of fresh nervous energy and pure blood, was the aim of Prof. Edward E. Phelps' long study of the causes of nervous exhaustion.

The result of his life work was Paine's celery compound—this remarkable remedy that permanently cures diseases of the liver, kidneys and stomach. It is the greatest nerve regulator and blood purifier of this century.

MADE TOO MUCH NOISE.

A COUPLE ARRAIGNED IN CITY COURT FOR DISORDERLY CONDUCT.

There Were Three of Them in the Disturbance But One Escaped When the Officers Appeared—Sent to County Jail.

The denizens of Paradise Alley were rudely aroused from their evening's quiet last night by high words and quarrelling. The disturbers of the Sunday evening's peace and quietude were three colored individuals, two men and a woman. From their actions it was apparent that they were not firm believers in temperance and had indulged enough to feel ugly. The finally ensconced themselves on the front porch of John Parson's home, where the quarrelling continued at a liveller rate than ever. Mr. Parson, after listening to this impromptu serenade for a short time, came to the window and, in language more forcible than polite, invited the evening visitors to "move on." The latter, interrupted while trying to settle the question as to whether the new cars of the Street Railway Company were to be yellow or brown in color or some other question of great importance, were highly indignant and requested the householder to move at once to a warmer climate. Their language became still worse as they realized the insult they had received. Parson at last called to Special Policeman Dennis Carney to arrest the disturbers.

The colored visitors then vented their anger on the officer, informing him that he was too small to arrest them and that the police department, fire department, councilman and all could not arrest them. Carney took counsel from the remarks of the intruders and disappeared, only to return with patrolman Totten. The negroes were surprised and one of them, named Moon, made a transit of the yard and was eclipsed behind a neighboring house. John Scudder and Maria Pleasant accompanied the officers in a very meek manner to the rookery, where they spent the night.

When Patrolman Totten came before Maria Pleasant's cell this morning, she did not recognize her captor of last night.

"What are you in for?" asked the officer, and his prisoner went on to tell how that ——— Totten (she gave him a whole dictionary full of pleasing epithets) had arrested her last night.

When arraigned before City Judge DeMeza, the colored culprits pleaded not guilty. The evidence of the residents of Paradise Alley was too strong, however, and Scudder went to Elizabeth on a thirty days visit and Maria Pleasant accompanied him to stay for fifteen days.

DECISION IN FAVOR OF WIENBERGER.

Justice Newcorn Declares That He Conducts a Legitimate Business.

A decision was given by Justice Newcorn this morning in the qui tam proceedings of George Dean, prosecutor, against M. Wienberger, the West Front street clothier, the details of which have been published in The Daily Press. Justice Newcorn rendered the following decision:

"I am compelled to hold that a man signing a lease for eleven months would not come under the classification of engaging in a temporary business, as contemplated by the enactment of said act, and hold that in view of the said lease and the corrobarative evidence of the witnesses for the defense, bearing on its execution, the defendant does not come under the head of being an itinerant vender and therefore has not forfeited the penalty for which this action has been brought, and I hereby render judgment to that effect."

Lawyer Angleman represented the defense and Lawyer Runyon the plaintiff.

Still Free From Debt.

Before delivering his sermon to his people yesterday morning, the pastor, Rev. Cornelius Schenck, in a few well-chosen remarks told of the joy and thankfulness all should feel in their hearts over the fact that Trinity Reformed church had met all its obligations and again started the calendar year free of debt. He asked all his people to continue to give as God had blessed them and thus strive to keep the church out of debt the coming year and be blessed, both spiritually and materially.

Mr. D. P. Davis, a prominent liveryman and merchant of Goshen, Va., has this to say on the subject of rheumatism: "I take pleasure in recommending Chamberlain's Pain Balm for rheumatism, as I know from personal experience that it will do all that is claimed for it. A year ago this spring my brother was laid up in bed with inflammatory rheumatism and suffered intensely. The first application of Chamberlain's Pain Balm eased the pain and the use of one bottle completely cured him. For sale by T. S. Armstrong, druggist.

A MAY DAY PARTY.

Delightful Children's Party Given in Evona Saturday Afternoon.

A "May Queen Party" was the name of a most novel event which was held on Saturday at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Hill, 1312 West Front street. The party was given in honor of Francis Hill and was arranged by Miss Nellie Arthur, of New street. About 10 o'clock in the morning the little folks met at the home of their leader, Miss Nellie Arthur, formed into line and to the beat of the drum, which was in charge of Harry Blimm, marched through Front street to the home of Francis Hill. En route the young folks sang "Yankee Doodle," "Keep It Up" and "Marching Through Georgia." Each one wore a wreath for a hat, made of red, white and blue bunting, and they attracted considerable attention while marching. When they reached their destination everyone was heartily received and made to feel at home by their young host.

An excellent programme was then rendered by the little ones which was as follows: Vocal duet, "Ten Little Negroes," Mamie and Bessie Richards; recitation, "Mamma Bought a Baby," Mamie Richards; recitation, "Thirty and Nine," Nellie Richards; recitation, Freda Buchanan; recitation, Somebody's Mother," Violet Haliock; vocal solo, "The Dandelions," Clara Hallock.

Refreshments were then served, during which time two Italians, who happened along with a concertina, furnished some pleasing selections. Mr. Britton, of Clinton avenue, very kindly sent the young people a supply of soda, ginger ale and other refreshments.

The afternoon was devoted chiefly to the playing of games, after the crowning of the king and queen. This was a pleasing sight. A large pole was erected in the centre of the lawn from which hung numerous colored ribbons. The queen, Nellie Arthur, and king, Ernest Bucksman, stood near the pole, while the ribbons were wound about it. During this process, "Columbia, the Gem of the Ocean" and "Three Cheers for the Red, White and Blue" were sung by the young folks. At the conclusion of the winding of the May-pole, handsome wreaths were placed on the heads of the queen and king. After a reasonable time was passed in playing games a walk to the woods was taken. The only thing to mar the pleasure of the day happened at this time, when Jessie Van Nest fell in the brook. After she had received a severe drenching she was bravely rescued by Anna Jessup, and no damage resulted except a wet dress.

The jolly party broke up about 5:30 and all returned home heartily satisfied that they had passed a most delightful day. Among those present were: Lulu Bucksman, Maggie Townley, Charles Townley, Ella Wheeler, Anna Jessup, Lizzie Guinee, May Arthur, Nellie Arthur, Freda Bucksman, Bertie Glaentzer, Edith Glaentzer, William Mehl, Robert Morgan, Harry Blimm, Harry Hook, Winnie Chase, Bessie, Nellie and Mamie Richards, Violet and Clara Hallock, Lillie, Lulu and Mazie McCarty, Lucy Caspar, Ethel and Alice Day, Hannah Guttman, Ella Frandlin, Laura Fairfax, Sophia Saums, Francis and Georgia Hill, Jessie and Ethel VanNest.

BENJAMIN URNER DEAD.

Founder of the Price Current Died at Fanwood.

Benjamin Urner, sixty-four years old, died while asleep at his home, at Fanwood, at an early hour yesterday morning.

Mr. Urner was born in Cincinnati in 1832, and early in life moved to Red Bank where he married Miss Abbie Spring Arnold. He embarked in business in New York and was elected president of the Mercantile Exchange, after which he began publishing the Price Current, with his son, Frank G., as secretary. Last fall a stock company was formed and incorporated as the Urner-Barry Publishing Company, when the name of the paper was changed to The Produce Review. Mr. Urner was elected president.

A few years ago Mr. Urner was elected by Republicans to Elizabeth Council and was an active manager of the Elizabeth Hospital. He moved to Fanwood five or six years ago and took an interest in local politics there. For the last two years he suffered with heart trouble. It is thought that he died from fatty degeneration of the heart. He leaves a widow, four sons and one daughter.

—A meeting of the Plainfield Branch of the Christian Alliance will be held at 7:45 o'clock tomorow evening in the W. C. T. U. rooms on Watchung avenue, for prayer, praise and testimony.

TALK BY A MISSIONARY.

REV. JOHN CANTINE TELLS OF HIS WORK IN A FOREIGN CLIME.

Delivered Last Night at the Anniversary of the Ladies Christian Work Society in The Trinity Reformed Church.

There was an unexpectedly good attendance at the fifteenth anniversary of the Ladies' Christian Work Society held at the Trinity Reformed church last evening.

It was a warm night but the reports were not long and the speaker of the evening, Rev. John Cantine, was an entertaining talker.

The service opened with the usual devotional exercises, led by the pastor, Rev. Cornelius Schenck.

Rev. Mr. Schenck next read the annual report of the treasurer, Mrs. Henry VanName which showed that $573.99 had been received during the year of which all but $53.11 had been paid out, $102.36 of which had been used for missionary purposes.

He then read the secretary's report which told something of the work that has been done. The society has fifty-nine members. Missionary boxes have been sent to a Dakota and a South Carolina school. Aid was also sent to several missions in India and also to the Muhlenberg hospital. The expenses of renovating the lecture room were $250 and the society raised that sum by suppers and entertainments during the winter. Mrs. Augusta Marshall is secretary.

Rev. John Cantine, a missionary to Arabia who is home on a furlough, made the address of the evening. Rev. Mr. Cantine is one of the most entertaining speakers in the missionary field and held the attention of his hearers despite the high temperature. He told something of the work in Arabia and said that, at present, it was impossible to reach the women as they were constantly kept in seclusion and when they did appear, they were heavily veiled and it was impossible to converse with them. The men cannot be reached by ordinary missionary methods or by establishing schools and Sunday-schools. Portions of the Bible, translated into Arabic, are sold and the missionaries try to testify faithfully to their religion. The Arabs consider learning and bravery and not wealth as regulating a man's position in society and therefore must be impressed by the Christians as regards their faithfulness to Christianity despite persecution. Rev. Mr. Cantine told many experiences of his own and of fellow missionaries and described and illustrated some of the native customs and manner of dress.

Entertained at Euchre.

A very pleasant progressive euchre party was given Saturday evening by Mr. and Mrs. Robert Gorton, at their home on West Fifth street, in honor of the Misses Mary Cottrell and Sophia Reynolds, of Alfred, N. Y. The following were present: Mr. and Mrs. Jackson, of Dunellen; Mr. and Mrs. G. B. Titsworth, Mr. and Mrs. A. L. Titsworth, the Misses Maxson, Clawson, Randolph, Mosher, Bently, Smith, Force, Titsworth; Messrs. Carter, Maxson, Clawson, Hubbard, Lon Titsworth, Nate Titsworth, Will Titsworth, Randolph and Smith. The lady's prize was won by Miss Reynolds and the gentleman's by Mr. Carter. After the playing had ceased dainty refreshments were served. Mr. and Mrs. Gorton will leave to take up their residence in Boston about June 1st.

State Officers of a Missionary Society.

At the annual meeting of the Woman's Baptist Missionary Society of the State of New Jersey, held at Paterson May 7th, the following officers were re-elected for the coming year: President, Mrs. Alonzo Pettit, Elizabeth; recording secretary, Mrs. J. J. Jones, East Orange; corresponding secretary and treasurer, Mrs. B. J. Shreve, Plainfield. The vice-presidents are the seven associational secretaries of the State. Mrs. M. H. Pike, of Rockview avenue, was re-elected a member of the executive committee.

—Tier's popular lake house was thrown open to the public on Saturday and was very liberally patronized by the lovers of pure ice-cream and water ices.

First, get a wife; second, be patient. You may have great trials and perplexities in your business, but do not therefore, carry to your home a cloud or cloudy brow. Your wife may have trials, which, though of less magnitude, may be hard for her to bear. A kind word, a tender look, will do wonders in chasing from her brow all clouds of gloom. THE HIGH SCHOOL GAMES

ATHLETIC EVENTS ON THE CRESCENT OVAL ON SATURDAY.

The Crowd Was Not Large, But the Contests Were All Exciting—Several Prizes Won by Plainfield Boys—Result in Detail

It is remarkable, but nevertheless true, that Plainfield has not given its hearty support to an athletic or cycling meet. And that fact was very evident at the athletic games of the Plainfield High School Athletic Association on the Crescent Oval last Saturday afternoon. The day was perfect, the contests were exciting and yet even the grand stand was not half filled. Those that did go, however, saw a very successful field day. Besides the local crowd, which was an enthusiastic one, there were delegations from the Elizabeth, Newark, Montclair and Hoboken schools, who kept up the excitement with their rousing school yells.

The games were a great success and Plainfield secured just enough victories so as to yet remain hospitable to her visitors and please the audience as well. New Jersey's best athletes were entered, and Plainfield, and the borough also, can claim several of them as residents.

The first event was the one hundred yard dash and only one Plainfield boy, G. P. Smith, was entered. The event was run over owing to a misunderstanding at the start and Plainfield did not get a place. Shippen, the Stevens' crack, had the shot all his own way, but Smith took second with 37 feet 5 inches, two inches higher than the High School record.

The bicycle races appeared to be a cinch for the visitors as the High School team did not seem to be in it. Lindley Hillman managed to take third in the quarter mile race, and second in the one mile race.

"Oh!" one of the fair visitors on the grand stand was heard to exclaim, "I wish Will McCutchen was there" and in the two mile bicycle race, this gentle admirer of "Will" had her wish granted. The two mile race was open to all school boys in the State and eight contestants lined up at the start, including Lindley, Hillman, of the High School, and W. M. McCutchen and Raymond A. McGee, of Leal's school. Two of the riders, Coaney and Schaeffler, fell on the first turn, but the rest loafed so that they managed to catch the bunch. On the third lap, a very disgraceful thing occured. One of the out of town riders who was riding beside McGee, let down his own handle bar and seized McGee's, attempting to throw him. McGee's grip was too strong and the scheme did not work. As the referee did not see the incident, the man was not ruled off the track. It was a general loaf until the last lap when Allen, of Montclair, attempted to leave the bunch. McCutchen was after him in an instant and with one of his famous spurts shot to the front on the far turn, winning easily. McGee followed him closely at the turn but the speedy rider of the Crescent Wheelmen soon left his opponent behind. McGee's spurt was strong enough, however, to land him a good second easily passing Allen and Holly who fought it out on the home stretch for third place. This was McGee's first race on the track and he promises to become a hard man to leave.

The pole vault caused quite a little enthusiasm when Moore, of Pingry's, pushed Smith very hard for first place Smith finally won by clearing 9 feet, 3 inches, a new High School record.

In the 440 yard run, Charles Dupee, of Washington Park, completely outclassed his opponents. He ran in excellent form, and although his opponents tried to run him out at the start, he ran away from the rest at the 220 yard pole and finished easily. He was loudly applauded.

Carroll Runyon was a surprise in throwing the hammer, winning second with ease and pushing Reall, of Montclair, for first.

George P. Smith did the best work for the High School, and showed the title of all-round champion, which he won together with the Daily Press medal last fall, was a deserved one. He contested in five events, and secured one first, two seconds and a third.

The summaries of the events were as follows:

100 yard dash. Won by C. A. Sulzer, Pingry's School; P. Jones, Newark Academy, second; C. P. Underwood, Pingry's School, third. Time, 10 3-5 seconds.

Putting the shot, 12 pounds. Won by R. Shippen, Stevens Prep; G. P. Smith, Plainfield High School, second; F. A. Reall, Montclair High School, third. Distance, 38 ft., 6 inches.

One-quarter mile bicycle race. Won by S. McClave, Stevens Prep; A. R. Allen, Montclair High School, second; Lindley Hillman, Plainfield High School, third. Time, 36 3-5 seconds.

Pole vault. Won by Geo. P. Smith, Plainfield High School; P. A. Moore, Pingry's School, second; Raymond Carroll, Plainfield High School, and W. Conlon, Newark Academy, tied for third. Height, 9 feet, 3 inches.

DISCOURAGING TROLLEY TALK.

No Immediate Hope for an Electric Road to Elizabeth.

Chandler W. Riker, representing the Plainfield Electric Railway, has addressed a letter to President Egenolf, of the Elizabeth Board of Trade. It states the purpose of the company to build a road to Plainfield from Elizabeth, starting from North Broad street, and believes it for the interest of the public that the route should be over Westfield avenue, as far as Cranford, when it would cross under the Central Railroad tracks to South avenue, and subsequently back again to North avenue, entering Plainfield on that avenue.

It was proposed to lay the tracks in the centre of the avenue, and in place of the telford pavement thus destroyed the company, at its own expense, would pave with telford the sides of the avenue between the tracks and curbs.

This communication led to a lengthy discussion in the Board of Trade, and, excepting Silas D. Drake, all present were opposed permitting the use of the county road. President Egenolf, P. J. Ryan, A. S. Campbell, Dr. Adelberg, A. D. Mulford and others gave expression of their opinions. It was intimated that the Plainfield company was owned by the Consolidated Traction Company and there was no reason why the connections could not be made on West Jersey street so that Elizabeth could have the advantage of traffic. If the road connected on North Broad street it would be only to the advantage of Newark. But if it came in on West Jersey street Elizabeth might get some advantage of the connection with Plainfield.

A resolution was adopted that it was the sense of the Board of Trade that county roads should not be used for trolley roads.

Splinter in His Foot.

The splinters that have always been a source of annoyance at the railroad station to passengers and others was the cause of an accident to Mail carrier Frisby on Saturday afternoon. He was about to catch the mail bag from the 2:30 New York mail train when one of those long yellow pine splinters entered the bottom of his foot nearly an inch. Baggagemaster Garretson and the conductor, Phil Backer, assisted in removing Frisby's shoe and extracting the huge splinter. Frisby then bound a piece of salt pork on the wound and pluckily went to his work. The Press hopes the day is not far distant when a substantial stone platform will replace the present board affair.

Incipient Fire Quickly Put Out.

About 6 o'clock Saturday evening Baggagemaster J. F. Garretson sent word to fire headquarters that there was a fire in Ivins & Co's lumber yard. The chemical engine and No. 2 hose wagon responded quickly, when it was learned that the end of a railroad tie on the trestle running into the lumber yard was on fire. L. M. Dunavan and Chas. Johnson secured an extinguisher and soon put the fire out. There was no damage.

Attacked by a Dog.

While Mail-carrier Patrick Revelle was delivering mail at a Belvidere avenue residence Saturday he was attacked by a large dog. Mr. Revelle was mounted on his wheel at the time and succeeded in getting away from the dog. His new uniform was torn in several places by the dog's teeth, which, however, did not reach the flesh.

NOT DEMOCRATIC ENOUGH

REV. C. E. HERRING'S REASONS FOR SALVATION ARMY SPLIT.

Commander Booth Was Too Autocratic for a Democratic Community—He Should Have Been More Flexible With Rulings.

Rev. Charles E. Herring delivered a most powerful prelude to his sermon at the First Presbyterian church last evening. He discussed the present situation of the Salvation Army in a way that was truly helpful. What he said follows:

"There is something very sad in the recent rupture which has taken place in the Salvation Army. It is unfortunate that such a break should occur in such a unique organization. The Old General is certainly a genius and the schemes he has propounded for individual and social salvation have certainly been wonderful. His latest scheme for the establishment of peasant settlements in India, gives evidence that he is not even now destitute of fertile plans for the amelioration of the condition of the destitute.

"Such an institution as the Salvation Army had and has a place. It has accomplished great good in the world. It has seemed to realize the words of the Master when he said 'Go out into the byways and hedges and compel them to come in.' No place was too low for the army to find recruits.

"There is still room for such an institution, yes, for two, if need be, to reach the 23 per cent of the artisan class who never enter a place of worship.

"It would have been pleasant to think of the persistance of the unity of the organization. Mrs. Booth says 'Our principles are identical with those we have held and taught heretofore.' And so we wish it had remained one. We are troubled with division. Reformation was a loss as well as a gain.

"There is another organization which is strong in its unity and that is the Christian Endeavor society. We trust that nothing in the Presbyterian church may come in to mar that unity.

"What has injured the cause of the Salvation Army in America, is its autocracy in a democratic community. It is not democratic enough to satisfy the American mind and flexibility of organization should have been recognized as a necessity. The Commander-in-Chief has been termed a despot, though a benevolent despot. In no other land as in our own must such a system be modified if it is going to endure. The practical sagacity of the Roman Pontiff recognized this and we have as a result an American Catholic church.

"It is not necessary to reangelicize the Army. Much is due the Commander and his estimable wife for the recognition of the army in this country. The original impression of the army before their coming was not very favorable, but after great trial, indefatigable work and tact, the army came to be recognized as a great spiritual force.

"America will be patriotic. American sentiment is far too powerful a force for even a great religious movement to defy.

"We cannot but commend the Christian spi of letting the matter drop, as there are now two organizations in the field. We sincerely hope that nothing of a similar kind will interrupt the labor of the army in other fields, though we candidly think that the right of things in this country rests with the son and not with the father and so the American people think, but we wish God speed to both forces."

A Saturday Marriage.

The marriage of Miss Nellie Pierson, of East Front street, and James C. Hansen, of 133 Liberty street, was performed Saturday afternoon at 5:30 by Rev. Cornelius Schenck at his home on West Front street. The bridemaid was Miss Catherine Benson, a niece of the groom, and the best man was Peter B. Hansen, brother of the groom. The bride wore a gown of pearl gray, trimmed with lace, and the bridemaid was gowned in blue silk, trimmed with lace. The wedding was a quiet one, and immediately after the ceremony Mr. and Mrs. Hansen went to their new home, 202 West Second street, where they will reside. A reception will be given at some future time. The happy couple received many handsome present from their friends.

For every quarter in a man's pocket there are a dozen uses; and to use each one in such a way as to derive the greatest benefit is a question every one must solve for himself. We believe, however, that no better use could be made of one of these quarters than to exchange it for a bottle of Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhœa Remedy, a medicine that every family should be provided with. PLATT ON M'KINLEY

He Tells Why He Is Opposed to the Ohio Candidate.

NOT THE MAN FOR THE PRESIDENCY

Tariff Alone Not the Issue—McKinley's Position on the Money Question Too Doubtful—Any of the Other Aspirants Much More Fitted.

New York, May 11. — Ex-Senator Platt continues to maintain that the nominee of the republican national convention will not be William McKinley, and last night he made a statement of the grounds of his opposition, and the reasons why, in his judgment, another candidate would win. "The convention," said Mr. Platt, "will contain 918 delegates. It will require 460 to nominate. According to the figures printed in the Tribune yesterday morning, which are not in all respects in accord with the facts as I understand them, the delegates instructed for McKinley number 310. This is 150 votes short of a nomination, and only eighty-eight delegates remain to be chosen. When the time comes to vote in the convention Mr. McKinley's support will be little in excess of the number who consider themselves bound by an instruction.

Why He Opposes McKinley.

"My opposition to Gov. McKinley proceeds almost entirely from my belief that he will get the republican party into turmoil and trouble. He is not a well balanced man of affairs, as Gov. Morton is. He is not a great man, as Speaker Reed is. He is not a trained and educated public man, as Senator Allison is. He is not an astute political leader, as Senator Quay is. He is simply a clever gentleman, much too amiable and much too impressionable to be safely intrusted with a great executive office, whose quest for honor happens to have the accidental advantage of the association of his name with the last republican protective tariff. Mr. McKinley, as I think the Tribune recently remarked, had really less to do with that industrial law than had either Gov. Dingley or Senator Aldridge, but simply because of his position as chairman of the ways and means committee of the fifty-first congress it has borne his name, and there seems to be a good many people who labor under the impression that he wrote it line for line, and that the theory that it embodies originated in his colossal intellect. I would not deny him one jot or tittle of the credit that really belongs to him, but it was most unhandsome to defraud others of the credit that belongs to them.

Two Great Questions To Settle.

"When national conventions get down soberly to the work of choosing a candidate, they are not apt to overlook the fact that in the four months' campaign that is to follow, his personality and his record will be subjected to the searchlight of hostile criticism. Nor do they forget that there are two qualities—resolution and conservatism—which the people always require in their chief magistrate. Now, if we republicans are succesful in the next campaign, as seems probable to-day, there are two great questions, in which are involved the earning capacity of every citizen, that we shall have to settle. If we are to settle them without unsettling ourselves we must settle them for at least a generation to come, and to be so settled they must be settled wisely, temperately, conservativel. They are the tariff question and the currency question.

Business Will Not Instantly Resume.

"The American people have shown that they don't want a radical tariff in any direction. What they do want is a protective tariff, so devised as to make up by taxes on foreign articles that compete with our own for the difference between the price of labor here and abroad. Mr. McKinley represents the most radical and extreme view of protection. We must not only draw a bill that can be put through a republican congress, but we must draw one that will not be open to serious criticism as class legislation. I foresee the greatest dangers in the result of extreme tariff legislation. In the first place, long before the bill has become a law the country will be flooded with foreign goods which must be sold and consumed before domestic producers will feel the effects of the new law. Business will not revive on the instant that a republican president is elected, and during all the period when the new bill is under discussion and until the immense flood of foreign goods has disappeared into consumption, we shall have to defend our measure. It should be therefore a safe, healthy and rational bill.

McKinley Wrong on Money Question.

"Fully as important as the tariff question—yes, more so, is that measure which must be devised to render our currency system intelligible, safe and elastic. If Gov. McKinley has any real convictions on the subject of the currency they are not revealed in his votes or in his speeches. He voted once for the free and unlimited coinage of silver. He voted to override the veto by President Hayes of the Bland bill, and at different times he has voted in direct conflict with these votes. He has described himself as a 'bimetallist,' as in favor of the free coinage of both metals. His Ohio platform proposes another experiment in silver coinage, such as the Bland-Allison act, or the Sherman law, with the parity between the metals enforced by legislation. This, in my opinion, should and will remove Mr. McKinley from the list of presidential possibilities by the time the republican convention meets. The people of this country have had enough of the attempt to force fifty cents worth of silver into circulation as a dollar."

MUST KEEP THE PEACE.

Rudyard Kipling Has His Brother-in-Law Placed Under Bonds.

Brattleboro, Vt., May 11.—Beatty Balestier has given $300 bonds to keep the peace upon complaint of his brother-in-law, Rudyard Kipling. It is alleged that Beatty's escapes have caused Mr. and Mrs. Kipling much trouble. Beatty carrys on a small farm a short distance from this town. Kipling made brotherly advances toward him and offered to straighten out his affairs, which had become somewhat tangled it is said, if he would leave his path of roses and thistles. To Kipling's entreaties Balestier turned a deaf ear and was sadly ruffled in temper. Open enmity resulted and there was an open declaration of hate on the part of Balestier. A short time ago Kipling was coming to town from his retreat on Putney Hill. Balestier had business on the same road, and a result of the meeting was the opening of hostilities. It is intimated by the prosecution that Balestier threatened to take Kipling's life.

TWO BRIDGES BURNED.

Their Destruction, Near Millville, Mass., Inflicts a Loss of $50,000.

Woonsocket, R. I., May 11.—Two adjoining bridges across the Blackstone river about one mile south of Millville, Mass., on the main line of the New England & Worcester division of the New York, New Haven & Hartford railroad were burned yesterday. The structures were each about 120 feet long and cost about $16,000. A steel bridge across the highway on the New England road was saved by the Blackstone fire engines. On the New Haven road passengers were transferred by wagons, but temporary bridges will be ready this afternoon. The New England bridge will not be ready for several days. Trains on that road ran via East Thompson, Pascoag and Woonsocket. On the New England road a Milleville citizen, with timely forethought, took a signal light off a switch and with it stopped an approaching freight. The origin of the fires is unknown. The loss to the railroads will be nearly $50,000.

BUTCHERED BY CANNIBALS.

Wholesale Massacres on the Islands of Manning Straits and the Solomons.

San Francisco, May 11.—The steamer Honowai brings news of the wholesale massacre of traders and missionaries by natives of the islands of Manning straits and the Solomons. Malayti savages butchered a whole boat's crew of men from the brig Rio Loge at Paoiana, two French and one American trader being among the slaughtered. The mission on the island had been attacked, and the missionaries escaped with difficulty, going back to Sydney by the first ship. The murders on the islands of Manning straits were followed by acts of cannibalism. A small trading schooner owned by a French trader was attacked, and the owner of the vessel and his American assistant and eight peaceful natives were lured ashore and beaten to death, and the trading station was sacked. The English missionaries are also missing, and it is supposed they were also murdered. The mission on Tounan island has been abandoned as the result of the atrocities of the natives.

DALY'S JAW BROKEN.

Kid McCoy Arrested for Causing the Injury During a Prize Fight Last Week.

New York, May 11.—Charles, commonly called "Kid" McCoy, the pugilist, was committed by Magistrate Cornell in the Yorkville court yesterday in $500 bail for violation of a section of the penal code relating to prize fighting. McCoy fought Jim Daly of Buffalo at the rooms of the New Manhattan Athletic club on last Thursday night. He hit Daly a terrific knockout blow. On Saturday Inspector Brooks heard that Daly was lying in Roosevelt hospital seriously ill with a broken jaw, the effect of McCoy's blow, and McCoy was arrested. The prisoner will be granted another hearing to-day.

Annie Anderson Was a Grass Widow.

Trenton, May 11.—Annie Anderson, the servant girl who was shot by Joseph Graham Saturday, and who afterwards killed himself, was a grass widow when she became acquainted with her slayer, and has a child living in East Orange. Of Graham, it is told that he was married twice. His first wife is dead. The second one is living, but her wherabouts no one seems to know. C. I. Baumbartner, in the dining room of whose home the tragedy occured will, because of nervousness of members of his family, have the rooms stripped and refurnished, in order to remove every trace of the awful occurence.

New Railroad Proposed.

Wiscasset, Me., May 11.—A syndicate has made a proposition to build and equip a narrow guage railroad from tidewater at Booth Bay harbor to Wiscasset. The road is to be completed for travel Nov. 1 next. As surveyed, the road is about fifteen miles long and passes through the towns of Booth Bay Harbor, Boothbay and Edgecomb to Wiscasset.

The New Shah of Persia.

London, May 11.—The Daily News today publishes a dispatch from Tabriz saying that the new shah, Muzafar-ed-Din, is making preparations to start from that city for Teheran, the capital, in two weeks. He will be accompanied by the British and Russian consuls, 8,000 Persian infantry and 3,000 cavalry.

RACE FOR PRESIDENT

Gen. Grosvenor Says McKinley Has Won the Fight.

ALL OVER NOW BUT THE SHOUTING

Mr. Aldrich, However, Says the Reed Supporters Are Still Hopeful, If Not Confinent—Both Sides Give Figures.

Washington, May 11.—Gen. Grosvenor, in his weekly bulletin relating to the republican presidential nomination, to-day insists that it is all over but the shouting. "I do not deem it vitally important," he says, "to issue this bulletin. Everybody who has knowledge enough to be significant and candor enough to be manly knows that this contest is over and that no earthly power can prevent the nomination of McKinley on the first ballot. I still insist upon placing in my table the men who have been elected beyond all doubt, and who are either instructed, pledged or known to be for McKinley. If I should doubt the integrity of men who have accepted elections as national delegates with instructions attached to their elections, the public would infer either, first, that I had knowledge that there were scoundrels elected as delegates, or, second, that long contact with vicious men in politics had polluted my mind to such an extent that I believed other men were dishonest.

The People Displaying Unusual Interest.

"In this connection it may be stated that there is great interest being taken by the masses of the republican party of the country in the nomination of president this year, more so than has ever been taken by the people since I have known anything about politics, and the power of public opinion that has crushed combinations, humiliated bosses and marched in triumph over the great body of the states is abundantly capable of realizing the fruition of the victories it has won."

Gen. Grosvenor's Figures.

Gen. Grosvenor's table of votes by states and territories aggregates 548, in addition to which he asserts that at least 20 votes east of the Alleghanies are not enumerated by him. Included within his table are 60 contested seats, some of which he says will be surrendered to the McKinley delegates without further contest, but allowing that all should be decided against McKinley, Gen. Grosvenor figures out for him 488 uncontested, instructed and pledged votes on the first ballot. Of the 72 delegates to be elected he counts upon 50, which, added to the 488, make 538 beyond all controversy. "Thus it will be seen," he says, "that allowing the politicians who are superior to us in the management of all these affairs to have their own way upon everyone of these contests and unseat everyone of the McKinley delegates, still, then, McKinley will have a sweeping majority."

TARIFF NOT THE ISSUE.

Reed Men Still Hopeful, if Not Confident, Says Aldrich.

Washington, May 11.—Congressman Aldrich made last night the following statement: "The friends of Speaker Reed, fully conscious of the gains made by Gov. McKinley in the pending national contest during the past week, but with full information concerning the position and standing of the delegates thus far elected are yet hopeful, if not confident, of the ultimate success of their candidate before the convention. Up to date there have been elected 832 out of a total of 918 delegates, of which number it is reasonable to say that Gov. McKinley has, excluding the contested cases, 367 votes. Concerning the latter we do not pretend to judge the action of the convention. The number of delegates yet to be elected is eighty-six. Should he succeed in capturing them all he will still fall short of the necessary majority, and must then reply upon the contested cases to give him the nomination.

Tariff Not the Sole Issue.

"All republicans favor protection, but it is quite evident that the tariff will not be the sole issue of the campaign, for a new and important element now commands public attention—the money question. The straddling platform will never do, nor can any candidate who was ever on it gain the full confidence of the people. It is for this reason and because we believe sentiment is undergoing a rapid and radical change in that particular that we are convinced the candid, sober judgment of the delegates, after the deliberation which will be had betwen now and the 16th of June, will nominate Mr. Reed, because he best represents the great business interests of the financial world and the American people."

GERMANS INDIGNANT

England's Attitude Concerning the Transvaal Affair Excites Them.

CHAMBERLAIN'S SPEECH A SURPRISE

Many People Thrown Out of Work for Participating in May Day Demonstrations—Lieut. von Versen Decorated for Bravery.

Berlin, May 10.—The temper which the dominant party in England displayed in the British house of commons on Friday last has excited intense indignation throughout Germany. The debate in the English parliament on the Transvaal situation was awaited here with probably as keen interest as was popularly manifested in England, and the tone of the advices received here from London created a feeling of expectation that Mr. Chamberlain, the British secretary of state for the colonial department, would freely and fully admit the guilt of Cecil Rhodes and announce the decision of the government to treat him and his accomplices as criminals. This having been the general feeling German officials and the press and the public as well were astounded upon reading the precis or the speech delivered by Mr. Chamberlain which was telegraphed here from London where the colonial secretary minimized the outrage upon international law which had been committed by Rhodes, and suggested that the English government had found reasons justifying their defending Rhodes, Sir Hercules Robinson, governor of the Cape Colony, and the others who were direct or indirect accomplices in the attack made upon the Transvaal.

German Press Comment.

The National Zeitung, in an article published on Friday, contended that unless Mr. Chamberlain announced prompt and vigorous action on the part of the British government against Rhodes and his aiders and abettors England would lose prestige in the eyes of the world and Chamberlain would show himself in the light of an accomplice. The National Zeitung's remarks, combined with the tenor of Mr. Chamberlain's speech, have revived reports that Chamberlain had guilty knowledge of Rhodes' designs, which he does not dare to disclose. The Vossische Zeitung ridicules Mr. Chamberlain's professions of confidence in Sir Hercules Robinson and scoffs at the latter's pretended ignorance of Jameson's intended raid. The paper then goes on to praise the Transvaal government for its foresight in demanding explanations from England of the gathering of British troops at Mafeking, and declares that full explanations must be made. Most of the German newspapers quote with approving comments from a communication from Johannesburg which has been issued by the Berlin All-Deutsche verbund, the pith of which is the statement that the Germans in the Transvaal are very bitter against the English and are joining the Boers.

Result of May Day Demonstrations.

The observance of May day by the workingmen has resulted in a number of troubles between the employes and the employers. Fifteen metal working establishments in Berlin have locked out their men for not working on that day, and the men have since declared a general strike of metal workers unless they are granted a nine hour working day and an increase of 25 per cent. in their wages. Three thousand instrument makers have gone out on strike and 3,000 other workers at that trade have remained at work in order to support the strikers. The Hamburg cigar exporting firms have discharged all of their employes who did not work on the 1st inst., and labor disputes of this character are general throughout the whole country.

Decorated for Bravery.

Lieut. von Versen of the Prussian hussars, whose mother was formerly Miss Clements of St. Louis, has been decorated by the emperor with his own hands with the Order of the Crown for bravery in rescuing a number of his comrades from drowing upon the occasion of an accident on a pontoon bridge near Potsdam. The wife of Gen. McCook, the United States commissioner to attend the coronation of the czar at Moscow, will not proceed to that city with her husband, but will remain in Dresden and await her husband's return. Gen. McCook and his party started from Berlin on their way to Moscow on Friday.

Selecting a New Ambassador.

A French minister has come from Paris to consult with the foreign office as to the selection of a successor to M. Herbette, the French ambassador to Germany, who has now been definitely recalled. The candidates for the post include M. Billot, now French ambassador to Italy; Count Lefebvre de Bohains, French ambassador to the vatican, and M. Poubelle, prefect of the Seine. M. Billot would be persona grata here, but no matter who might be selected any change from M. Herbette would please the emperor, who detests him.

Art Exhibition.

After the procession of 1,200 students of the Academy of Arts grouped on cars, and 300 others on horseback, reached the Industrial exhibition grounds Saturday the exhibition fetes opened with a "polonaise," which resembled a dream of the middle ages. The procession of students in bright costumes wended its way between the red brick gabled buildings and across the squares of "Old Berlin," presenting an extremely imposing spectacle. Dancing followed and there was also a performance in the quaint ancient theatre. Only 15,000 persons visited the exhibition yesterday despite the perfect weather, but an attendance of 50,000 daily is needed to pay expenses. The Statist estimates that daily average attendance when the preparations are finally completed, including the provincial and foreign visitors, will not exceed 22,000.

ALL MERE RUMORS.

Great Secrecy in Havana Regarding the Cases of American Prisoners.

Washington, May 11.—A dispatch from Havana to-day says: "The report reaches here from the United States that Capt.-Gen. Weyler has notified Secretary of State Olney that the Americans captured on the schooner Competitor will be executed in accordance with the sentence of the court martial which tried them, despite the protest of Secretary Olney. It is not known here that the captain-general has done anything of the kind. The only thing that he has said about the case is that Consul-General Williams presented a claim that the Americans should be tried by a civil tribunal, as they were not bearing arms when captured. It is believed that the matter will be decided at a cabinet meeting to be held in Madrid. The British consul has presented a claim in favor of Kildea, the Englishman, who was captured on the Competitor. Great secrecy has been observed regarding the proceedings in the case, and the fact that the men were sentenced to death has not been made generally public here. All that is said is mere talk.

DEFIES THE UNITED STATES.

Weyler Will Treat with Contempt the Competitor Protest.

Havana, May 11.—It is reported here that Capt.-Gen. Weyler has defied the United States and will treat with contempt the protest of Secretary Olney against the execution of the Americans, Owen Milton and Alfred Laborde, who were captured on the schooner Competitor. Gen. Weyler is said to have notified Mr. Olney that the Americans will not be reprieved, but will be executed when the other men are. The attitude of Gen. Weyler has caused intense excitement in Havana among the Spaniards. It is believed here that the United States may reply to Weyler's defiance with a demonstration of force. The verdict of the court martial which tried Laborde, Milton and the others was rendered Friday night. It provided that all the prisoners shall be put to death. The fact that two of the men were Americans was ignored, and the plea of two others that they were kidnapped on the vessel was not believed. Kildea, the other prisoner, who was reported to be a subject of Great Britain, is now said to be a naturalized American citizen. He has appealed to Consul General Williams for protection. The verdict of the court martial has not been made public here, and will not be until it is signed by Admiral Navarro.

PROTEST FROM OLNEY.

Officially Admitted in Spain That He Has Made a Demand in the Competitor Matter

Madrid, May 11.—It is officially confirmed that the United States has presented a reclamation, asking that the application for the protocol of 1877 be extended to the American citizens arrested on board the Competitor. The American note declares that the prisoners cannot be court-martialed because they cannot be considered as having been caught with arms in their hands. The ministers interrogated replied that reclamation involves a problem that will have to be decided according to international law and existing treaties.

Political Prisoners Shot.

Havana, May 11.—On Friday last rebel bands invaded the town of Hoyo Colorado, eighteen miles from Havana, and burned 148 houses, including the town hall. Cornelio Alvarez was shot at Colon, province of Matanzas, this morning, and at the same time sentence of death was executed on Jose Blanco Alfonso in the Cuban fortress here. Both men were convicted of the crime of rebellion. Nine political prisoners were deported to Spain yesterday. Gen. Pando sailed on the same steamer.

Death of Benjamin Urner.

New York, May 11.—Benjamin Urner, a well-known publisher, died at his residence in Fanwood, N. J., yesterday. Benjamin Urner was born in Cincinnati, September 9, 1832. After traveling extensively in the south he came east in 1851 and located near Red Bank, N. J. Later he came to this city and established the Producer's Price Current, which published chiefly the reports of the produce markets. In 1882 he retired from business and left the paper in the management of his son.

Delaware Delegates for Quay.

Philadelphia, May 11.—J. Edwards Addicks, the Delaware republican leader who Saturday defeated the forces of ex-Senator Higgins in the fight for delegates to the Delaware state convention, in an interview here last night said that Delaware's vote in the national convention would be cast for Quay.

Interstate Prize Drill.

Savannah, Ga., May 11.—The Morton cadets of Washington have arrived in the city. They will enter the interstate drill for a prize of $2,500 and the Galveston championship cup, which is now held by the Thurston Rifles of Omaha, Neb., but which has been ordered here for competion.

Forest Fire Extinguished.

Whitinsville, Mass., May 11.—The forest fire which started Friday evening in Plummer's wood was extinguished last night after a hard fight. About 100 acres of land were burned over and much valuable timber was destroyed.

WEEK IN CONGRESS

Programme of the Work Before Both Branches.

APPROPRIATION BILLS IN THE SENATE

Efforts To Have Them Greatly Reduced—Dupont Case To Be Again Taken Up—Two Contested Election Cases in the House.

Washington, May 11.—There are two contested election cases that will probably come up in the house during the week—Murray, rep., vs. Elliott, dem., from the first district of South Carolina, and Reinaker, rep., vs. Downing, dem., from the sixteenth district of Illinois. Both will be vigorously contested. A day has been promised to the committee on labor to discuss the Phillips labor commission and the Erdman arbitration bills. The former provides for the appointment of a commission to investigate the relations of labor to capital and the causes of the troubles that have occurred growing out of those relations. The Erdman bill is the Olney bill, which passed the house last session, and which the labor unions have approved. The committees on immigration and naturalization and on interstate and foreign commerce are each pressing for time in which to present some measures passed upon by them, notably the bills to further regulate the admission of immigrants. But it is hardly probable that they or either of them will get the floor. The determination of the senate committee on appropriations is to keep that body constantly at the consideration of those measures during the week except for such matters as have been heretofore agreed upon. Senator Frye hopes that the river and harbor bill will be finished to-day, but in this he may be disappointed. Mr. Frye will speak in favor of the action of the committee in appropriating upwards af $3,000,000 under the contract system for the improvement of the harbor at Santa Monica, Cal. This speech may call forth a reply from Senator White.

To Reduce Appropriations.

Mr. Gorman has also indicated his intention of offering an amendment making a horizontal reduction in all appropriations that exceed $100,000. This will, in all probability, precipitate some discussion. According to the agreement made some days ago the two days immediately following the passage of the river and harbor bill is to be devoted to the Dupont contested election case, with the understanding that at 5 o'clock on the second day the vote is to be taken. The whole time may not be consumed in debating this case and a few speeches on general subjects may be delivered. Mr. Nelson of Minnesota and Mr. Gibson of Maryland have speeches ready to deliver on the immigration question and they may find time to address the senate during these two days. The District of Columbia bill will be called up as soon as the Dupont case is out of the road. This will probably consume the remainder of the week, much of the bebate doubtles growing out of the appropriations for the charities, over which there was a lively discussion in the house. The senate has restored all the items for this purpose stricken out in the house, and while the champions of the policy pursued by the house are not so numerous in the sen- the action of the committee will cause a number of protests, at least, to be raised. The fortifications bill will be reported by the end of the week. Mr. Allison expects to see all of the appropriation bills passed by the 20th and will make every effort to accomplish such a result.

AMERICAN MEAT IN GERMANY.

Publication of Results of Official Inspection Has a Good Effect.

Washington. May 11.—William D. Wamer, United States consul at Cologne, writes to the state department that the publication in Germany of information concerning the official inspection of live stock and their products has had a good effect. Business in American meat products has recovered, and importers of these products are printing the information in their price lists. "In conversing with the importers here," says Mr. Wamer, "they expressed the belief that it would be advisable for the American government to have a certain amount of money appropriated to be used in making just such publications whenever false reports have been spread regarding the unwholesomeness of American products. But as this is directly in the interest of the exporting merchants of the United States, it appears to me that they would willingly subscribe a sum of money to be placed in the hands of the secretary of agriculture for the purpose mentioned."

Relieved from Ice Blockade.

St. Johns, N. F., May 11.—The British steamer Portia, for New York, got clear last night after ten days' detention owing to the coast being blockaded with ice. She took 220 immigrants, the largest single company ever leaving here. The steamers Grand Lake and Acakian forced their way through the ice and have reached port. Both stove in their bow plates and are leaking considerably.

William B. Moore, keeper of the State prison, is generally referred to throughout the State as "Lucky Moore," because of the favorable and quick turns in his affairs.

The New York Evening Post, Saturday, contained an extended notice about the advantages of Plainfield, and said "that Plainfield is enjoying a steady and substantial growth."

It is not strange that at the Prohibition State Convention protest should have been made, in the speech by the temporary chairman, against the intrusion of free silver and other alien issues into the Prohibition cause. In the West the coldwater men have some alliances, curious when the name and the controling principle of the party are remembered, It has come to pass that to be a Prohibitionist means also to be allied with the principles and ideas of other radical parties. New Jersey Prohibitionists as a class vote their party ticket simply to express their hostility to the liquor traffic, and among them are many people who hold conservative views on social and economic questions. It is no wonder that at the State Convention the sentiment that the issue advocated by the party should be that expressed by its name, was enthusiastically received.—Newark News.

Companies that are formed for the purpose of competing with established corporations, do not seem blessed with the best of luck, and especially is this so of local telephone companies. Some months ago a local telephone company was started at Elizabeth and from the talk at the time one was led to believe that it was a rosy future that lay in the path of the company. But it seems not. Last Friday a suit for $15,000 was begun in the Supreme Court at Trenton, by George S. Smith, a contractor of Elizabeth, against the Elizabeth Telephone Company. This amount, he claims, is due him for partly constructing the company's lines at that place. The telephene company officials claim they have not money enough to pay Mr Smith his bill and his lawyer says that he will make application for the appointment of a receiver to straighten out the company's affairs.

The Borough Justices.

The question in regard to borough justices which has caused considerable discussion of late, is now in the hands of the Governor. A law was passed at the last session of the Legislature and approved March 18th, 1896, which repealed all former laws in regard to the election of borough justices. Inasmuch as the North Plainfield borough election was held March 10th, 1896, and the Justices elected could not qualify till May 1st, it is a question whether the election will stand. The last law passed cuts out entirely the election of borough justices. Those interested are now awaiting the Governor's decision.

A DELINQUENT MINISTER.

He Failed to Appear in Time to Marry a Waiting Couple.

Rev. Adolph Kertzel, of Bound Brook, was to have made John VanHise and Amelia Staats, of Piscataway Township, Middlesex county, man and wife Thursday night, but he didn't.

In contemplation of the marriage, Mr. Van Hise has built for Amelia a pretty little home in Piscataway. Relatives and friends, anticipating a most joyous occasion, were on hand. Eight o'clock was the hour appointed, but the Rev. Mr. Kertzel had not arrived at that time. Nine o'clock came, but not Mr. Kertzel.

The bride and bridegroom began to be anxious, but they sensibly made the occasion less embarrassing by joining with the others in singing and dancing and even partaking of the wedding supper, just as though the knot had been tied. The guests waited until 11 o'clock and Mr. Kretzel not appearing at that hour, they separated.

Yesterday morning Miss Staats and Mr. VanHise drove to New Brunswick and were married by Justice of the Peace Levi P. Walling. The Rev. Adolph Kertzel has not as yet explained his non-appearance.

OBJECTED TO ARREST.

But the Combined Efforts of Two Policemen Got Him to the Rookery.

John Dorgan was insulted last evening, at least he thought he was, and Patrolman Lunger was the offender. The officer actually had the audacity to ask Dorgan to accompany him to the lockup. He also insinuated that the latter had partaken of the fiery fluid in a larger quantity than was good for him. Dorgan objected very forcibly to the arrest and it took the united efforts of Patrolmen Lunger and Totten to convey their prisoner to the lockup.

This morning City Judge DeMeza decided that the officers were in the right and gave Dorgan his choice betwee a fine of $15 or forty days in jail.

There is more catarrh in this section of the country than all other diseases put together, and until the last few years was supposed to be incurable. For a great many years doctors pronounced it a local disease, and prescribed local remedies, and by continually failing to cure with local treatment, pronounced it incurable. Science has proven catarrh to be a constitutional disease and therefore requires constitutional treatment. Hall's Catarrh Cure, manufactured by F. J. Cheney & Co., Toledo, Ohio, is the only constitutional cure on the market. It is taken internally in doses from 10 drops to a teaspoonful. It acts directly on the blood and mucous surfaces of the system. They offer one hundred dollars for any case it fails to cure. Send for circulars and testimonials. Address F. J. Cheney & Co., Toledo, O.

Borough Sidewalk Notice.

Notice is hereby given that the ordinance of the Borough of North Plainfield requires that flag sidewalks be laid and prohibits the laying of new board walks or repairing of old board walks.

An impression seems to exist that old board walks may be repaired without violation of the ordinance.

This is not the fact. In every case where any repair of a board walk is necessary stone must be used.

Public notice of this fact is now again given so that no one need feel aggrieved if they are required to replace a newly laid or repaired board walk with stone.

HOW ONE WIFE MANAGED.

Why John Weeks Built a Pretty New Home.

OLD SAYING—"What can't be cured must be endured." New version—"What can't be endured must needs be cured."

A very tired woman was Malvina Weeks, and she said she should never be rested again till she could have the house painted and shingled. Every shower that came over the hills brought hurry and worry with it, for she must take down everything hanging in the lean-to, and set pails in half a dozen places in the attic, and the carpet in the end room had already been taken up because the numerous wettings that it had received were spoiling it, and the brilliant colors were all running together in one indistinguishable blur.

The paint was all off the house in some places and fast coming off in others; in fact, the cottage was in a state of "peel" all over. The neighbors had begun to speak about it, and say to Malvina how nice it would look painted in light colors. And down at the sewing circle one lady had heard that she was going to have her house painted, and another asked "if she'd got to hev paintin' done this fall!"

When she returned from that meeting, she decided she would not attend another till the house was either painted or she could say with truth that she expected it would be.

She had asked and asked John to have it done, and for two years she had asked in vain. First, John must have a new barn, for "A merciful man is merciful to his beast," and then he must have a new binder, for it would save half the time, and he would need but one man.

In vain she told him the house leaked, in vain she told of the peeling paint, in vain she bewailed the new rag carpet ruined by the dripping water, and said how tired she was of setting pails, and how afraid even to go to the nearest neighbor for fear of a sudden shower and no one at home to attend to it.

Now his last refusal was ringing in her ears, and the poor woman, tired out with the numerous cares of a farmer's wife, just sat down and cried. But if you think a woman's tears end the matter, you are much mistaken. The tears are only the beginning.

When she wanted anything done, John was always ready to start for the poorhouse, and was quite sure that anything laid out on the house, inside or out, was only so many paving stones on the road to the great, roomy old farmhouse where the dozen or so poor and crippled ones of the town were cared for.

The first time she asked him timidly if he didn't think the house needed paint, he said: "Yes, I do, but we should go to the poorhouse if we got everything we fancied."

When she wondered if he couldn't have the roof patched, he said: "No, he couldn't lay out nothin' this year, for that binder had jest about swamped him, an' he calc'lated he'd have ter go ter the poorhouse if he kep' on spendin' money."

She heard about the poorhouse till she was tired of it, and one day when she was out in the berry pasture, she sat down and looked at the building which could be seen in the distance just over the hill, and, with a queer feeling at her heart, she thought if she did have to go to the poorhouse, it would not be such a bad place to stay in, after all.

"IF YOU WANT TO GO TO THE POOR HOUSE YOU CAN."

Next day she went about her work very quietly, and stole away in the afternoon to Widow Smith's for a little while. The second day she made one more effort: "Don't you think you could have something done to the roof after you get the harvest out of the way, John?"

"If you want to go to the poorhouse, you can, I don't," was the concise answer.

When John came in at night, his supper was ready, but his wife was not to be seen. He thought she would be in in a moment, but after resting awhile and seeing no sign of her, he decided to eat, as she had probably been called to some one of the neighbors. On his plate lay a note:

"DEAR JOHN: I have made arrangements with Widow Smith to come in three times a week and cook the victuals and clean up the house while I am away. ("Good land, where's she goin'?") I was looking at the poorhouse the other day from the Blue Hill pasture, and it did look so nice that I thought if I'd got to go there, I might as well go there now. It has just been painted, and I asked Goody Blake if it leaked, and she said no; and I'm going to ask Mis' Grove to let me keep the end room for you, for I s'pose it won't be many weeks before you'll come, too. That room looks right down on the medder that leads to our back door, and I think if it's empty she'll keep it for you, for she's always ben real accommodatin' ter me.

"Don't forgit to take down the coats in the lean-to, and set the pails as quick as you can, for it does come in like sixty when it begins. I shall work for my keep there, and if they allow paupers to go visitin', I shall come over when I ken. Your affectionate wife,

"MALVINA WEEKS."

"Wal, I never see the beat o' that!"

He ate his meal in silence, trying to digest the fact that his wife had taken his frequent allusions to the poorhouse in earnest, and thought if she had to enter the house some time she might as well take advantage of the condition of her own home and avail herself of its shelter at once. "Who'd a-thought she would?" was a question he asked himself over and over as he took the pails and went out to milk.

As he came back, he noticed the scaling paint and the bare sashes, and said to himself: "It looks wus'n I thought it did." Then he remembered his last remark to her, that she could go to the poorhouse if she wanted to, he didn't. She had taken him at his word.

Just at dusk, the keeper of the poorhouse drove up, and, stopping before the house, said to the man sitting on the doorstep: "Hello, Weeks, met with reverses?"

"No, not 'specially. Why?"

"Wal, Mis' Weeks she cum up an' talked with my wife alone, and asked if she might stay and help her a spell, an' my wife's real glad she's come, cos she does think your wife knows a leetle the most about doin' pickles an' things of anybody round, an' she put her in the spare room, an' sent me down to see you."

John chewed a straw vigorously while he wondered what Mr. Grove thought, and what excuse he, one of the largest tax payers in town, could make for sending his wife to the poorhouse. He tried to seem perfectly easy as he said: "Wal, the fact is, I told her she could go. I'm goin' ter hev the house shingled and painted, an' I thought's long's the smell o' paint makes her sick, I'd git her out of the way; but 'I 'xpect she'll be some s'prised, cos I didn't let on that I was goin' ter hev it done."

"All right, neighbor, I won't say nothin' 'bout it," and turning the horse he drove away, but he wondered, and muttered to himself that "'twas curis doin's, and he bet there was suthin' that he warn't told."

However, the next time he passed the Weeks place, there were men at work on the roof, and men painting the kitchen inside, and he thought the front room was being papered, but he could not quite tell.

Meanwhile Vina was homesick, and though she went into the end room and looked out on the meadow that she knew reached her home just out of sight beyond the woods, it only made the tears come faster, and she wondered if she couldn't have stood the leaks and the pealing paint a little longer, and then, perhaps, she might have coaxed John.

John was homesick, too, and hurried the carpenters and painters till they made jokes among themselves about his impatience. The home was not home with Vina gone, and he thought perhaps she might get so used to living in a big house that she would never again care for the little house she had called home so long.

With fear and trembling he harnessed the horse, put on his best suit of clothes and started for the poorhouse. "She's awful sot, an' ef she's tuk a notion she's a going ter live in that big poorhouse, nothin'll fetch er back. Mebbe if I told her I'd build a house next year, she'd come." So he tried to go over all the arguments he would use with the woman who was more ready to return than he could possibly be to have her.

She sat on the back porch knitting, when Mrs. Grove called her to answer the doorbell, for her hands were in the bread. John Weeks' argument fled, for Malvina threw her arms around his neck and sobbed:

"I've been so lonesome, oh, John!"

And he patted her shoulder and said: "So've I, Viny, so've I."

Then when she could think she said, with a curious expression on her face: "Have you come to stay?"

"No. I say, Viny, I'm willin'—I'll do anything—I'll build a house if you'll only come back to live. Miss Smith can't make bread fit to chew!"

Happy woman that went riding down the valley by John's side, and told him of her stay in the poorhouse. Happy John when they came out beyond the the woods, and the cottage with its new paint and bright blinds looked at them, for then Viny put her head down on his shoulder, and cried that she would never go away again, and that it was all wrong for her to go when she did.

And he said very gruffly: "It was all right, and she could go again whenever she wanted to, if she'd only come back when he come after her."

She does not look longingly at the big poorhouse now, and John never mentions it. Malvina has had the sewing circle meet in the parlor, and she took them all over the house, and showed them the new paint and paper, till some one declared: "John Weeks couldn't be called stingy about the house, anyway."

Vina repeated it to him, with this addition: "I do like to have folks think wal of ye, John."—Household.

What ensued I cannot tell. The outlook, so far as I was concerned, was limited to wildly-plunging horses—we were in the center of the band—and riders swaying in the saddle—with a glimpse here and there of a fringe of white scowling faces and tossing arms. Once, a lane opening, I saw the vidame's charger—he was in the van—stumble and fall among the crowd and heard a great shout go up. But Bezers by a mighty effort lifted it to its legs again. And once, too, a minute later, those riding on my right swerved outwards and I saw something I never afterwards forgot.

It was the body of the coadjutor, lying face upwards, the eyes open and the teeth bared in a last spasm. Prostrate on it lay a woman, a young woman, with her hair like red gold falling about her neck and skin like milk. I did not know whether she was alive or dead; but I noticed that one arm stuck out stiffly, and the crowd flying before the sudden impact of the horses must have passed over her, even if she had escaped the iron hoofs which followed. Still, in the fleeting glance I had of her as my horse bounded aside, I saw no wound or disfigurement. Her one arm was cast about the priest's breast; her face was hidden in it. But for all that I knew her—knew her, shuddering for the woman whose badges I was even now wearing, whose gift I bore at my side; and I remembered the priest's vaunt of a few hours before, made in her presence: "There is no man in Paris shall thwart me tonight!"

It had been a vain boast, indeed! No hand in all that host of thousands was more feeble than his now; for good or ill! No brain more dull, no voice less heeded. A righteous retribution indeed had overtaken him. He had died by the sword he had drawn—died, a priest, by violence! The cross he had renounced had crushed him. And all his schemes and thoughts, and no doubt they had been many, had perished with him. It had come to this, only, this, the sum of the whole matter, that there was one wicked man the less in Paris—one lump of breathless clay the more.

For her—the woman on his breast—what man can judge a woman, knowing her? And not knowing her, how much less? For the present I put her out of my mind, feeling for the moment faint and cold.

We were clear of the crowd and clattering unmolested down a paved street before I fully recovered from the shock which this sight had caused me. Wonder whither we were going took its place. To Bezers' house? My heart sank at the prospect if that were so. Before I thought of an alternative, a gateway flanked by huge round towers appeared before us, and we pulled up suddenly, a confused jostling mass in the narrow way; while some words passed between the vidame and the captain of the guard. A pause of several minutes followed; and then the gates rolled slowly open, and two by two we passed under the arch. Those gates might have belonged to a fortress or a prison, a dungeon or a palace, for all I knew.

They led, however, to none of these, but to an open space, dirty and littered with rubbish, marked by a hundred ruts and tracks, and fringed with disorderly cabins and makeshift booths. And beyond this—oh, ye gods! the joy of it—beyond this, which we crossed at a rapid trot, lay the open country!

The transition and relief were so wonderful that I shall never forget them. I gazed on the wide landscape before me, lying quiet and peaceful in the sunlight, and could scarce believe in my happiness. I drew the fresh air into my lungs, I threw up my sheathed sword and caught it again in a frenzy of delight, while the gloomy men about me smiled at my enthusiasm. I felt the horse beneath me move once more like a thing of life. No enchanter with his wand, not Merlin nor Virgil, could have made a greater change in my world than had the captain of the gate with his simple key! Or so it seemed to me in the first moments of freedom, and escape—of removal from those loathsome streets.

I looked back at Paris—at the cloud of smoke which hung over the towers and roofs; and it seemed to me the canopy of hell itself. I fancied that my head still rang with the cries and screams and curses, the sounds of death. In very fact, I could hear the dull reports of firearms near the Louvre, and the jangle of the bells. Country folk were congregated at the cross-roads, and in the villages, listening and gazing; asking timid questions of the more good-natured among us, and showing that the rumor of the dreadful work doing in the town had somehow spread abroad. And this though I learned afterwards that the keys of the city had been taken the night before to the king, and that, except a party with the duke of Guise, who had left at eight in pursuit of Montgomery and some of the Protestants—lodgers, happily for themselves, in the Faubourg St. Germain—no one had left the town before ourselves.

While I am speaking of our departure from Paris, I may say what I have to say of the dreadful excesses of those days, ay, and of the following days; excesses of which France is now ashamed, and for which she blushed even before the accession of his late majesty. I am sometimes asked, as one who witnessed them, what I think, and I answer that it was not our country that was to blame. A something besides Queen Catherine de Medici had been brought from Italy 40 years before, a something invisible but very powerful; a spirit of cruelty and treachery. In Italy it had done some small harm. But grafted on French daring and recklessness, and the rougher and more soldierly manners of the north, this spirit of intrigue proved capable of very dreadful things. For a time, until it wore itself out, it was the curse of France. Two dukes of Guise, Francis and Henry; a cardinal of Guise, the prince of Conde, Admiral Coligny King Henry III.—all of these the foremost men of their day—died by assassination within little more than a quarter of a century, to say nothing of the prince of Orange and King Henry the Great.

Then mark—a most curious thing—the extreme youth of those who were in the business. France, subject to the queen-mother, of course, was ruled at the time by boys scarce out of their tutors' hands. They were mere lads, hot-blooded, reckless nobles, ready for any wild brawl, without forethought of prudence. Of the four Frenchmen who it is thought took the leading parts, one, the king, was 22; monsieur, his brother, was only 20; the duke of Guise was 21. Only Marshal de Tavannes was of mature age. For the other conspirators, for the queen-mother, for her advisers Retz and Nevers and Birague, they were Italians; and Italy may answer for them if Florence, Mantua and Milan care to raise the glove.

To return to our journey. A league from the town we halted at a large inn, and some of us dismounted. Horses were brought out to fill the places of those lost or left behind, and Bure had food served to us. We were famished and exhausted, and ate ravenously, as if we could never have enough.

The vidame sat his horse apart, served by his page. I stole a glance at him, and it struck me that even on his iron nature the events of the night had made some impression. I read, or thought I read, in his countenance, signs of emotions not quite in accordance with what I knew of him—emotions strange and varied. I could almost have sworn that as he looked at us a flicker of kindliness lit up his stern and cruel gloom; I could almost have sworn he smiled with a curious sadness. As for Louis riding with a squad who stood in a different part of the yard, he did not see us; had not yet seen us at all. His side face, turned towards me, was pale and sad, his manner preoccupied, his mien rather sorrowful and downcast. He was thinking, I judged, as much of the many brave men who had yesterday been his friends—companions at board and play table—as of his own fate. When we presently, at a signal from Bure, took to the road again, I asked no permission, but thrusting my horse forward, rode to his side as he passed through the gateway

CHAPTER XI.

A NIGHT OF SORROW.

"Louis! Louis!"

He turned with a start at the sound of my voice, joy and bewilderment—and no wonder — in his countenance. He had not supposed us to be within 100 leagues of him. And lo! here we were, knee to knee, hand meeting hand in a long grasp, while his eyes, to which tears sprang unbidden, dwelt on my face as though they could read in it the features of his sweetheart. Some one had furnished him with a hat and enabled him to put his dress in order, and washed his wound, which was very slight, and these changes had improved his appearance; so that the shadow of grief and despondency passing for a moment from him in the joy of seeing me, he looked once more his former self; as he had looked in the old days at Caylus on his return from hawking, or from some boyish escapade among the hills. Only, alas! he wore no sword.

"And now tell me all," he cried, after his first exclamation of wonder had found vent. "How on earth do you come here? Here, of all places, and by my side? Is all well at Caylus? Surely, mademoiselle is not—"

"Madamoiselle is very well! perfectly well! And thinking of you I swear!" I answered passionately. "For us," I went on, eager for the moment to escape that subject—how could I talk of it in the daylight and under strange eyes?—"Marie and Croisette are behind. We left Caylus eight days ago. We reached Paris yesterday evening. We have not been to bed! We have passed, Louis, such a night as I never—"

He stopped me with a gesture. "Hush!" he said; raising his hand. "Don't speak of it, Anne!" and I saw that the fate of his friends was still too recent, the horror of his awakening to those dreadful sights and sounds was still too vivid for him to bear reference to them. Yet after riding for a time in silence—though his lips moved—he asked me again what had brought me up.

"We came to warn you—of him," I answered, pointing to the solitary figure of the vidame, who was riding ahead of the party. "He—he said that Kit should never marry you, and boasted of what he would do to you, and frightened her. So, learning he was going to Paris, we followed him—to put you on you guard, you know." And I briefly sketched our adventures, and the circumstances and mistakes which had delayed us hour after hour, through all that strange night, until the time had gone by when we could do good.

His eyes glistened and his color rose as I told the story. He wrung my hand warmly, and looked back to smile at Marie and Croisette. "It was like you!" he ejaculated, with emotion. "It was like her cousins! Brave, brave lads! The vicomte will live to be proud of you! Some day you will all do great things! I say it!"

"But oh, Louis!" I exclaimed, sorrowfully, though my heart was bounding with pride at his words, "if we had only been in time! If we had only come to you two hours earlier!"

"You would have spoken to little purpose then, I fear," he replied, shaking his head. "We were given over as prey to the enemy. Warnings? We had warnings in plenty. De Rosny warned us, and we scoffed at him. The king's eye warned us, and we trusted him. But—" and Louis' form dilated and his hand rose as he went on, and I thought of his cousin's prediction—"it will never be so again in France, Anne! Never! No man will after this trust another! There will be no honor, no faith, no quarter, and no peace! And for the Valois who had done this, the sword will never depart from his house! I believe it! I do believe it!"

How truly he spoke we know now. For two and twenty years after the 24th of August, 1572, the sword was scarcely laid aside in France for a single month.

Delicate Dress Goods.

Some gowns are so dainty in the weave, so delicate in tint, that they seem to soil by being looked at—one or two wearings making them unpresentable, NOT USELESS. We make a specialty of cleaning fine fabrics, the more delicate the material, the better the results. Sometimes an accident will ruin a gown, without injuring the texture. We dye them then, sometimes we get a prettier effect than the original color. Fine goods stand redyeing. The finer the material the better the new color. We charge so little for cleaning or dyeing, that even if you are in doubt as to the result, it's worth while to experiment. Want a new evening gown for a dollar or two? Laundry drivers will receive your work.

CYCLING COMMENT.

T. A. Beguelin, of East Front street, has received his new Howard.

Moses N. Terrill, of Elmwood place is the latest enthusiast to ride a wheel.

Edward Mosher, of Elmwood place, has just purchased a handsome new wheel.

The Paramount Cycle Club, of South Brooklyn, enjoyed a run to this city yesterday.

Ralph Tolles, of Westervelt avenue, rode his wheel to Rahway and Newark yesterday.

Percy Sandford, of the borough, purchased a Dictator from the Jersey Wheel Company on Saturday.

Harry Lister, of Orchard place, is in Philadelphia, training on his wheel. He expects to enter several races this season.

Ex-Mayor William L. Saunders, of the borough, is one of the latest to join the wheelmen's ranks. He rides a Crawford wheel.

Mrs. George VanNest, of Dunellen, purchased a ladies' Cleveland Swell Special on Saturday of the F. L. C. Martin Cycle Company.

John Traynor, of Liberty street, purchased a World wheel, Saturday, through the agency of Sandford G. Robinson, of West Second street.

Messrs. Bird, Watson, Ryno and Whitehead, of Jersey City, rode their wheels to Plainfield yesterday and were the guests of Chief Marshal Wilson, of the borough.

William M. McCutchen and Raymond A. McGee, who respectively finished first and second in the two-mile bicycle race at the High School games Saturday, are both riders of the Cleveland Swell Special, which they rode in the race.

An Elizabeth cyclist had an experience on North avenue, last evening, which he will always remember. In turning from Watchung avenue into North he collided with a dog. The rider was thown off and severely cut and bruised, while his wheel was almost completely wrecked. He was assisted to the station by some men who happened to be about, and he took the 8:30 train for home. The dog has not been seen since.

The Asbury church, of Rochester, is the first to countenance the bringing of bicycles to church. This is the largest and wealthiest Methodist church in Rochester. The Board of Trustees has arranged a room with sixty lockers. The pastor says this action is necessary because many wheelmen come to the weekly prayer meetings, and boys have been stealing and puncturing the tires of the bicycles in order to see the owners walk home.

LAWN TENNIS.

Although the grounds of the Dunellen Tennis Club have not been formally opened, a number of the members enjoyed some friendly matches on the courts Saturday.

VARIOUS SPORTS.

Jesse L. Hurlbut, Jr., formerly of this city, but now of New York, was one of the field judges at the High School games Saturday. Hurlbut is now the champion scholastic pole vaulter in the country.

—A small shed in the rear of Frank Cullen's grocery store on West Fourth street caught fire through some unknown cause at about 2:30 o'clock this afternoon. An alarm was sent in from Box 47, and the flames were easily extinguished.

A Gentle Hint.

The emancipated young woman was calling upon her gentleman love, and she heeded but little the rapid flight of the hours. The young man's vigilant mamma noted the time in her room upstairs, and presently she called down:

"George, dear?"

"Yes, mamma."

"Has that young woman gone yet?"

"No, mamma," replied George, dutifully.

"Tell her I do not allow your lady callers to remain after eleven o'clock. You must not lose your beauty sleep."

WITH THE STEPPERS.

Several Good Races at the Driving Park Saturday Afternoon.

The trotting at the Driving Park last Saturday afternoon was up to the standard, and quite a number of people were at the track to see the sport. The programme consisted of the 2:25 class and two match races of a mile dash each, in both of which Hayes' brown gelding "Andy" took part, winning one and trotting a good game race in the other against a horse who was several seconds too fast for him and belongs in a faster class. The 2:25 class, although not finished on account of the lateness of the hour, as much of it as was trotted proved to be the race of the day and season, and showed St. Albans, the Woodbrook farm stallion, to be a race horse of the highest type. St. Albans, Myrtle Twig, Lillian M. and Highland Boy answered the bell in this class, and although Mr. Branningham's mare, Myrtle Twig, was the favorite on account of her recent victories, it was no secret among a number of horsemen that Johnny Osborne had Mr. Johnson's black stallion, St. Albans, in shape to give the mare the race of her life. Just after they got the word in the first heat Mr. Osborne and Mr. Branningham took back their respective horses, St. Albans and Myrtle Twig, having decided to reserve their fire until later on. That left Lillian M. and Highland Boy to fight it out. It was a pretty race between them around the upper turn and down the home stretch, but at the wire the mare had the best of it by a head in 2:27½. They got away on the third score to a poor start the second heat and all of them did considerable running, but Mr. Branningham's mare acted like a trotter when she caught and came home under the wire a short head in front of Lillian M. in 2:25½, equalling her best record over a mile track. St. Albans was close up at the head of the stretch in this heat but made a loosing brake which lost him his posision. They took the word going fast the third heat but Myrtle Twig acted very rank and made repeated brakes and just after she left the half started to run with Mr. Branningham, and the other horses being close behind and coming very fast he was unable to take her back and she ran the entire distance. Notwithstanding this at the head of the stretch and after trotting around the whole field, Mr. Osborne had St. Albans at her wheel and when he pulled his head one side and called on the game son of King Wilkes he responded with that bull dog determination to do or die, that have made the Wilks horses so famous.

He flashed under the wire alongside of the runner in 2:25 flat, breaking his record by half a second. St. Albans trotted his mile in very fast time, as he was on the outside the entire distance and the skill and coolness with which Mr. Branningham handled his mare would be a credit to many a noted reinsman.

The summary is as follows:

2:25 Class—Trotting and Pacing.

Lillian M., br. m.	P. Osborne	1	2	2

A. C. Vail is driving the fast pacer Budd Onward, 2:21¼ on the road.

Roxie French, John Osborne's good mare, will not be seen on the tracks this season, as John has his hands full with the Woodbrook Farm trotters.

HIS PANTS WERE HIGH.

BUT OFFICER VANDERWEG SAID THEY SUITED HIM—CHARGES PREFERRED.

The Trial of Two Policemen, Who Are Charged With Insubordination, Will Take Place Next Monday in the Council.

There appears to be an unusual amount of city business to be transacted this month. Thus far the City Council has met twice and another meeting will be held next Monday evening. Last evening all the members were present except Messrs. Westphal, Dumont, Barrows and Moore. The first matters considered were the communications from the Police Board in regard to Patrolmen Flynn and Vanderweg, who were suspended and then temporarily reinstated pending an investigation. Patrolman Flynn's case was the first reported. In both cases Sergeant Kiely was the complainant. The officer was charged that on April 11th he received orders from Roundsman Mattox to appear at the station house at 4:30 in the afternoon to attend inspection, and that on April 20th he received orders from the same officer to appear at the station house at 6:30 in the evening to meet a tailor for the purpose of being measured for a uniform, and also on April 22d he received orders from Roundsman Frederickson to go to Colyer's clothing house in Newark and be measured for his uniform. In all three instances he failed to report. The charge against Patrolman Vanderweg was even of a more serious nature. On April 11th and 12th he was ordered by Roundsman Mattox to report at the station house. In the first case he refused and the second time he used profane language, also stating that he refused to work night and day.

Sergeant Kiely requested him to adjust his trousers properly, and he replied that "the trousers suited him." On May 2d both officers appeared before the Mayor and Police Board, and to the inquiries made by the Mayor insolent answers were given by Patrolman Vanderweg. The charges were read, to which he made no reply, but he asked for the charges. The Mayor asked him if he had counsel. He answered by saying "you will have to find that out in the future." After both charges were read by Clerk MacMurray, Mr. Fisk offered two resolutions, covering both cases, to the effect that a public examination and hearing be held next Monday evening at 8 o'clock, at which time the officers be given a fair trial. The resolutions were adopted.

A petition was received from F. W. Runyon and residents of Park avenue, complaining of the stench from the sewer catch basin at the corner of Park avenue and Front street. They asked that the trouble be attended to. The matter was referred to the street committee.

Corporation Counsel Marsh rendered his opinion in regard to the $1 assessment on property owners connecting with the sewer. He stated that it could not be done under the law of 1890, except in the regular plan of sewer assessment. The matter was referred to the sewer committee.

A claim of W. W. Cook & Co. against Honan & Sons for $29.15 was received, as was also a claim of Wallace V. Miller for $25 against Honan & Sons, for damages in breaking a large plate glass at the Hotel Grenada while the sewers through North avenue were being laid.

The above claims, together with other claims of the Plainfield Water Supply Company, J. B. Coward, Fred. Hui and A. M. Griffen were referred to the sewer committee. In a communication Honan & Sons stated that according to contract they had completed their work in this city and had left $239.08 to be used in paying for any damages that they were responsible for.

Mr. Frost said that the sewer committee would not approve any bills until the streets were put in proper condition. He specified Watchung avenue, Second street and Fifth street as being particularly bad.

In a letter, J. B. Coward said that he had been advised to present his claim to the city and A. M. Griffen's claim of $234.88 for material, etc., he said, Honan & Sons had refused to pay.

Mr. Serrell reported progress on proposed ordinances, and in regard to the suggestion made one week ago by the Town Improvement Association recommending that $200 be appropriated to spray elm trees, he said that acting on Mr. Fisk's suggestion he had written to J. H. Bowditch, of Boston, an expert in such matters, and had received a reply.

Clerk MacMurray read the letter which said that the plan of spraying trees was an expensive one and would not advise the adoption of it in general. He thought it might be well to try it in a section and thus determine the result. He suggested that the Council write to the New York Agricultural Company and secure additional information.

Mr. Fisk spoke on the matter and he agreed with the expert that the experiment would be too costly and would be more of a success as a private enterprise. He moved that the $200 appropriation not be granted for the reason above stated. The motion prevailed. Accompany- Mr. Bowditch's letter was another one from him, stating that he usually received $5 for furnishing such information as he gave in this case, and on Mr. Frost's motion, $5 was ordered drawn to re-imburse Mr. Bowditch. Mr. Serrell stated that he would write to the New York Agricultural Company, if the Council so desired, but Mr. Fisk suggested that the Town Improvement Association carry on further correspondence if they so desired and the idea was agreed to. Mr. Serrell then called up the bicycle ordinance for its third reading and on his motion it was adopted.

Council then adjourned.

GEN. RUNYON'S WILL.

One-third to the Widow and Two-thirds to the Children.

The late Ambassador Runyon's will, dated Sept. 24, 1887, and a codicil dated Nov. 29, 1889, were probated in the Surrogate's office at Newark yesterday. Anzi Dodd and the late Vice-Chancellor Van Fleet were named as executors, but the former has declined to serve. Mrs. Runyon and her sons, Frederick and Chauncey, will probably be granted letters of administration.

The jewelry and medals are to be distributed among relatives, and Mrs. Runyon gets one-third of the estate for life, after which it is to be divided equally between her five children Mrs. Mary Haskins, Frederick Runyon, Julie Runyon, Chauncey Runyon and Helen Runyon, or their children. The remaining two-thirds of the estate will be divided equally between the children when the youngest becomes of age.

Board of Education Criticised.

The change of school superintendent in Westfield has caused much feeling, and the friends of Professor Francis talk of holding a meeting to protest against his removal. There has been considerable friction in the relations between the members of the Board for some time, and there is a disposition on the part of the people to stand by Professor Francis, although he will persist in his resignation and declines to indulge in any discussion of the matter. The new superintedent, Dr. Edwards, is an intimate friend of the president of the Board, and brings credentials from leading educators of Brooklyn and New York.

Duties of the City Nurse.

The spring union meeting of King's Daughters will be held Friday, May 15th, in the Relief Association building, 544 West Front street, at 3:30 p. m. Dr. Simpson, the city physician, will make an address upon the work of the city nurse. The nurse will also give a report of her work. The King's Daughters Dispensary will be open for inspection.

Gave Up the Ghost.

The Alabama Telephone Construction Company, known as the Harrison Telephone Exchange of Selma, Ala., has collapsed. The Exchange was built just eighteen months ago to compete with the Southern Bell Telephone Exchange. The poles and wires have been sold at a nominal price, said to be enough to cover the outstanding indebtedness. The original investment proved a total loss.

The Band Concerts.

The public band concerts will probably be given on Tuesday evenings, and will be so arranged that they will run late in the fall, so that those who go away in the summer can have the benefit of them.

Upset the Stage.

The axle to the Scotch Plains stage broke yesterday afternoon on West Front street, near Park avenue, upsetting the stage. The passengers were somewhat mixed up, but no one was injured.

How To Treat a Wife.

(From the Pacific Health Journal.)

First, get a wife; second, be patient. You may have great trials and perplexities in your business, but do not therefore, carry to your home a cloud or cloudy brow. Your wife may have trials, which, though of less magnitude, may be hard for her to bear. A kind word, a tender look, will do wonders in chasing from her brow all clouds of gloom. To this we woul add always keep a bottle of Chamberlain's Cough Remedy in the house. It is the best and is sure to be needed sooner or later. Your wife will then know that you really care for her and wish to protect her health. For sale by T. S. Armstrong, druggist.

A GASH IN HIS HEAD.

HENRY RUSSELL STRUCK ON THE HEAD WITH AN IRON DOOR.

Was Helping to Unload Cement at the City National Bank When the Object Fell—Was Not Seriously Hurt.

The sight of blood flowing from a long gash in a negro's head quite startled the pedestrians in the vicinity of the new City National Bank building at the corner of Front street and Park avenue this morning. The injured man was Henry Russell and the assailant was one of the heavy iron doors that close the entrance from the Park avenue sidewalk to the cellar.

A gang of Capt. Hand's men were unloading some bags of cement from one of his trucks and carrying them down into the cellar. Russell was one of the men so employed, and had gone part way down the steps when one of the large iron trap doors that had been leaning against the wall, for some reason, fell.

Unluckily for Russell his head happened to be in the way and an iron projection on the botton, used to fasten the doors when closed, struck the top of his skull.

A long gash was the result, from which the blood flowed freely. The skull itself was not injured, but had Russell been standing higher on the steps it would probably have been fractured. The shock of the blow dazed Russell for the instant but he soon recovered and his head was tied up. He quit work for the time and started off to have the wound dressed. The crowd that had been attracted by the accident then dispersed and the unloading of the cement was concluded without further accident.

PROVED THAT HE FOUND IT.

A Missing Gold Watch Makes Trouble for a Young Man.

The gold watch, the finding of which in the debris of the circus was chronicled in The Press at the time, was the cause of considerable trouble between two families living in that vicinity. The matter appeared in Justice Nash's court yesterday and was finally settled.

Mr. and Mrs. Froleigh live on Midway avenue, the old railroad embankmens. They owned a gold watch which, on the day in question, was hung upon the wall in one of the rooms. Mrs. Froleigh left the house alone for a few minutes and when she returned the watch was gone.

The police were notified and Sergeant Kiely learned, through some of his mysterious sources, that young Joseph Stiles said he had found a gold watch where the circus had been. The police found the watch in Mrs. Stiles' possession and the lad was arrested. He was brought before Justice Nash yesterday, charged with stealing the watch. Mr. and Mrs. Froleigh told how the watch had disappeared and Mrs. Kate Wheeler swore that she saw Joseph Stiles going into Froleigh's yard at the time in question. But Joseph had several witnesses to prove he was playing baseball at that time and several more to prove that he found it at the circus grounds and gave it to his mother who was standing nearby.

Such evidence was overwhelming and Justice Nash released the prisoner.

DIVORCE CAME AT LAST.

A Young Woman Has Waited Four Years for Jepson.

A decree of absolute divorce was granted Andrew C. Jepson, of Westfield, from his wife, by Chancellor McGill, Saturday. Mr. Jepson is the senior member of the firm of Jepson & Doerrer. About four years ago he became engaged to a young woman who was employed as waitress by Mrs. Condit, of Union place, Westfield, and the wedding day was fixed.

When the other preliminaries had been arranged, the fact became known that the bridegroom had already been married and had a wife living, although he had the impression that the separation was legal. Inquiry showed that, although there were statutory grounds, there was no divorce, and he set out to obtain one in proper form.

The case has dragged on with exasperating slowness, until finally the decree has been granted. All this time the young woman has waited, and the long-delayed marriage will now take place.

Mr. D. P. Davis, a prominent liveryman and merchant of Goshen, Va., has this to say on the subject of rheumatism: "I take pleasure in recommending Chamberlain's Pain Balm for rheumatism, as I know from personal experience that it will do all that is claimed for it. A year ago this spring my brother was laid up in bed with inflammatory rheumatism and suffered intensely. The first application of Chamberlain's Pain Balm eased the pain and the use of one bottle completely cured him. For sale by T. S. Armstrong, druggist.

AWAY WITH THE BUMPS.

A NEW METHOD OF STREET IMPROVEMENT TO BE OPERATED.

City Workmen to Be Divided Into Gangs and Work Under Direction of the Councilmen—Frost's Practical Vacation.

The members of the street committee of the City Council have at last decided upon a plan whereby Plainfield is to have better streets. The work for some time has been progressing too slow and a consultation was held this morning while the members of the committee inspected the various streets about the city. They have decided that wheelmen and people who ride in carriages desire smooth riding, and that they don't particularly care whether a street is scientifically built or not. To obtain the desired result the street laborers are to be divided into gangs, each member of the committee to have charge of a gang, who will work under the Councilman's direction on such streets as he may select.

In this way the bumps and uneven places in the streets are to be leveled off and rolled down with the steam and horse roller. This will make a smooth riding surface and the work will be done systematically. About the first of next week this new plan will go into effect.

Mr. Frost has already shown the right spirit in the matter and being very anxious to see the streets put into good condition has decided to spend his summer vacation with the men in prosecuting this work and no doubt good results will be obtained. The members were inspecting the streets this morning from 9 to 11 o'clock. It is thought that the work on Park avenue will be completed this week, after which the new orders will go into effect.

The steam roller was at work on Park avenue last night till a late hour this morning. After several hours had been spent in rolling the avenue between North avenue and Second street, it was noticed early this morning that men were digging up the street to make connections to the water main. This seems to be poor judgment, as no substantial progress can be made in this way. Park avenue, between Second and Front streets, was plowed up this morning and the dirt removed to Washington street where it will be used to fill up any holes that may be found. It is expected that heavy crushed stone will be placed on the avenue this evening and rolled down tonight by the steam roller. The avenue will probably have to be closed for one day while the top dressing is being put on.

Rutgers to Teach Scientific Farming.

There is talk of a change in the curriculum at Rutgers College by the introduction of a short practical course in scientific farming. The course will be one without a degree, designed simply for the purpose of aiding special students who may wish to get the benefit of work in the scientific departments. At present the percentage of farmers' sons at Rutgers is large. The men largely drift into engineering, electricity, and chemistry after their four years' course, and do not go back to their farms.

Can't Please All.

What pleases one usually displeases another, and so it is with the petition of the business men which asked that the steam roller be operated at night on Park avenue to avoid driving away business during the day. The roller was put in operation last night and this morning a petition was put in circulation among those who live on the avenue asking that the work be stopped at night, as they were unable to obtain rest while the ponderous roller was running.

Cooper Wins the Suit.

In the Union County Circuit Court at Elizabeth yesterday afternoon, before Judge Van Syckle, a suit brought by John W. Cooper, formerly President of the Fowler Car Works, at Elizabethport, against Henry H. Isham, of Brooklyn, to recover $14,000 due on a note, was decided in favor of Cooper. The jury awarded the full amount and costs.

Paid for His Indulgence.

William Henry Coriell, a young colored man, was arraigned before City Judge DeMeza this morning on the charge of being drunk. He was arrested yesterday morning by Roundsman Mattox on West Fourth street. He paid a fine of $3 for his indulgence.

New Jersey Central Election.

At the annual election of the Central Railroad Company of New Jersey the following board of directors were elected: George F. Baker, Harris C. Fahnestock, James A. Garland, Henry Graves, Charles Lanier, Henry M. Maxwell, J. Rogers Maxwell, Samuel Sloan and Frederick G. Bourne.

AGAINST TAKING THE BASS.

New Market People Object to Having These Fish Taken From the Pond.

A report was received by the officers of the New Jersey Propagating and Protective Society of this city early yesterday morning that the Fish Commission in their endeavors to rid the New Market pond from carp was going to use dynamite to accomplish their purpose. It was also said that many large bass were being captured by the State officicls, who intended to put them in other waters. The people residing in the vicinity of New Market were incensed at the reports and appealed to the Protective Society to suppress any such methods as it was said were to be used. It was claimed that Warden Tucker, of Middlesex county, had gone beyond the intent of the law which permits the taking of bass for the restocking of other waters.

Within an hour after the information was received from New Market the officials of the society were on the way to the New Market pond. They were President John Goff, Secretary Henry Haurand and Treasurer Alexander McCollough. Percy C. Ohl, President of the State Society, also accompanied them.

The officers of the society arrived at New Market to find everything quiet thereabouts. Not a fisherman or net was in sight, nor could a bursting dynamite cartridge be heard anywhere about the pond. After satisfying themselves that the report with reference to the use of explosives was greatly exaggerated, the officers interviewed several citizens in the vicinity, among them being Dr. Nelson and Justice Storms, who are always alert in the interest of legitimate sport.

It was learned that Warden Tucker had certainly taken bass between fifteen and sixteen inches long and put them in a large can used for the transportation of fish, ostensibly for the purpose of taking them elsewhere. Some of the people who were seen said that the Warden had offered one man $2 to catch seven large bass. The Warden or his employes were not to be seen and the stories had to be taken for what they were worth.

At the time the carp, which the Commissioners are now trying to exterminate because of their fatal attacks on other fish, were put in the New Market pond, Percy C. Ohl, in the columns of this paper, vigorously protested against the work. Mr. Ohl now says that to successfully exterminate them means an enormous expense and more damage done to other species of fish than the carp can do in twenty years.

WRIT OF ATTACHMENT.

John and David Falkner Leave Town Owing Several Bills.

John Wolfe has secured a writ of attachment on goods belonging to John and David Falkner, who recently resided in Mr. Powers' house, corner of Somerset street and Park place. Over a week ago they packed up their goods and left town during the night, going, it is supposed, to Long Island, where ther father resides. They also occupied a house at Washingtonville, and a few things were left there upon which Mr. Wolfe has the attachment. He does not think that he will recover the amount claimed, which is $48, and which is due him for farming implements purchased sometime ago. It is understood that there are several creditors who are anxious about their claims.

MANIA FOR TAKING MEDICINE.

A Young Man Calls on Local Physicians and Works a Novel Game.

A young well dressed man called at Dr. Long's house on Park avenue yesterday and complained of not feeling well. The doctor gave him some powders and made the usual charge, whereupon the stranger said that he had left his money home, but that he would return soon and pay the bill. Upon leaving Dr. Long's house he went to Dr. Rushmore's and tried the same trick, but it did not work. Roundsman Mattox happened along at the time and took charge of the young man. He was told to leave the town at once and no charge would be made against him. He left.

Struck in the Eyeball.

While attempting to pry a nail out of a barrel at the fire department head quarters this morning, the nail broke off and flew up striking Chief Doane in the left eyeball. After applying several simple remedies and getting no relief from the pain, the Chief called on Dr. Ard, who after investigating the wound, said that it was nothing serious. The ball of the eye is quite badly swollen.

Everything in Order.

The Union County Grand Jury made a personal inspection of the Union County Jail yesterday and paid a high tribute to Warden Blore for the excellent way the institution is kept.

EQUAL TAXATION ISSUE.

MOVEMENT TO COMPEL RAILROADS TO PAY MORE TAXES.

Missionary Work to be Done This Summer by Prominent Men Throughout the State and to End With a Big Convention

Equal taxation, which was one of the leading themes discussed during the recent session of the Legislature, is to be made a political issue this fall in the State of New Jersey. The equal taxation bill, which attracted so much attention through the session, was not passed, on the ground that the subject was one of great magnitude, and not understood by the people of the State.

To overcome this the advocates of equal taxation have prepared plans for a campaign of education, ending with a general convention on the subject of taxation in the city of Trenton on September 7th, at which time there will be a generous discussion of the subject by representatives of Good Government Clubs, and of the Boards of Trade throughout the State of New Jersey. The plan proposed is, after this convention, to pledge all candidates named for the Assembly and Senate to support an equal taxation bill.

The subject is one of great interest in the larger counties, but so far Hudson is the only county that has organized in the interest of this particular reform. The support of the measure comes from both parties, and has received the indorsement of the Boards of Trade and Good Goverment organizations. It is claimed by the adoption of equal taxation the railroads will pay the same rate of tax as individuals, and that the localities in the State will be enriched to the extent of nearly $2,000,000 a year. Hudson and Essex counties would be the largest gainers by the change in the system of taxation.

The subject was thoroughly discussed before the Legislature and before the Committee on Railroads and Canals, but the idea became prevalent that Hudson County had something up her sleeve in the Queen taxation bill, and they were rather suspicious of it, particularly as Hudson County was represented by a solid Democratic delegation in the Legislature.

To overcome these prejudices it is proposed to send out into the various municipalities men who are familiar with the subject of equal taxation to address meetings and distribute literature. Allan L. McDermott, former Democratic Chairman; Congressman Thomas McEwan, Joseph Dear, Charles Corkin and men of like reputation are to be utilized as equal taxation missionaries in the summer and early fall. It is argued that there is no politics in the issue, but that it must come sooner or later, or else some of the municipalities will go into bankruptcy.

It promises to be an interesting fight, for the railroads naturally oppose it, as the increase in taxation comes out of their cash box. The railroads, however, claim that they would favor some change of taxation, but not on the basis proposed by the equal taxation advocates.

A joint resolution was passed during the session of the Legislature providing for the appointment of a commission to take up the subject of taxation, particularly for the taxation of railroad property.

Practical Experiments.

Prof. John C. Gifford, who recently acquired the Mary Walker property, known as "Goose Point," located on the west bank of the Great Egg Harbor River about two miles below Mays Landing, and which contains about 175 acres of land, is converting that former wilderness into a veritable Garden of Eden. Mr. Gifford has named his plantation "Cedarhurst," and will conduct experiments in forestry there. Hundreds of local and exotic trees have been set out, and their growth and culture will be an object of study. Mr. Gifford has disposed of several plots to Philadelphia and New York friends interested in botanical study and indications point that Cedarhurst is destined to soon become a colony of "Professorial Bohemians." Mr. Gifford is secretary of the New Jersey Forestry Association, and is well known in this city.

THE WAR REVIEWED

Queen Regent of Spain Deals with the Situation in Cuba.

THE SPEECH FROM THE THRONE

The Rebellion Begun on the Eve of Contemplated Reforms—The Insurgents Principally Foreigners and Negroes.

Madrid, May 12.—The new cortes met yesterday afternoon. Great interest was manifested in the speech from the throne opening the session, which, it was known, would deal at length with the situation in Cuba. The speech was read in person by the queen regent, representing the youthful king. Her majesty said: "Heavy preoccupations lie on my mind on addressing you on this day of the opening of the session of the cortes. All of you have with me those preoccupations, as I am sure they are shared by the nation. You cannot have forgotten those days, rich in hopes, of February and March of last year, when the legislative bodies approved the law to reconstruct the administration of Cuba and Porto Rico. To their enforcement the representatives of the loyal parties of Cuba an Porto Rico pledged themselves, and those who share the power in the peninsula, but those good intentions were counteracted on the 21st of February, when the discussion had not yet begun in the senate, by the discovery by the Governor-general of Cuba of symptoms of rebellion, and three days later it was necessary to proclaim martial law.

Gave the Secessionists Impulse.

"It was made plain that the announcement of reforms, applauded unanimously by the liberal parties, far from restraining the secessionists gave them impulse to resort to arms with the clear intention of preventing the application of liberal reforms. From the first moment that was understood by the illustrious general to whom the pacification of the territory was intrusted the same declaration was made to his government by the commercial agent of the United States, who said that the revolutionists, seeing in the reforms great advantage to their country, quickened the movement in order to prevent their aspiration of creating an independent state from becoming impaired.

Would Be a Step Backward.

"The rebel chiefs, principally foreigners and negroes, did not wait long to say they did not give importance to political, economical or administrative reforms, no matter how liberal, even the most extended form of local home rule, if they had to submit to the sovereignty of Spain, and the good and the prosperity of the Cubans was nothing to them. What the consequence would be of the substitution of another sovereignty for that of Spain over races nearly balanced and with irreconcilable characters, there is no statesman who will not forsee the final result would be that Cuba would take a step backward in civilization.

Not a Time Now for Reforms.

"The worthy general who governs Cuba, disposed, as his predecessor had always been, to obey all the orders of the government, is convinced, as the Cuban conservatives are, that the enforcement of the reform laws which have been promulgated, far from serving to bring peace, will make it more difficult. From all this it is deduced that the immediate application of these reforms, even if it were possible to enforce them completely, will not obtain a good result with a deficient application of them.

Hope of Aid from a Great Nation.

"Not for that has the government abandoned nor will it abandon the general study of future legislation for the Antilles, for the moment, after a new intervention by the cortes, the opportunity arrives reforms will have to be definitely established. Fortunately, the insurrection is decreasing in the opinion of the superior authorities of the island. If it has not yet decreased completely it is due principally to the great and frequent helps received from abroad, deceived as those who favor the revolution are, with false descriptions of the political and administrative situation of Cuba."

Y., May 12.—The members of the Greenbush village board of trustees have been served with an injunction restraining them from appointing police commissioners under the bi-partisan law, recently enacted, until after the courts shall have passed upon the constitutionality of the law. A SCOUNDREL TO THE LAST.

Holmes Made No Will and No Provision for Mrs. Pitezel, as He Promised.

Philadelphia, May 12.—Lawyer Rotan has concluded his examination of the papers and other material which H. H. Holmes turned over to him on the day of the latter's execution. Mr. Rotan states that he found among them nothing of public interest. There is no will among the papers and no provision is made for Mrs. Pitzel. Most of the papers were letters addressed to Holmes' family, bidding them farewell, and to other persons explaining points in the cases against him. Among his effects were a number of remembrances which he desired to have sent to his wife (his first wife) and son at Gilmanton, N. H., and these trinkets will be forwarded. When Thomas A. Fahy, the attorney for Mrs. Pitezel, learned that Holmes had not left a will and had not carried out his promise to provide for the widow of the man he murdered, he stated that he was both surprised and disappointed. Mr. Fahy had hoped that when Holmes had sincerely promised to leave one-third of his property to Mrs. Pitzel that he would keep his word. Mrs. Pitzel will leave for her home in Gala, Ill., to-morrow.

PATERSON'S BIG FIRE LOSS.

Two Conflagrations Last Evening Destroy $400,000 Worth of Property.

Paterson, N. J., May 12.—The two upper stories of the malt house of the Hinchliffe Malting & Brewing company was destroyed by fire last evening. Three hundred and fifty thousand bushels of malt were burned and damaged by water. The loss will amount to about $300,000, and is covered by insurance. While the entire fire department was engaged on the building an alarm was sent in from the Machinists' association building on the bend of the river below the Passaic falls, a blaze having been discovered in the upper story occupied by Garret Planter, a silk threwster. Chief Engineer Stagg dispatched to Passaic for two engines, but before they arrived the structure was nearly consumed. The Hasnichen brothers occupied the second floor for weaving silk braid goods, and a few small firms were located on the lower floor. The silk firms estimate their loss at $50,000 each, partly insured. The building, one of the oldest in the city, was owned by John J. Moorehead, whose loss is fully covered by insurance.

Health

Depends upon keeping the blood in a pure condition, free from disease germs, and yet there are very few people who have perfectly pure blood. Hood's Sarsaparilla cleanses, vitalizes and enriches the blood, throwing out the impurities that clog and irritate the system and permits no lodgment of the seeds of disease. Read the following:

"I cannot recommend Hood's Sarsaparilla too highly for it has done wonders for me. I was and all run down and my health was so poor I could not get out of doors. I was not able to do anything, being troubled with asthma and heart disease. I was nervous and could not sleep nights. I had become completely discouraged when I happened to read an advertisement of Hood's Sarsaparilla and concluded to give it a trial. After taking the first bottle I felt better and since taking five bottles I am so much improved that I feel like a new man. I am now able to do a fair day's work and sleep

Can't Eat Breakfast—

a failing altogether too common with Americans. Due generally to excesses of some sort, whether over-work or dissipation the result is the same. "The candle is being burnt at both ends." The man who begins the day in this way is living on vital forces that should be husbanded. If you can't eat in the morning as you should, take a glass of milk containing a tablespoonful of

Bovinine

The effect it marvelous. You will have taken a food stimulant that nourishes, makes new blood new bone, new flesh and nerve tissue, and one that has no reaction. Every vital organ of the body will be kept in a normal condition and will be enabled to throw off disease. Bovinine is a powerful concentration of the life-maintaining elements of lean beef, all of which are preserved by the special cold process employed in its manufacture. Doctors everewhere will commend it, and druggists sell it.

COMPETITOR'S CREW

Significance of Spain's Action in Delaying Their Execution.

THEY MAY EVENTUALLY GO FREE

Minister de Lome Said To Have Recommended Commutation of Sentences—The Reported Resignation of Weyler—Another Filibuster.

Washington, May 12.—The action of the Spanish government in postponing execution of the death sentences upon the American citizens captured on board the schooner Competitor until the views of the United States government respecting the application to their cases of the treaty of 1795 and the protocol of 1877 can be presented and considered means a delay of some weeks, at least, in the attempt to carry out the sentences. The matter will be made the subject of correspondence on the interpretation to be given the treaty provisions, and meantime popular excitement both here and in Spain will have time to become allayed. It is stated here on the highest authority that the Spanish minister has advised his government to commute the sentences, and that there is good reason to believe that his advice will be followed. It is expected that in the end the Americans will be fully pardoned unless, after a civil trial, fairly and dispassionately conducted, they shall be found guilty. In that event the sentence of the civil court will probably be carried out without protest from our government.

PROBABLY THE LAURADA.

Transfers Made to a Mysterious Steamer Off Cape May, N. J.

Cape May, N. J., May 12.—From an incident which occurred at sea off here yesterday afternoon it may be that the steamship Laurada took no munitions of war aboard near New York, but that she received her cargo outside the three mile limit this afternoon. A large steamer was noticed by people on the shore laying to some miles out and blowing off steam. Close in shore was a schooner hove to. Late in the afternoon a tug came down the coast from the north and another steamed out of Delaware bay. The tugs took the schooner in tow and steamed out to where the steamship was. The tugs and the schooner were alongside the steamer for some time, and what was unmistakably a transfer of cargo from the sailing vessel to the steamship was made. After the transfer had been made the tugs steamed away and the steamship soon disappeared below the horizon, going in a southeasterly direction.

The Report of Weyler's Resignation.

Havana, May 12.—The report that Captain-General Weyler has resigned because of the action of the home government in the case of the Competitor filibusters is true, but it is not accepted with confidence by the public here. It is understood that the government refused to accept the resignation, and ordered Gen. Weyler to remain at his post under the present circumstances.

WILL OF A. W. STEARNS.

Big Bequest to a Hospital, Providing It Adopts His Name.

Salem, Mass., May 12.—By the will of Artemus W. Stearns of Lawrence the sum of $50,000 is to be paid eight years after his death to the Ladie's Union Charitable asssociation for the use and support of the Lawrence City hospital, and as soon as the estate amounts to $500,000, either by accumulation or otherwise, the income of one-half of it is to be paid the same society for the same purpose, both of these bequests being on the condition that the name of the institution be permanently changed to the A. W. Stearns hospital, and in the event of a refusal to accept the bequests upon these conditions the money is to be devoted to the establishment and maintenance of the A. W. Stearns Home for aged people in Lawrence. Upon the death of the three beneficiaries, who are to have a life interest in the estate, the income of the other half is to be devoted to the worthy poor of Lawrence, without regard to their nationality or religion.

School Houses for Meeting Places.

Albany, May 12.—State superintendent of public instruction Charles R. Skinner, in an appeal regarding the use of a public school house in Scriba, Oswego county, holds that the school house cannot be used for meeting purposes by the Independent Order of Good Templars, if any objection is made. The school law prohibits the use of school houses except for school purposes.

FOREST FIRES RAGING.

Great Destruction Near Port Jervis—Drouth Threatens Hay Crop.

Port Jervis, N. Y., May 12.—Destructive forest fires have been raging in this locality since Friday. The burned territory extends from Gilmans, on the Monticello railroad, through Hartwood and Huguenot to Cahoonzie, a distance of about fifteen miles. The inhabitants of these places are fighting the fire, but with little effect. Much valuable timber, several thousand cords of wood and many railroad ties have already been destroyed. So intense is the fire that the flames overleaped by a single bound Cedar swamp, which is half a mile across and swept on at the speed of a race horse. The property of the Hartwood Park association was in the path of the fire and was burned over, although the large club house was saved. Destructive forest fires are also raging along the Delaware division of the Erie railroad from this place to Hancock, and a heavy pall of smoke overhangs the track. The drouth in this section threatens to utterly destroy the hay crop.

HIS BOOKS IN BAD SHAPE.

Camden's ex-City Treasurer's Shortage Believed To Be About $11,000.

Camden, N. J., May 12.—The Camden county grand jury, investigating the condition of ex-City Treasurer Michellon's accounts, will not call witnesses until to-morrow, and in the meantime Prosecutor Jenkins will secure a copy of the expert's report and arrange for carrying on the investigation. The actual shortage of the ex-city treasurer is said to be about $11,000. The books and accounts were in such a neglected condition that it was difficult to trace many items of expenditure. Mr. Michellon says he can explain most of the apparent discrepancies, which he admits are due to his failure to keep the books in proper shape.

SHE IS A GREAT CRUISER.

Brooklyn Developes 21.07 Knots on Her Builders' Trial Trip.

Delaware Breakwater, May 12.—The new cruiser Brooklyn, in her builders' trial trip yesterday, under forced draught, developed a speed of 21.07 knots an hour, which is equivalent to twenty-four statute miles. This speed was over a knot greater than the contract with the government calls for. In every respect the Brooklyn proved successful, and in the run not a bearing or a journal got hot. The wonderful steadiness of the ship while being driven under forced draught was remarked by all aboard. The fine lines of the hull were shown in the way the Brooklyn goes through the water when being speeded. There was no great bow wave, but the vessel threw the water to each side as cleanly as a knife cuts through cloth.

BROWN COLLEGE SUSPENSIONS

Editor Flagg Accused of Cribbing and Chas. Foskett of Lying About His Sins.

Providence, May 12.—Editor Burton S. Flagg of the Brown College Magazine has been suspended for "cribbing" an article of President Andrews' and signing his own name as the author. Charles Jay Foskett has also been suspended for immoral conduct and lying about his sins to President Andrews. Not long ago seven students were suspended for plagiarism, but through the influence and pressure brought by young John D. Rockefeller all were returned to the university.

On the tariff question the Hon. William McKinley is known, but on that other equally important matter, sound money, he is the great unknown.

Benjamin Urner, whose death occurred at Fanwood Sunday morning, was a candidate for Senator on the Greenback ticket in this county in 1881. He polled 358 votes. His opponents were Benjamin Vail, Republican, and Louis Hyer, Democrat, the former being elected.

The exports of bread-stuff during the last ten months show an increase of over $22,000,000 in value over those of the same period a year ago. At this rate the surplus of this country should soon be cleared out of the way, and open up a brisk market for the coming crop.

Richard A. Storrs, for thirty-nine years connected with the finance department of New York city, and whose death occurred yesterday, was a brother of Justice Storrs, of Kensington avenue, this city. The latter has also been connected with the same department for a great many years, and it is thought he may succeed his brother as the city's "wise man."

Congress compelled the use of the old Ford theatre building in Washington for years as a department for that of clerical work, because they refused, as a matter of economy, to provide better quarters. The building collapsed and it has just been figured out that it cost Uncle Sam $264,000 to settle the claims of the killed and maimed.

The original charges of insubordination preferred against Patrolman Vanderweg are not as serious as that of where insolence is alleged when he was brought before the Mayor. By his actions before the Mayor the officer has greatly damaged his side of the case. A little more courtesy at the time would have doubtless proved an antidote in dispelling the original offense against the rules of the department.

L. A. Thompson, the new Clerk in Chancery, has just submitted his first monthly report, in compliance with the new law. The gross receipts for the month of April were $3,350.82, which amount was paid over to the State Treasurer. The entire expenses of the office amounted to about $1,700, leaving a clear profit to the State of about $1,600. This would indicate that from $15,000 to $18,000 a year will be realized to the State by the act of the Legislature changing the system of the office.

DESPERATE POLITICIANS.

A Correspondent Thus Characterizes the Republicans and the Silver Act.

To the Editor of The Daily Press:—In July, 1890, every Republican in Congress supported the Sherman Silver Purchase law. It was signed by Republican President Benjamin Harrison. It brought fearful disaster, horrible destruction and heart-breaking, abject suffering on the masses of the country according to the testimony of Depew, Reed, Frye, Morrill, Dolph, Mayor Gilbert and other high, eminent Republicans. It was the price paid for the passage of the McKinley act. It was a damnable sale and compromise. It was nasty log-rolling on the style of after me the deluge. It was the conclave expedient of desperate politicians. It was a piece of wild, wierd finnance, condemned by every banker and business man in the country. The Republicans now shout for sound money. What is sound money? Does the silver bill of July 14th, 1890, represent the Republican idea of sound money? Will some Republican gentleman of Plainfield explain—Mr. Horr or Mayor Gilbert for instance. Let it here be stated that the country was not threatened in 1890 with the free coinage of silver because President Harrison could have vetoed that, and there were not enough votes in the House of Representatives to pass it over his veto, therefore the statement that the Sherman law was passed to stop free coinage is a lie, and it is the cry of the tricky politician. The McKinley act was bought and paid for with the Sherman bill.

Let The Press sound the key note on this subject, and make the Plainfield Republicans defend their party legislation, or else get into the Democratic band-wagon.

WEDDING JUST ANNOUNCED.

Miss Fanny I. Spencer and William C. Force Married Last December.

The announcement of the marriage of Miss Fanny Independence Spencer, daughter of Borough Tax Collector and Mrs. H. N. Spencer, and William Cutter Force, son of Mr. and Mrs. Henry W. Force, of New street, was made public last evening. The ceremony was performed at St. John's rectory, Elizabeth, Tuesday, December 31st, 1895, by Rev. A. Glazebrook, the rector. The announcement caused considerable surprise to both families, as nothing was known of the event until Mrs. Force showed the marriage certificate to her parents. The fact was then made known to Mr. Force's family, and, of course, they were surprised.

The parents show no displeasure over the affair and are perfectly satisfied with the marriage. Mrs. Force is a most estimable young woman while Mr. Force, who is an employe at Scott's Press Works, is a young man bearing many good qualities. Both have a large circle of friends and are well known among the young people of the city and borough. They have not decided yet where they will reside.

A GIRL WITH NERVE.

She Deliberately Sets Herself Afire and Burns to Death.

Annie Thorin, a Swiss girl, twenty years old, committed suicide yesterday afternoon by the roadside near Somerville by setting fire to her clothing and deliberately burning herself to death. She was found an hour later, sitting with her head in a hedge fence, her clothing completely burned from her body, and her flesh charred in a horrible manner.

The girl came to the household of James L. Greenleaf, a mechanical engineer, who has an office at No. 1 Broadway, New York, on Saturday last. Mr. Greenleaf has a summer house near Somerville. The servants noticed that the girl was melancholy, and acted strangely on Saturday. She disappeared at 11 o'clock yesterday, and nothing more was heard of her until Mr. Greenleaf was told by a neighbor that her body had been found by a passing farmer.

There was every evidence of deliberate suicide, and Dr. Wagoner turned the body over to an undertaker for burial.

Professor Munyon is honored today as the leading authority in the medical world. His new and humane methods of treatment have swept away all the old-fashioned ideas of doctoring with poisonous drugs that create a dozen diseases in the effort to get rid of one. He does not claim that he has one remedy that will cure all complaints, but that he has prepared a specific cure for nearly every disease. He does not claim that Munyon's Rheumatism Cure will cure consumption, dyspepsia or any other complaint, but he does assert that it will cure rheumatism. Munyon's Dyspepsia Cure is prepared expressly to cure dyspepsia; Munyon's Cough Cure to cure coughs; Munyon's Catarrh Remedies to cure catarrh; Munyon's Kidney Cure to cure kidney troubles. The same may be said of all Munyon's different remedies. They may be obtained at all drug stores, mostly at 25 cents a bottle.

The through express trains arrived at their respective destinations on schedule time 95 per cent of the time. This is a performance rarely equalled by roads operating as many trains as are run on the B. & O., and speaks well for the efficiency of the rank and file, as well as the officials of the operating department.

There is more catarrh in this section of the country than all other diseases put together, and until the last few years was supposed to be incurable. For a great many years doctors pronounced it a local disease, and prescribed local remedies, and by continually failing to cure with local treatment, pronounced it incurable. Science has proven catarrh to be a constitutional disease and therefore requires constitutional treatment. Hall's Catarrh Cure, manufactured by F. J. Cheney & Co., Toledo, Ohio, is the only constitutional cure on the market. It is taken internally in doses from 10 drops to a teaspoonful. It acts directly on the blood and mucous surfaces of the system. They offer one hundred dollars for any case it fails to cure. Send for circulars and testimonials. Address F. J. Harry M. Jaquett Has Achieved Success in the Clothing Business.

Springtide, an advertising publication, has this to say about Harry M. Jaquett:

A business man must make and hold friends in order to achieve success. He cannot depend upon a floating custom, so to speak, but must have a regular clientage, who respect his business sagacity. This is usually the hardest task of a young man starting in business.

Harry M. Jaquett, the popular clothier, of 123 East Front, Plainfield, has achieved this task. He has achieved a most noteworthy success in the clothing business. Unlike some, he had a thorough training before commencing for himself; for many years he was the buyer for the largest clothing house in Central Pennsylvania. Since coming to Plainfield and commencing business he has had a large and constant increase in his business; few firms can show the same success within the same time. He has recently been obliged to move into a new building on account of increasing trade. He carries the finest and best selected stock of clothing in Plainfield, making a specialty of children's clothing of every description. Ladies, can find no more pleasant place to purchase clothing for the children.

The manager, Jerry Van Winkle, Jr., is well-known in Plainfield and has a host of friends. He has added to the success of the house by his pleasing address and business ability.

—The party or parties that left a ladies' hat and cape in the rear of a yard on East Third street above Fillmore avenue the night of the circus, can have the same by applying to Mrs. Hafner, at the above address.

For Your Protection.

Catarrh "cures" in liquid form to be taken internally, usually contain either mercury or iodide of potassa, or both, which are injurious if too long taken. Catarrh is a local, not a blood disease, caused by sudden change to cold and damp weather. It starts in the nasal passages. Cold in the head causes excessive flow of mucus and, if repeatedly neglected, the results of catarrh will follow, and oftentimes an offensive discharge. Ely's Cream Balm is the acknowledged cure for these troubles and contains no mercury nor any injurious drug.

One swallow does not make Spring, but one swallow of One Minute Cough Cure brings relief. For sale by L. W. Randolph, 143 West Front street.

GREATER NEW YORK

The Proposed City Will Have Over 3,000,000 Inhabitants.

SECOND LARGEST IN THE WORLD

Paris Will Then Step Down to Third Place—Provisions of the Bill Signed Yesterday Afternoon by Governor Morton.

New York May 12.—The New York city consolidation bill signed yesterday afternoon by Gov. Morton will form a city the second largest in the world. It will have a population of over 3,000,000 and will only be surpased by London, with a population of 4,200.000. Paris will then take third place with her population 2,400,000. The territory embraced in the area of the proposed city aggregates nearly 318 square miles. The bill provides that Kings county, Richmond county, Long Island City, Newtown, Flushing and Jamaica, and that part of the town of Hempstead in the county of Queens which is westerly of a straight line drawn from the southeasterly point of the town of Flushing through the middle of the channel between Rockaway Beach and Shelter Island, in Queen's county, to the Atlantic ocean, shall be consolidated with the city and county of New York. For all purposes the local administration of the territories enumerated shall be performed and exercised by the respective bodies, politic and corporate, to which they are now intrusted until so far as hereafter changed by law.

Provisions for the New Charter.

The commission created to draw up a charter for the greater city is to consist of the president of the old Greater New York commission, the mayors of New York, Brooklyn and Long Island City, the state engineer and surveyor, the attorney general and nine other persons, residents of the enlarged territory, to be appointed by the governor. This commission must make a final report to the legislature on February 1, 1897, and submit therewith bills to provide for the government of the municipal corporation created by the act; and among other things for attaining an equal and uniform rate of taxation and of valuation for taxation throughout the whole territory. The cities of New York and Brooklyn are directed to raise such proportion of the sum of $25,000 as is necessary for the uses of the commission in carrying out the provisions of the act. Nothing in the act is to be construed as attempting to affect in any way the boundaries, government, rights, powers, duties, obligations, limitations or disabilities of any county or officer thereof, as fixed by the constitution. Consolidation is to take effect on January 1, 1898. The rest of the act takes effect immediately.

Maine's Electrical Storm.

Augusta, Me., May 12.—The electrical storm of Sunday night did more damage throughout the country than was first reported. The storm was of the cyclone order, extending over an area of two to three miles, completely wrecking many barns in Belgrade and Sidney, and levelling fences and trees. Lightning set fire to the house and the farm buildings of George E. Damren in Sidney and they were destroyed.

Ebb Tide of Immigration.

New York, May 12.—"This is the beginning of the end of the Italian immigration for 1896," said Dr. Joseph H. Senner, the commissioner of immgration, this morning. "I have private advices from Italy which inform me that after this present week there will be very few steerage passengers from Italy. The emigration fell off so suddenly last week that one steamer chartered has been withdrawn."

Will Declare an Irish Dividend.

Boston, May 12.—The directors of the Old Colony Mutual Fire Insurance company of this city have voted to make an assessment upon the policy holders to make up for the impairment due to heavy fire losses. The amount of the assessment is to be 50 per cent. of the contingent liabilities, or one and one-half times the annual premium.

Letter Carriers Suspended.

Boston, May 12.—Ten letter carriers of the Boston postoffice, against whom charges were preferred by inspectors from Washington, have been suspended for periods varying from two to fifteen days each. The charges were for "loafing" on their routes.

BIG DAMAGE CLAIMS

Ford's Theatre Disaster Will Cost Uncle Sam $264,000.

TO PAY FOR DEATHS AND INJURIES

$5,000 for the Life of Each Person Crushed Out in the Terrible Accident—Report of the Committee Appointed To Adjust the Damages Due.

Washington, May 12.—The report of the joint committee authorized to adjust the damages due those injured in the Ford's theatre disaster has been made to congress. One year ago $105,000 was appropriated for twenty-one clerks who were either killed outright or died from the effects of the injuries received at the time. This was at the rate of $5,000 each. The report just made allow $5,000 each in the cases of three who have died since, and appropriates $144,800, in amounts ranging from $50 to $5,000 for those who were injured. This makes a grand total of $264,000 that has been or will be appropriated as a result of that awful accident in which twenty-four persons were either killed outright or died subsequently from injuries, and 105 were injuried or sustained serious nervous shock. A provision in the bill reported requires the beneficiaries to sign a release to all further demands upon the government.

DEATH OF H. C. BUNNER.

Puck's Editor Passes Away at His Home at Nutley, N. J.

New York, May 12.—Henry Cuyler Bunner, editor of Puck, who died at his home in Nutley, N. J., yesterday afternoon of consumption, came to this city in the early seventies, and for a time was a clerk in the house of G. Amsinck & Co. in Beaver street. The first that his friends remember of his writing was done for the Acardian, a literary weekly, which had a short life. After that Mr. Bunner did reporting for a daily newspaper for a little while, and as soon as Puck was started he began working for it. Since that time he has done a large amount of writing, and while a large part of his work has first appeared in Puck and then been collected into other forms, he has produced many independent works, including poems, novels and magazine articles, besides plays and books which were the joint work of himself and Brander Matthews. About ten years ago Mr. Bunner married Miss Learned of New London, a sister of Walter Learned, a well known writer. They have three children, two girls and a boy.

Death of the Oldest Freemason.

London, May 12.—Dr. Salmon, the oldest Freemason in the world, is dead. He was 106 years old. There appears to be no room for doubting the accuracy of the report of Dr. Salmon's age, for he had in his possession, in addition to other documentary evidence, the diary of his mother, in which his birth in 1790 is duly reported. Dr. Salmon was on the continent in the stirring days of Waterloo, and possessed a great fund of interesting historical anecdotes.

Fears for Safety of Sealers.

St. Johns, N. F., May 12.—Fears are entertained for the safety of the crews of the sealing schooners Coleman and Primerose, which sailed from Bonne bay early in March to prosecute the seal fishery in the gulf of St. Lawrence. It is believed the vessels were either crushed and the crews perished or they are caught in the ice and the men are starving. About forty lives are involved.

Col. Hain's Successor.

New York, May 12.—Russell Sage denies the rumor that ex-President McLeod of the Reading railroad is to succeed the late Col. Hain as superintendent of the Manhattan elevated railroad. He said: "Mr. McLeod is a very able and competant man, but he is only one of many such. Nothing has yet been decided. We may not go outside of our own force for Col. Hain's successor."

Col. Hain's Body Taken to Danville, Pa.

do you eat iron

Some persons are always taking iron. If weak and easily exhausted; pale and without appetite; if the nervous system is weak, and sleep difficult, what do you take? Iron? But iron cannot supply food to the tissues; nor does it have any power to change the activity of unhealthy organs and bring them back to health. Cod-liver oil is what you need. The oil feeds the poorly-nourished tissues, and makes rich blood. Iodine, bromine, and other ingredients, which form part of the oil, have special power to alter unhealthy action.

Scott's Emulsion

of Cod-liver Oil, with Hypophosphites, is the most palatable way to take cod-liver oil. The hypophosphites supply healthy nerve action, which controls all the processes of life.

SCOTT'S EMULSION has been indorsed by the medical profession for twenty years. (Ask your doctor.) This is because it is always palatable—always uniform—always contains the purest Norwegian Cod-liver Oil and Hypophosphites.

Put up in 50 cent and $1.00 sizes. The small size may be enough to cure your cough or help your baby. All druggists.

In the streets of Paris, at Arques, and Coutras, and Ivry, blood flowed like water that the blood of St. Bartholomew might be forgotten—that blood which, by the grace of God, Navarre saw fall from the dice box on the eve of the massacre! The last of the Valois passed to the vaults of St. Denis; and a greater king, the first of all Frenchmen, alive or dead, the bravest, gayest, wisest of the land, succeeded him; yet even he had to fall by the knife, in a moment most unhappy for his country, before France, horror-stricken, put away the treachery and evil from her.

Talking with Louis as we rode, it was not unnatural—nay, it was the natural result of the situation—that I should avoid one subject. Yet that subject was the uppermost in my thoughts. What were the vidame's intentions? What was the meaning of this strange journey? What was to be Louis' fate? I shrank with good reason from asking him these questions. There could be so little room for hope, even after that smile which I had seen Bezers smile, that I dared not dwell upon them. I should but torture him and myself.

So it was he who first spoke about it. Not at that time, but after sunset, when the dusk had fallen upon us, and found us still plodding southward with tired horses; a link outwardly like other links in the long chain of riders, toiling onwards. Then he said suddenly: "Do you know whither we are going, Anne?"

"We came to warn you of him."

I started, and found myself struggling with a strange confusion before I could reply. "Home," I suggested at random.

"Home? No. And yet nearly home. To Cahors," he answered with an odd quietude. "Your home, my boy, I shall never see again, nor Kit! Nor my own Kit!" It was the first time I had heard him call her by the fond name we used ourselves. And the pathos in his tone as of the past, not the present, as of pure memory—I was very thankful that I could not in the dusk see his face—shook my self-control. I wept. "Nay, my lad," he went on, speaking softly and leaning from his saddle so that he could lay his hand on my shoulder, "we are all men together. We must be brave. Tears cannot help us, so we should leave them to the—women."

I cried more passionately at that. Indeed his own voice quavered over the last word. But in a moment he was talking to me coolly and quietly. I had muttered something to the effect that the vidame would not dare—it would be too public.

"There is no question of daring in it," he replied. "And the more public it is, the better he will like it. They have dared to take thousands of lives since yesterday. There is no one to call him to account since the king—our king forsooth!—has declared every Huguenot an outlaw to be killed wherever he be met with. No, when Bezers disarmed me yonder," he pointed as he spoke to his wound, "I looked of course for instant death. Anne! I saw blood in his eyes! But he did not strike."

"Why not?" I asked, in suspense.

"I can only guess," Louis answered with a sigh. "He told me that my life was in his hands, but that he should take it at his own time. Further, that if I would not give my word to go with him without trying to escape, he would throw me to those howling dogs outside. I gave my word. We are on the road together. And, oh, Anne! yesterday, only yesterday at this time, I was riding home with Teligny from the Louvre, where we had been playing at paume with the king! And the world—the world was very fair."

"I saw you, or rather Croisette did," I muttered as his sorrows—not for himself, but for his friends—forced him to stop. "Yet how, Louis, do you know that we are going to Cahors?"

"He told me as we passed through the gates, that he was appointed lieutenant governor of Quercy to carry out the edict against religion. Do you not see, Anne?" my companion added bitterly, "to kill me at once were too small a revenge for him! He must torture me—or rather, he would if he could—by the pains of anticipation, besides, my execution would so finely open his bed of justice. Bah!" and Pavannes raised his head proudly, "I fear him not! I fear him not a jot!"

For a moment he forgot Kit, the loss of his friends, his own doom. He snapped his fingers in derision of his foe.

But my heart sank miserably. The vidame's rage, I remembered, had been directed rather against my cousin than her lover; and now by the light of his threats I read Bezers' purpose more clearly than Louis could. His aim was to punish the woman who had played with him. To do so he was bringing her lover from Paris that he might execute him—after giving her notice! That was it; after giving her notice, it might be in her very presence! He would lure her to Cahors, and then—

I shuddered. I well might feel that a precipice was opening at my feet. There was something in the plan so devilish, yet so accordant with those stories I had heard of the wolf, that I felt no doubt of my insight. I read his evil mind, and saw in a moment why he had troubled himself with us. He hoped to draw mademoiselle to Cahors by our means.

Of course I said nothing of this to Louis. I hid my feelings as well as I could. But I vowed a great vow that at the eleventh hour we would balk the vidame. Surely if all else failed we could kill him, and though we died ourselves, spare Kit this ordeal. My tears were dried up as by a fire. My heart with a great and noble rage—or so it seemed to me!

I do not think that there was ever any journey so strange as this one of ours. We met with the same incidents which had pleased us on the road to Paris. But their novelty was gone. Gone too were the cozy chats with old rogues of landlords and good-natured dames. We were traveling now in such force that our coming was rather a terror to the innkeeper than a boon. How much the lieutenant governor of Quercy, going down to his province, requisitioned in the king's name; and for how much he paid, we could only judge from the gloomy looks which followed us as we rode away each morning. Such looks were not solely due, I fear, to the news from Paris, although for some time we were the first bearers of the tidings.

Presently, on the third day of our journey, I think, couriers from the court passed us; and henceforth forestalled us. One of these messengers—who I learned from the talk about me was bound for Cahors with letters for the lieutenant governor and the count-bishop—the vidame interviewed and stopped. How it was managed I do not know, but I fear the count-bishop never got his letters, which I fancy would have given him some joint authority. Certainly we left the messenger—a prudent fellow with a care for his skin—in comfortable quarters at Limoges, whence I do not doubt he presently returned to Paris at his leisure.

The strangeness of the journey, however, arose from none of these things, but from the relations of our party to one another. After the first day we four rode together, unmolested, so long as we kept near the center of the straggling cavalcade. The vidame always rode alone, and in front, brooding with bent head and somber face over his revenge, as I supposed. He would ride in this fashion, speaking to no one and giving no orders, for a day together. At times I came near to pitying him. He had loved Kit in his masterful way, the way of one not wont to be thwarted, and he had lost her—lost her, whatever might happen. He would get nothing after all by his revenge. Nothing but ashes in the mouth. And so I saw in softer moments something inexpressibly melancholy in that solitary giant figure pacing always alone.

He seldom spoke to us. More rarely to Louis. When he did the harshness of his voice and his cruel eyes betrayed the gloomy hatred in which he held him. At meals he ate at one end of the table; we four at the other, as three of us had done on that first evening in Paris. And sometimes the covert looks, the grim sneer he shot at his rival—his prisoner—made me shiver even in the sunshine. Sometimes, on the other hand, when I took him unawares, I found an expression on his face I could not read.

I told Croisette, but warily, my suspicions of his purpose. He heard me, less astounded to all appearance than I had expected. Presently I learned the reason. He had his own view. "Do you not think it possible, Anne," he suggested, timidly — we were, of course, alone at the time—"that he thinks to make Louis resign mademoiselle?"

Delicate Dress Goods.

Some gowns are so dainty in the weave, so delicate in tint, that they seem to soil by being looked at—one or two wearings making them unpresentable, NOT USELESS. We make a specialty of cleaning fine fabrics, the more delicate the material, the better the results. Sometimes an accident will ruin a gown, without injuring the texture. We dye them then, sometimes we get a prettier effect than the original color. Fine goods stand redying. The finer the material the better the new color. We charge so little for cleaning or dyeing, that even if you are in doubt as to the result, it's worth while to experiment. Want a new evening gown for a dollar or two? S. McClave, of Stevens "Prep" School, who won the one-qaarter mile bicycle race at the High School games last Saturday on the Crescent Oval, is the son of the head of the firm that manufacture the Colonial wheel. This was McClave's first race on the track.

A. B. Barnett, of the Jersey Wheel Company's racing team, leaves tomorrow for Philadelphia to make his final preparations for the ten mile professional race in which he is to ride on Saturday. He expects to have his Jersey track wheel in time to take it with him.

Among the latest to purchase Cleveland Swell Specials of the F. L. C. Martin Cycle Company are the Misses King, of Elizabeth; George Giebelhouse and Mayor Alex. Gilbert. Cleveland racers have been sold to P. Creger and Roy Phillips. Dr. E. W. Hedges and Dr. B. VanD. Hedges have purchased Dayton wheels.

Observent men who are following the course of cycling affairs, predict that the movement for good roads will broaden with fine results this summer. The L. A. W. in New York, it is understood, proposes to take up the road question in a systematic way and try to obtain the enactment of a law which will do away with the old-fashioned methods employed at the present time. New York is notoriously behind other States in the east, especially New Jersey, in the matter of highway improvement, but the bicycle road men, who are in a class by themselves, are confident that public sentiment will call for a change before many more seasons roll by. Cycle paths are perhaps almost a necessity in the larger cities where the streets are crowded with vehicles, but the construction of exclusively cycling roadways parallel to country highways is a rapidly growing custom which is viewed with apprehension by wheelmen who have at heart the improvement of roads generally. Road reform and the welfare of the communities would be far better served if the time and energy spent in the cycle path fever were turned in the direction of improvement of the common roads. Cycle paths have become common, as a rule, on account of the poor condition of the ordinary highways, and the craze will probably spread until the good time comes when town and country authorities realize that ther duty does not end with the construction of a fine road, but that its good surface should be maintained as far as possible. The proposed cycle path from Jersey City to Newark is a case in point. At present wheelmen riding between these two cities are compelled to use the plank road, which is always either dusty or muddy or else resort to the railways for transportation. The Newark—Jersey City road is a very important thoroughfare because it leads directly to the gateway of the Essex county system of macadam roads. They in turn connect with the Union county roads and the favorite wheeling district of New Jersey.

AMONG THE STEPPERS.

St. Albans and Myrtletwig are booked to start at Woodbridge on the 16th.

Whipple, Mr. Fairban's fast gelding, by Whips, (sire of Azote, 2:04¼), is being driven on the road.

First Bell, by St. Bell, is being driven on the road by O. T. Waring, of Park avenue. This horse not only has a fast record, but all the necessary qualities of a superior roadster.

Mr. Maltby, of Plainfield avenue, has a number of promising youngsters that he is working over his own track near his home. They are all bred in the purple, being by such sires as Stamboul, 2:07½; Guy Wilkes, 2:11¼; Phallos, 2:13¾; Happy Medium, etc.

VARIOUS SPORTS.

Alex. Ayers and Elvin VanName went fishing yesterday and have wonderful stories to tell of their luck.

The candidates for the relay team of the High School will meet Wednesday afternoon, when it will be decided what team will contest in the one mile relay race in the N. J. A. C. games on May 30th. The make-up will probably be Wm. Morgan, Henry Eggerding, George P. Smith, Fred Squires and Wilbur F. Cornwell.

AROUND THE BASES.

Robert Rogers, of this city will pitch for the Westfield Y. M. C. A. this season.

A very interesting game of ball was played at Sterling last Saturday afternoon between the Sterling and Washingtonville clubs, the latter winning after an exciting contest by the score of 2 to 1. Batteries, Sterling, Volke and Magrah; Wahingtonville, R. Rogers and D. Rogers. The Sterlings only secured three scratch hits.

The baseball cranks do not want to forget that the Y. M. C. A. team will open the season next Saturday in this city with the Cranfords. With good support, as in old times, the success of the team will be assured as a strong nine will be put in the field. Some of the faces will be familar, but there will be several strangers on the diamond, who though unknown here, have made reputations for themselves in other places. It is to be hoped that the cranks will turn out and root for the local nine as in times gone by.

NATURAL FAT.

Getting Fat is Only a Question of Eating Proper Food.

Thin people who want to get fat should eat proper food and digest it.

That is the only natural way.

The trouble with most thin people is that they suffer from indigestion.

They don't digest their food. They don't get enough nourishment. They are slowly being starved. They are poisoned by the products of fermented and putrid food.

Shaker Digestive Cordial, a gentle, natural, vegetable digestive, attacks the food in your stomach just like the digestive juices, and turns it into healthful nourishment. It helps your stomach naturally. It makes thin dyspeptics fat. It makes poisonous blood pure. It tones up and cures the stomach.

Nothing will cure indigestion like Shaker Digestive Cordial, because nothing else goes so naturally about it.

This is why it has been so successful in relieving nausea, vomiting, dizziness, weakness, bad taste, fever, flatulence, constipation, loss of appetite, headache, neuralgia, rheumatism, etc., by curing the disorder which causes the symptoms.

A few doses will prove its value, but you won't get fat on one bottle.

All druggists. Ten cents for a trial bottle.

Discouraging.

"Does your papa object to my calling upon you, Miss Dolyers?"

"Not in the least, Mr. Spudds."

"Does your mamma?"

"No."

"Do your brothers?"

"I think not."

"Then I guess I'm pretty solid."

"But there is one member of the family you neglected to ask about, and who does object most heartily."

"I thought I had named them all, but now I think of it, I did omit to ask about your pug."

"Oh, Fido doesn't mind you."

"Then who is it that objects to my coming to see you?"

"It is only I, Mr. Spudds."—Life.

The Reason Why.

Jack had been to the barber shop with his father. On the way back he asked: "Was that charlotte-russe he put on your face?"

"No, my son," was the reply. "That was lather."

"Oh!" said Jack. "I wondered why you let him whittle it off without tasting it."—Harper's Young People.

A Sure Way.

He advertised a brand new scheme,
"How to make your trousers last."
For fifty cents he'd tell the plan—
Demands came thick and fast.
And this reply he promptly sent.
'Twas but a cruel jest,
The postal card bore but one line—
"Make first your coat and vest."

Fair Dealing.

"I don't see why it is that Ethel is always so popular with the men," she remarked.

"Well," he replied, "it goes to show that business-like methods pay the best in the end. She has a reputation for the greatest promptness in returning a ring when the engagement is broken."—Washington Star.

Consistency Is a Jewel.

Second Drug Clerk—You'll have to charge her a good stiff price, so that she'll think you had a lot of trouble making it up.—Puck.

AN EASTERN FACTORY.

H. A. LOZIER & CO., MAY LOCATE IN THIS VICINITY.

They Are Manufacturers of the Cleveland Swell Special Wheel, and Find it Necessary to Increase Their Facilities.

Another large industry is likely to be located along the line of the Central Railroad of New Jersey, either at Garwood or Dunellen. For some time, H. A. Lozier & Co. manufacturers of the well-known Cleveland bicycles, have been contemplating the establishing of an eastern factory. The factory is now located at Toledo, O., and although of immense size, it is not large enough to suit the requirements. Representatives of H. A. Lozier & Company, have been examining sites for the new factory and have visited Orange, Dunellen and Garwood. The last named place seems the most likely, as among the other advantages, there is to be a seamless tube factory at the same place. Those in charge of the tube factory, which will be built this summer, as was told in The Press recently, are very anxious to have the bicycle factory located there.

This bicycle firm would employ in its new factory from 800 to 1,000 people of whom a great number will be skilled workmen. The location of such a factory in either Dunellen or Garwood would be of great benefit to Plainfield as a trading center.

EPISCOPAL MISSIONS.

An Address by a Worker in Japan—Appeal for United Prayer.

Yesterday afternoon at 3 o'clock a meeting of the Plainfield Branch of the Woman's Auxiliary in the diocese of New Jersey was held in St. Stephen's church. The evening prayer, with the special prayers for Rogation days, for missions, and for the unity of the church, were said by the pastor, Rev. S. P. Simpson. He made an address of welcome to the representatives of the various parishes, and dwelt briefly on the practical blessings resulting from devout mission work.

Miss Sybil Carter, missionary to the Indians, presented her experiences in her special sphere, which were listened to with great interest. She pointed out vividly the patient, lonely life of the Indian women, and exhibited samples of exquisite lace work done by them.

Mrs. Perry, the secretary and treasurer of the Branch, followed with an earnest appeal for united prayer on behalf of all missionary work, and related a wonderful instance of answer to prayer which had come under her own observation in connection with missions in Japan.

After the service the meeting was entertained in a hospitable manner by the ladies of the parish. Mrs. S. P. Simpson, Mrs. G. S. Guion, Mrs. N. T. T. Finch, Mrs. Beal and others dispensed refreshments and kindly greetings.

COUNTRY CLUB ELECTION.

Regular Nominations by the Governors Meet With No Opposition.

The annual meeting of the Union County Country Club was held last evening at the clubhouse. The reports of the old officers showed that the financial condition of the club had improved during the last year.

The regular nominations for the Board of Governors were unanimously elected. They were Charles J. Fisk, E. N. Erickson, J. T. Baker, H. M. Stockton, C. C. Burnet and H. W. Beebe. They hold office for two years.

A Case of Debt.

Justice Crosley issued summons yesterday in the case of Anton Stebor against R. F. M. Chase. The case is one for debt and Mr. Stebor who is coachman for Mr. Chase is suing for the amount. Lawyer S. S. Swackhamer will represent the plaintiff and Judge DeMeza the defendant. A hearing will be given next Monday afternoon at two o'clock.

Entertained at Whist.

Miss Sadie Line, of Duer street, entertained the East Sixth Street Whist Club last evening in a most pleasant manner. The forepart of the evening was passed in playing whist, the first prizes being won by Miss Bessie Giles and Ernest Millard. This was followed with dancing and at a late hour refreshments were served.

District Missionary Meeting.

The Elizabeth District Woman's Home Missionary Society will be held tomorrow in Vincent chapel. The morning session begins at 10:30. The speakers for the afternoon are Mrs. J. J. Boswell, Mrs. Anna Kent and Miss VanMaster. Lunch will be served at noon. All interested in home missionary work will be welcome.

—Tomorrow "only" Thursday May 14th, VanEmburg & Son will sell a line of fine outing flannels at 7½ cents yard, former price 10 and 12c. Dont let this opportunity slip.

BENNER-HEDGES SUIT NOW ON.

The Evidence of the Prosecution Finished and the Defense Being Given.

The attention of Justice VanSyckel and the Supreme Court at Elizabeth has been devoted since Monday afternoon to the trying of the case of John Benner against Drs. E. W. and B. VanD. Hedges. The suit is for $10,000, and is brought on the charge of malpractice.

Mr. Benner is proprietor of the Fanwood Road House, and broke his ankle some months ago by jumping from a moving wagon near his home. He called the Drs. Hedges and both brothers treated the injured member, and Benner claims that their treatment was wrong and that the bones were not set properly, so that he will be a cripple for life.

S. S. Swackhamer and Assemblyman W. R. Codington were the attorneys for Benner and presented his case Monday afternoon and Tuesday morning. Yesterday afternoon Corporation Counsel Craig A. Marsh opened the case for the defense and it is being continued today.

The defense claim that they can prove that most of Benner's statements were false, and witnesses to that effect were brought up.

THE AUDSLEYS DEFEATED.

Plainfield Men Who Drew Plans for the New New York' City Hall.

George A. and William J. Audsley, of this city, were among the architects who entered the competition to furnish plans for the proposed new City Hall of New York. Their plans were not accepted and they brought suit in the United States Circuit Court for services. By the provisions of the competition the makers of the six plans to which the committee awarded superiority were each to receive $2,000. In the United States Circuit Court the Audsleys were defeated. They appealed, and yesterday the United States Circuit Court of Appeals rendered a decision affirming the judgment in the Circuit Court. The higher Court holds that the Audsleys introduced no evidence to show that they were among the six for whom the $2,000 was provided.

Anniversary Arranged For.

At the regular meeting of Minerva Temple, Rathbone Sisters, last night, the following committee was appointed to arrange for an entertainment to mark the second anniversary of the lodge, which will occur next month: Mesdames Boehm, Bowman, Wakefield, Bellis, Moore, Haberle, Lines, Thatcher, Stephens and Pope. The Temple also received with pleasure the announcement of the profits of the recent entertainment given for the benefit of the officers capes fund. Two applications for membership were received. After the business was transacted refreshments were served in the banquet room, and in her usual cheerful manner Mrs. Cox attended to the wants of all.

A Charming Luncheon.

A charming pink and green luncheon was given yesterday afternoon by Mrs. Lemuel William Serrell, of Crescent avenue, to a few out of town friends. Later in the after afternoon the hostess gave a card party to her guests, and an informal dinner was given in the evening. Those present were Mrs. Francis Knowles of Orange; Miss Jessie Purlee, of Bergen Point; Miss Wilkinson, Miss Williams, Miss Jane Scott, Miss Jennie Toffy, Miss Grace Toffy, Miss May Shafer and Mrs. Herbert Scott, of Jersey City.

Crop Conditions.

Weather Observer John Neagle has the following report in this week's issue of the weekly crop bulletin of the New Jersey weather service: "A week of sunshine with very little rain. Average temperature, 62 degrees. Rainfall, two days, 0.49 inch. Plowing for corn being pushed and much planting will be done this week. Grass needs rain. Potatoes above ground. Peas, asparagus, sweet corn and garden truck looking well."

Lost Part of His Finger.

William Gloak, an employe of Scott's Press Works, lost the forepart of the first finger on his left hand yesterday afternoon by catching it in a piece of machinery. The finger was cleanly cut and caused very little pain. Mr. Gloak stopped work and went to his home, 526 East Second street, where proper treatment was given.

Water Company Directors.

The annual meeting of the stockholders of the Plainfield Water Supply Company was held the company's office on North avenue, this city, last night, and the following directors elected for the ensuing year: Frank Bergen, E. R. Pope, John Kean, Jr., H. G. Runkle, and James McGuire. The Board will meet to elect officers the first Tuesday in June.

OF HONOR AND ENERGY.

THE PRINCIPAL CHARACTERISTICS OF ITALY'S GREATEST STATESMEN.

Dr. Riggs Gives an Interesting Lecture on Italy's Part in the World's History—Bright Record of Gavour and Garibaldi.

It was with intense interest that the appreciative audience at the Park Avenue Baptist church last evening listened to Prof. James F. Riggs' lecture on "Gavour and Garibaldi," and Italy's part in the world's history was never more clearly defined. The speaker was introduced by Rev. J. W. Richardson, pastor of the church, after which he spoke in part as follows:

My subject, "Gavour and Garibaldi," or in other words the reorganization of Italy is a strange story. Did you ever notice a mother with a large family of children. How she would grow thin and the children would become fleshy? How she would become poor in learning and the children rich in knowledge? This was the case with Italy. She was poor in almost every sense while Europe was abundantly rich. While nations naturally drifted into national life she was troubled with wars, confusion and papal display. She, however, developed in other respects. The Papacy was built up grandly, but it was felt everywhere except in Italy. All of Italy's work was done at arm's length. There was terrible misrule in all quarters. The Austrain government was very much in evidence to the displeasure and hatred of the Italians. The latter people were unable to stand the Austrians who held the sceptre of power.

Finally Italy became a united kingdom through the efforts of Gavour and Garibaldi. Gavour was a remarkable man. He was thoroughly educated, bright, smart and possessed a strong will. He had the love of his people and country at heart and when he was sent to the Alps to build bridges, he soon returned to fight for his people. He was an earnest patriot and hated the Pope and Austria. His ardent zeal was the cause of his being banished, but during that period he was not idle. He studied English history and institutions and established a bank, steamship line and an agricultural society. His people finally called him back to power, but he met with obstacles. At this time Austria was great in power, but Gavour was resolute and yet it was strange that he should persevere in the face of such adverse circumstrnces. Matters grew worse. There was no unity in Germany and Italy wanted to fight and accordingly on March 23d, 1848, the declaration of war was signed. In Italy there was a mere handful of men to contest against the strong Austrian Empire, and though Italy was defeated, she was still persistent. For awhile everything went along smoothly but there was work to be done in reorganizing Italy. Later 17,000 people were sent from Italy to the Crimean war.

The idea was conceived by Gavour that should his people win with the other great powers, Italy would also be a great factor, and when she did come out ahead Gavour stood for the rights of his people and they became a great Empire. Their personal prestige rose mightily. Gavour then continued to organize troops, and when told to stop, replied "that he would when he got ready." This angered the Austrians, but their great leader was gone and Gavour was still living. The French Army came to Italy's rescue and then the "War of Four Battles" was fought. Each battle followed closely in succession, and as a result the Austrians were defeated. This fact amazed and stirred Europe who had never heard of such a thing. However, the leaders of the other forces ignored Gavour, which thing they had no right to do, and Italy was organized with the Pope as president. At this time Garibaldi appeared. He offered himself to his country and secured enthusiasm among his people, and after another conflict Italy was organized as an Italian power. Gavour died in 1861 of nervous prostration. His life was a noble, pure and clean one, and he was a modern statesman. Italy triumphed, much to the dislike of the Pope, but it was an accomplished fact and Italy with her 27,000,000 people were under one government. Garibaldi was not a great general, but he had dash and enthusiasm. In his old age he took to politics and his method resulted in great injury to himself. Gavour was a man of the first rank, and could stand side by side with Frederick the Great. He was a man that was not only willing and able to die for his country, but he was able and willing to live for it.

The proceeds from the lecture will be given for the Armenian cause.

—Crescent Company, No. 13, Uniformed Rank, Knights of Pythias, will meet tonight.

HONOR FOR PLAINFIELD.

FIELD DAY OF NEW JERSEY COMMANDERY TO BE HELD HERE.

Two Members of Trinity Commandery, Knights Templar, Also Made Grand Officers—W. H. Sebring One of Those Chosen

That famous division of Masonry, the Knights Templar, have highly honored Plainfield by selecting this city as the place to hold the field day of the New Jersey Commandery and by placing two of her citizens among the grand officers of the State. The Grand Commandery of New Jersey met in Trenton yesterday. W. H. Sebring, Dr. D. C. Adams, Jacob Kirkner and Walter A. Freeman were present from this city. The election of officers resulted particularly well for Plainfield. W. H. Sebring was advanced to Grand Generalissimo, next to the highest of the grand officers. Dr. D. C. Adams was elected Grand Swordbearer. For the last few years the annual field day has almost always been held at Asbury Park, but it was decided that Trinity Commandery, of this city, should have a chance to entertain the other commanderies of the State. The field day will be held during the last week in October.

POINTED REMARKS.

A Correspondent Expects No Good Streets Until the Court Intercedes.

To the Editor of The Daily Press:—Your announcement last evening that our street committee intended to improve our streets at once, is too extraordinary to be true. I have resided in this locality for four years, and have been tempted to remove to a place where at least occasionally an honest dollar was spent in levelling mounds and removing stones. In all that period I never saw any debris taken off the streets; but, on the contrary, have seen them made dangerous every month. Every time the water company lays a pipe, or a cross-walk is repaired, up come the stones as big as apples or even cocoanuts, to stay on top, and nature is expected to wear down the bump.

I prophecy nothing good and thoroughly will be done until a Grand Jury indicts the powers that be for maintaining a public nuisance.

GIRLS THE DISTURBERS.

Residents of the West End Unable to Get Rest Until Morning.

Residents of the West End in the vicinity of Monroe avenue and Manson place are complaining of the spirit of rowdyism which exhibits itself every night. One resident says that it is nearly 2 o'clock in the morning before he is able to obtain any rest, after doing a hard day's work. He is authority for the statement that a large portion of the disturbers are girls who reside in the neighborhood. There are no electric lights on the street on which he resides, and also no police protection. Other residents of the streets give substantially the same testimony in regard to these nightly rackets.

Elect Officers and Arrange a Picnic.

The Epworth League of the Monroe Avenue chapel held a business meet- last evening, which was well attended. Walter M. McGee was elected third vice-president, and Mr. Brouard and Miss Bowman were chosen as delegates to attend the annual convention to be held at Trenton. The members donated $25 to the library fund, which is growing rapidly. A committee, of which Charles Hayes, is chairman, was appointed to arrange for a picnic to be held on Decoration Day. After the election of several new members a social time was enjoyed and refreshments were served.

Excursion to the Beach.

Winfield Scott Post, No. 73, G.A.R., decided at their meeting last evening to run an excursion to the annual State encampment at Asbury Park on June 18th. The department officers have partially been promised by the Navy officials that the North Atlantic Squadron will be anchored at the Park during the encampment, which will be a sight worth going miles to see.

Divorce For Mrs. Andrie.

A divorce was granted on Monday by Vice-Chancellor Emory to Elsie Andrie from Wiley Andrie. The couple lived in this city, and two years ago Andrie deserted his wife. Mrs. Andrie lives on West Front street, but the whereabouts of Andrie are not known.

Paid the Fine.

John Kiernan was arrested by Patrolman Hartpence last night for being drunk and disorderly. City Judge DeMeza sentenced him this morning to pay a fine of $10 or go to jail for 30 days. Kiernan paid the fine.

Dan Taynor, the expert pinochle player of Steiner place, returned yesterday with his wife from a short visit at Phillipsburg.

LAST CHORAL CONCERT.

A Rare Musical Treat for Plainfield People Tomorrow Night.

Tomorrow evening the patrons of the Choral Society will attend the last concert of the season. The other two concerts have been noteworthy achievements in the rendition of high-class music and they were all that was claimed for them, and more too.

The programme for tomorrow night includes "The Swan and the Skylark," which is the principal event of the Cincinnati May Festival. The rendition of "The Transfiguration" will be a notable event. It was composed for the Gloucester Festival, England, in September last and has not been sung in this country before this spring. Those engaged for the solo parts are all first-class artists. W. H. Rieger is the best oratorio tenor appearing before the public and his work tomorrow evening will undoubtedly be a treat. Heinrich Meyn, baritone, is an artist of unquestionable superiority, while Madame Eleanor Meredith Mechling, soprano, and Miss Mary Louise Clary, contralto, are sufficiently well-known as soloists. The society is doing first-class work and so nothing remains now but the production of a programme which cannot be excelled.

EGG WITHIN AN EGG.

Remarkable Product of One of J. W. VanSickle's Poultry Subjects.

Everybody has heard of double-jointed legs and two-headed calves, but who ever heard of an egg within an egg? That is just what J. W. VanSickle brought to The Press office this afternoon. Yesterday afternoon an enormous egg was found in his chicken-house. It was heavier proportion than an egg of medium size, and there seemed to be a movable object on the inside of the shell. An opening was made in each end and the yolk and white removed. After this was done another perfect egg was to be seen on the inside of the big shell. The phenomena of this is quite remarkable. The inside egg is of the ordinary size. Mr. VanSickle does not know which of the poultry-house subjects laid the egg, but he is thinking of getting an X-ray machine and making an examination of his whole brood. There is a fortune in the hen who will lay this variety every day. The egg can be seen at The Press office.

STILL MAKING FAST TIME.

The Central Railroad Contracting For Two Bicycle Engines.

The two new engines, one for freight and the other for passenger service, which the Central has recently had constructed, are being given trial trips over the road, and it is understood that they fully meet the expectations of the officials. No. 425, of the hog pattern, will be used to haul fast freight trains, and it is understood that the officials of the company wish to make the fastest freight time of any road in this section of the country. It is said that the recent excellent results obtained from the bicycle engines by the P. and R. road has greatly influenced the officials and that they have given contracts for the construction of two bicycle engines. The Central is still making the fast time between New York and Philadelphia, one hour and forty-five minutes, despite the threats of the Pennsylvania road to cut rates if it was kept up.

Tarried by the Wayside.

A Frenchman giving the name of Emil Thomas landed in Plainfield last evening on the 11:23 train from New York. He could not speak good English and was hardly able to make known his destination. It was finally learned that he was looking for Chapot, the glove maker, at Washingtonville, and he was started on his way rejoicing. When Thomas reached the Manhattan hotel he learned that there was a large celebratino going on. He was tempted to stop and he yielded. Consequently he became intoxicated and disorderly. Marshal Hansen arrested him and this morning Justice Crosley gave him his choice between $5 or 10 days. He took the latter.

A Letter From a Missionary.

An unusually interesting meeting of the Plainfield Branch of the Christian Alliance may be looked for next Tuesday evening. This organization has just received a very interesting letter from their missionary at Jerusalem, Miss Mary T. Maxwell Ford, which will be read at the meeting.

—Anchor Lodge, No. 149, F. & A. M., met last night, and City Judge DeMeza was instructed in the mysteries of riding the goat in the latest and most approved manner.

—Tomorrow "only" Thursday May 14th, VanEmburg & Son will sell a line of fine outing flannels at 7½ cents yard, former price 10 and 12c. Don't let this opportunity slip.

THE FRESH AIR CAMP.

DISCUSSING WHAT PLAINFIELD WILL DO FOR THE CAUSE.

From the Hot and Dusty Streets of the Metropolis Many Little Ones Come to Get Ideas of What a Healthful Life Is.

Many Plainfielders visited the Fresh-Air Camp which was established at Westfield last summer, and were deeply interested in the noble work done there. Mothers with their little children were brought out from the hot and dusty New York streets, to spend a week in the pleasant country, with plenty of fresh air and good food, and kind friends to look after every want and care for the spiritual as well as the temporal needs of the visitors. Many sick ones were restored to health, babies grew round and rosy, and, best of all, many were led to enter upon a true Christian life. Many homes have been made brighter through the winter, by lessons learned at the Camp.

The Camp will be re-opened on July 1st, and the work will be continued there until September. It is hoped that some improvements will be added, partitions in the dormitory and some sort of a bathing establishment. Almost all the furnishings used last year were stolen, since the Camp was closed, so that it has been necessary to buy almost everything new. Miss Curry, the devoted worker who was in charge of the Camp last summer, will be there again this year. Pleasant devotional exercises will be held in the evenings, conducted by Christian workers of Westfield and the surrounding towns. Plainfielders assisted in this work last year, and it is hoped that they will do so to a still larger extent this summer. The Camp is situated in a pleasant grove, at comfortable walking distance from the Westfield station, and the good roads offer strong inducements to cyclists to take an enjoyable evening ride in that direction. It is specially desired that many will come and help with the singing; music appeals very stongly to people of the class who will gather at the Camp.

Last night a party of Plainfielders gathered for an informal talk with Arthur N. Pierson, one of the Westfield workers, to discuss what part Plainfield should take in the work this summer. It was decided to talk up the work as much as possible among the people of the churches, and that later a meeting should be held at which all interested could learn the details of this beautiful missionary endeavor which is being carried on so near us, and would be given an opportunity to help in it, in whatever ways they might choose.

Laid at Rest.

The funeral of Mrs. Nelson Peterson took place from her late residence on West Second street yesterday afternoon at 3 o'clock, Rev. R. Grove officiating. The house was crowded with relatives and friends. The pall bearers were Robert Randolph, James Scott, Manning Fields, Reuben Jones, Frank Jackson and John Woolston. There was a profuse display of flowers. The interment was in Evergreen Cemetery. A husband, three daughters and two sons survive her. She was a life-long resident of this city and was 55 years of age.

Funeral of Mrs. Eakins.

The funeral of Mrs. William J. Eakins took place at 3 o'clock this afternoon from her late residence, 345 Manson place. The services were conducted by Rev. W. C. O'Donnell, pastor of the Monroe Avenue chapel. He was assisted by James McGee. There was a large attendance of relatives and friends. The pall-bearers were William Coakley, Oliver Pierson, William Ashwood and F. Stewart. The interment was in Evergreen Cemetery. A husband, a son and two daughters survive her, the latter two residing out of town.

A Disastrous Runaway.

Henry Kline, of Coontown, left his horse and wagon in front of Lederer's dry goods store this noon about 12:15, while he went on an errand. In the meantime the animal ran away. His course was down Somerset street as far as Pearl street where the rig collided with a telephone pole and was stopped. En route the wagon struck a buggy belonging to Thomas Bird, of Mt. Bethel, and wrecked one wheel. The horse was badly cut and the wagon was a wreck. It was taken to Stewart's wheelwright shop where the owner came and took charge.

A Pleasant Affair.

Miss Kelly, of Park avenue, gave an evening social to about fifty of her friends last evening. Recitations were given by Miss Josie Murphy, and Garret Kiely rendered several vocal selections. Dancing was the feature, for which O'Reilly furnished music. Supper was served about 11 o'clock and it was early this morning when the guests left for home.

OF NO CONCERN TO US

The Russian Water Front Matter at Chefoo of Small Importance.

NOTHING MORE THAN A BUSINESS DEAL

England, However, Is Excited Over What She Asserts Is the Absorption of Her Territory—The Bear's Action Considered Unfriendly.

Washington, May 13.—The press dispatches from Shanghai stating that J. Smith, the agent of the Russian Steam Navigation company at Chefoo and also the agent for various American missions, had secured the foreshore at Chefoo belonging to Ferguson & Co., agents for steamships and the New York Life Insurance company, and that other countries objected, but that Russia had intervened and the Chinese acceded to the request of the Russian vice-consul, is not given any thought by officials here, as the United States has no interests at Chefoo that are in any respect threatened by the action of the Russian agent. By the terms of some of the old treaties, the Chinese government ceded to France, Great Britain and the United States the right to acquire certain tracts of land at treaty ports for the purpose of establishing thereon the residences of their citizens and for the use of shipping. The United States, however, never availed itself of this right except at Shanghai, where the Americans have occupied a fine tract of land in the Hong Kew district, upon which is the United States consulate and a number of residences of American business men. At one time a similar tract was reserved for American occupation at Tientsin, but because we failed to avail ourselves of the privilege it was abandoned. At Chefoo the only foreign concession of land has been held by the British. The lands in these places are not owned by the foreigners in fee simple, but the Chinese government sets apart a certain tract permitting foreigners to lease such lots as they desire within the limits of the whole tract. Little is known here as to the merits of the controversy which has arisen as to the possession of lot 12, on the British concession at Chefoo, but it is not looked upon in the light of the press dispatches as threatening to cause any serious trouble.

Merely a Business Dispute.

The American agent Smith mentioned in the dispatch appears in the official directory of Chefoo as a representative of a number of American concerns, including the Standard Oil company, but first he appears as the proprietor of the Chefoo dairy farm. The agents of the Russian Steam Navigation company are set down as Ferguson & Co., a British firm, that are in the dispatch represented as being deprived of the shore property, so the inference is that the whole controversy is founded on a private business dispute.

Viewed as an Unfriendly Act.

London, May 13.—The dispatch from Shanghai announcing that the Russians, through an American agent, named Smith, have taken possession of the disputed territory at Chefoo, over which the British claim rights, has caused much talk here outside of official sources, the latter, however, refrain from discussing the matter, as nothing official concerning the report has been received. The Globe, commenting on the report, says: "The seriousness of the news from Chefoo cannot be overestimated. The action taken is in direct contravention of existing laws and treaties, and cannot be viewed by Great Britain as other than an unfriendly act." One dispatch says that six Russian warships are there, as well as the Detroit, Yorktown, Olympia and Machias of the United States navy. Intense excitement prevails at Chefoo.

The Fanton Meteor.

Danbury, Conn., May 13.—At the request of Prof. H. A. Newton of Yale college Harry B. Fanton has taken the meteor recently found by him near the Kohanga reservoir to New Haven. This is supposed to be the meteor the path of which John E. Lewis of Ansonia caught upon the plate while photographing the Holmes comet on Jan. 13, 1893. The stone is oval in shape, fifteen and one-half inches long and seven and one-half inches in diameter and weighs twenty-six pounds. It is a perfect specimen. This is understood to be the first meteor of which a photograph has ever been secured.

Appointed by Gov. Morton.

Albany, May 13.—Gov. Morton has appointed John D. Stivers of Middletown a trustee of the Middletown State Homeopathic hospital to fill the vacancy caused by the death of James G. Graham, and has also reappointed Miss Alice E. Sandford of Sing Sing to the board of managers of the reformatory for women at Bedford, Westchester county.

Killed by a Knockout Blow.

Hartford, May 13.—The autopsy on the body of John Houlihan, the young pugilist, at New Britain disclosed a clot of blood at the point in the jaw where "Patsy" Nolan gave Houlihan the knockout blow. Nolan has not been arrested.

For a Statue of Gen. Butler.

Boston, May 13.—The house yesterday afternoon voted, eighty-five to eighty-eight, to substitute for an adverse committee report a resolve appropriating $75,000 for an equestrain statue of Gen. B. F. Butler.

Sir John Millais Improving.

London, May 13.—Sir John Millais, president of the Royal academy, who underwent the operation of tracheotomy on Saturday night, is reported to be making favorable progress.

TO MAP OUT THE WORK.

Republican Senatorial Steering Committee Will Meet To-Day.

Washington, May 13.—The republican senatorial steering committee will meet to-day to consider the order of business and arrange for the closing of the session. There is a difference of opinion among the membership of that committee as to what should be done with the bill to repeal the free alcohol clause of the present tariff act, but the best information is that a majority of the committee will recommend to the republican caucus that the bill be passed. Mr. Sherman has renewed his declaration that he will call it up at the first favorable opportunity, but it is certain that the measure will not be permitted to interfere with the consideration of appropriation bills. It may, perhaps, be considered while these bills are in conference. The majority of republicans will not support the scheme to load the measure down with general tariff amendments. On the other hand Messrs. Platt, Chandler and Lodge assert that they will keep up the fight against repeal and believe they will be able to defeat it. Immigration, bankruptcy, refunding of the Pacific roads and several other measures are being championed by various senators, but it is not thought that any of these will be taken up. The adjournment of the session by mutual consent appears to have been advanced a week, and the leaders now say that the end will hardly come before June 8.

NEW YORK CRIMINALS' RECORDS

All Convicts in State Prisons To Be Measured by the Bertillon Method.

Albany, May 13.—Gen. Austin Lathrop, the superintendent of state prisons, who is directed under the law to facilitate the identification of criminals by causing all the prisoners in the state prisons to be measured in accordance with the Bertillon method, said to-day that he intended to designate a competet man to proceed to Joliet, Ill., to be instructed in taking the measurements required. This person will then proceed to the different state prisons and carry out the laws. In his office Supt. Lathrop has a complete record of every convict in the prison and of those discharged for some time past. This record not only gives age, height, complexion and general features, but the previous crimes of the convicts and the punishments inflicted. The record, with that to be taken under the Bertillon method, will make a most complete history of criminals in the New York state prisons.

CONDITION OF CROPS.

Weather Bureau's Weekly Bulletin for Eastern States.

Washington, May 13.—The weather bureau crop bulletin gives the following as the crop conditions of the eastern states: New England—Grass grows slowly and most garden and field crops at standstill for want of rain; fruit, except peaches, giving full bloom. New York—Grass and grains need rain badly; small fruits in some central counties badly winter-killed; apples blooming full; corn and potato planting well advanced; pasturage good, except in extreme east. New Jersey—Early vegetation has made little progress owing to continued cold nights during the greater portion of the week and insufficient rainfall; frost near sea coast morning of 8th did some injury to early potatoes and strawberries; all vegetation needs soaking rain. Pennsylvania—Most crops doing well, but need rain; many injured wheat fields; tobacco plants doing fairly well; early corn coming up; fruit and truck prospects excellent.

NO HOPE FOR MRS. MAYBRICK.

Her Friends Greatly Disappointed at the Home Office's Decision.

London, May 13.—The statement in the house of commons yesterday by Sir Matthew White Ridley in reply to an inquiry by G. B. Clark, member for Caithness, that the home office refused to reopen the case of the convicted murderess, Florence Maybrick, or to appoint a commission of inquiry into the alleged new phases of the case, has greatly discouraged the friends of the unfortunate woman who have so long and earnestly worked to secure her liberty.

Amicable Understanding Said To Have Been Reached in the Cases of the Competitor's Prisoners—Our Consulate at Madrid Guarded.

Washington, May 13.—Instructions have been sent by telegraph to the several collectors of customs along the Atlantic sea coast too look out for the steamer Laurada, supposed to be engaged in a filibustering expedition to Cuba, and if she is found to be violating the neutrality laws to seize her. As already cabled, all the accused were convicted and sentenced to death. It has been ordered that proceedings be instituted for the confiscation of the Competitor. American Consulate Guarded.

Barcelona, Mey 13.—Owing to grave fears on the part of the authorities of a renewal of the anti-American demonstrations in this city the police and the civil guard have been concentrated and official vigilance to prevent disturbances has been renewed. Especial precaution has been taken against an attack upon the United States consulate, at the door of which two civil guards with loaded carbines have been posted.

Amicable Understanding Reached.

London, May 13.—The Standard today publishes a dispatch from its Madrid correspondent saying that Spain and the United States have arrived at an amicable understanding regarding the men captured on the Competitor. The prisoners will be tried again, this time by a civil court under the provisions of the existing treaties between the two countries.

Weyler Not to Resign.

Havana, May 13.—Gen. Weyler authorizes the statement that the proceedings of the court-martial in the case of Milton and others captured on the filibuster Competitor, were forwarded to Madrid for the action of the government by the mail steamship which left Havana on May 10. Gen. Weyler also says that all rumors that he or any of his generals has threatened to resign if the sentence of the court-martial in this case should be modified are utterly untrue.

Delicate Dress Goods.

Some gowns are so dainty in the weave, so delicate in tint, that they seem to soil by being looked at—one or two wearings making them unpresentable, NOT USELESS. We make a specialty of cleaning fine fabrics, the more delicate the material, the better the results. Sometimes an accident will ruin a gown, without injuring the texture. We dye them then, sometimes we get a prettier effect than the original color. Fine goods stand redyeing. The finer the material the better the new color. We charge so little for cleaning or dyeing, that even if you are in doubt as to the result, it's worth while to experiment. Want a new evening gown for a dollar or two? Laundry drivers will receive your work.

DOINGS IN CONGRESS

A Vote on the California Harbor Bill To Be Taken To-Day.

COMPROMISE REACHED LAST EVENING

End of the Long Controversy Between Advocates of San Pedro and Those of Santa Monica—Contested Election in the House.

Washington, May 13.—The long drawn out controversey between the advocates of the harbor of San Pedro and those of the harbor of Santa Monica, as to which of those two points shall be selected for the expenditure of some $3,000,000 in the construction of a breakwater and the making of a deep sea harbor in southern California, was brought to a close last evening in the senate by a settlement in the way of a compromise, and the bill and amendments will be voted on this afternoon. The debate had gone on since Friday last to the exclusion of almost every other subject, and when it closed after four hours talk yesterday, an amendment was offered by the chairman of the committee on commerce, Mr. Frye, rep., Me.—an advocate of Santa Monica—and was accepted by Senators White, dem., Cal.; Vest, dem., Mo.; Pasco, dem., Fla., and the other minority members of the committee and agreed to by the senate without a division. As the matter now stands the senate amendment provides for a board consisting of an officer of the navy, to be detailed by the secretary of the navy, an officer of the coast and geodetic survey, to be detailed by the superintendent of that survey, and three civil engineers skilled in riparian work to be appointed by the president of the United States to examine the two harbors, the report of the majority to be final, and it provides that, whenever the board shall have settled the location and made its report to the secretary of war, the secretary of war shall make contracts for the completion of the harbor as selected by the board, according to the project reported by it, at a cost not exceeding in the aggregate $2,900,000. After that question was thus disposed of, an amendment was offered by Senator Gorman, dem., Md., limiting the annual expenditure under this and former river and harbor bills to $10,000,000. A motion was made by Senator Vest, dem., Mo., to lay that amendment on the table and was defeated—yeas, 26; nays, 31—and then the senate agreed that the vote shall be taken on the bill and amendments at 3 o'clock this afternoon.

The house is to-day discussing the contested election case of Rinaker vs. Dowing from the sixteenth district of Illinois. The majority of elections committee No. 1 recommended the unseating of Dowing, dem. The principal speech so far delivered was that by Mr. Moody, rep., Mass., who has joined the minority in sustaining Downing's right to the seat, at least until a recount of all the votes ordered by the house shall demonstrate that he is not entitled to it.

DELAWARE REPUBLICANS.

They Decline To Instruct for McKinley and Favor Sound Money.

Dover, Del., May 13.—The republican state convention held here declined to instruct the delegates to support McKinley for president. The platform opposes the free and unlimited coinage of silver and declares that "until there is an international agreement, we believe the present money system should be maintained and every dollar made as good as every other dollar." The McKinley bill was endorsed; liberal pensions were favored, and the democratic management of state affairs was denounced. A minority report, which was not adopted, favored leaving the delegates uninstructed, but commended McKinley. Gov. Watson was commended for voting in the legislature at the election for a United States senator. The anti-Addicks men bolted the convention and met at the state house, where they adopted resolutions instructing their delegates for McKinley. Both conventions selected delegates to the national convention at St. Louis.

George W. Childs' Remains Reinterred.

Philadelphia, May 13.—The body of the late George W. Childs was taken from the Drexel family vault in Woodlawn cemetery yesterday, where it had reposed since his death, and laid in the handsome mausoleum erected in Laurel Hill cemetery by Mrs. Childs. A short interment service was held in the cemetery by Revs. Bodine and Blanchard, Episcopal clergymen. Mrs. Childs and one or two friends were present at the services.

Albany, May 13.—Charles A. Wieting, the new state commissioner of agriculture will appoint the assistant commissioners in the ten commissioner districts into which the state is divided next week. Mr. Wieting has also decided to retain George C. Flanders in the Albany district.

FEARS FOR HIS LIFE

Rudyard Kipling Says He May Leave the Country.

AFRAID OF HIS BROTHER-IN-LAW

The Latter Held Under Bonds To Keep the Peace and To Appear Before the September Term of the Grand Jury at Brattleboro, Vt.

Bellows Falls, Vt., May 13.—Although Beatty Balestier, brother-in-law of Rudyard Kipling, is under bond in the sum of $400 to keep the peace and another bond in a like sum for his appearance before the grand jury at the September term of court, Mr. Kipling still fears for his life and declares his intention of leaving this place and probably the country. He expressed profound regret that these circumstances compelled the course he had pursued. He said he did not feel secure here, and the only thing for him to do to protect himself and his family, so far as he could see, was to leave the place and possibly the country. Several prominent business men informed Mr. Kipling before and since the trial of their friendliness, and all have expressed the hope that he will not leave the town.

Believes Balestier Would Kill Him.

At the hearing of the charges preferred by Mr. Kipling against Balestier before Magistrate Newton the novelist testified that on the afternoon of May 6 he was riding toward Brattleboro in his carriage from his country home. When near a place called The Pines he was overtaken by Balestier, who was on a bicycle. "Balestier said he wished me to retract certain stories which he claimed I had been circulating," said Mr. Kipling. "I told him to see my lawyers. Balestier said: 'This is no case for lawyers. If you don't retract your stories I'll beat your d—d soul out of you.' I told him to remember the consequences of an act like that. In the interview he called me a liar, thief, cheat and coward. The meeting did not cover three or four minutes all told. I was anxious to get away from Balestier. He seemed to be nearly if not quite insane. I honestly think he would kill me if he lost his head again. He is not dangerous when he is not drunk. During the interview he was wild. He waved his hands and fairly shouted. He was not three feet away from me. He had run his bicycle alongside my carriage."

HENRI CERNUSCHI DEAD.

The Well Known Political Econquist Expires at Mentone.

Mentone, May 13.—Henri Cernuschi, the well known political economist, is dead. He was born in Milan, Italy, in 1821, but became a naturalized French citizen. He took part in the revolutionary movement in 1848, and was a member of the constituent assembly that proclaimed the republic. After the restoration, he took refuge in France, where he became engaged in banking and industrial affairs. He acquired a large fortune. In April, 1870, he gave the sum of 100,000 francs to the Comite Anti-Plebiscetaire and was expelled from France, which country he did not again re-enter until after the insurrection of the fourth of September. After his return he took an active part in the discussions relative to the monetary standard, to which he brought all the weight of his incontestable authority. He wrote many financial works, among the better known being "Illusions of Co-operative Societies," "Gold and Silver," "Silver Vindicated," a note read before the congress of the Association for the Advance of Science, held at Liverpool in 1876; "The Bland Bill," and "Bi-Metallism at 15 1-2 Necessary for the Continent, the United States and England."

Hancock Equestrian Statue.

Washington, May 13.—The Hancock equestrian statue, which was unveiled here yesterday before an immense gathering, including the president, vice-president, representatives of the supreme court, both bodies of congress and army veterans and colleagues of the late general, stands in the heart of the business portion of Washington. It is the work of Henry J. Ellicott, the noted sculptor, and its total height is thirty-three feet and ten inches. The proportions of the rider are such that if he were standing erect he would measure ten feet in height.

Forest Fires Abating.

Bradford, Pa., May 13.—The forest fires which have been raging in this vicinity for the past few days have greatly abated in fierceness, and it is only a matter of a short time before they will be extinguished. A mill at Portland Mills, near Carman, on the Buffalo, Rochester & Pittsburg railroad, was burned yesterday, with a big loss, and some oil property in Elk county was destroyed.

Against Albany Police Bill.

Kingston, N. Y., May 13.—Justice Alton B. Parker of the supreme court, who was had under consideration the application for an injunction in the matter of the Albany police bill, late last evening handed down his decision in which he declares that the bill is unconstitutional.

May 14—District meeting of Home Missionary Society at Nincent chapel.

Rudyard Kipling going to leave the country. And all because of a little scrap. As the schoolboys say, what a cowyard!

Counter Tenor won the Metropolitan handicap yesterday and thereby made a whole lot of money for somebody. But, strange as it may sound, a vast majority of the talent count a tener lost, and a good deal besides.

Governor Griggs says that he will not sign the bill which provides that non-resident sportsmen shall take out a license before being allowed to fish or hunt in this State. And he displays good common sense thereby.

Why maintain such mystery as to who is paying for the lunch that is being served to the police force each night? Every city official whom The Press has solicited for this information, either professes not to know or intimates that it is none of the people's business. If the taxpayers are settling for the eatables, they have the right to know it.

Gov. Griggs yesterday signed nineteen bills passed during the closing weeks of the session. But a few more bills remain to be acted upon. Among the bills which become laws today is Senator Johnson's bill imposing a fine upon anyone throwing broken glass, bottles, metal, loose stones, earthenware or other substance likely to cause injury to travelers, carriages or bicycles. The fine is fixed at $5 if a bicycle tire is punctured, and $10 if a person is injured.

Many men combine business and pleasure, but John Kean, Jr., is one who varies the custom by combining business and politics. Mr. Kean was in this city last night attending a meeting of the Plainfield Water Supply Company, and after attending to his duties there, he met several of the G. O. P. statesmen and talked over the local political situation. Mr. Kean has his weather eye out for any good plum that the New Jersey Republicans may have the disposal of, and when he comes to Plainfield it is suffice to say that he is a lion of the hour. All the politicians want to shake his hand, and Mr. Kean has the happy faculty of making every one feel that he is just the man that he wanted to see. As he depends on the Republican party to take him to the United States Senate, there is a well grounded opinion that he will stay at home.

THEATRICAL.

The new summer scale of prices at Proctor's Pleasure Palace, New York, includes a twenty-five cent admission ticket that takes one to every part of the colossal amusement bazaar. In immensity and high quality, the entertainments are kept up to a fixed standard. There is now a vaudeville introducing many popular and high-salaried performers, and within the next three weeks the new Garden of Palms and Roof Garden will add feature in accord with the tastes of the summer amusement seeking throngs. John Kernell returns with his droll budget of Celtic songs and witticisms. Bonnie Thornton counts that week lost that does not enable her to sing two or three new songs. There is an indescribable something about this curious little woman that puts any audience in sympathy with her. Three added comedy teams that never fail to inspire merriment are Crimmins and Gore in their absurd "Coming Through the Rye;" the Two American Macs, Irish knockabouts; and Brown and Harrison, an original comedy duo. The favorite Russell Brothers remain, as the "Irish Servant Girls. Gymnastic features of potent interest are Virginia Aragon, the beautiful and fearless queen of the lofty wire, and the Marlo-Dunham Trio upon the horisontal bars. Among the others are De Camo, comedy juggler; Gertrude Harrington, banjoist and singer; Carrie Fredericks, soubrette, and Theodore, ventriloquist.

There is more catarrh in this section of the country than all other diseases put together, and until the last few years was supposed to be incurable. For a great many years doctors pronounced it a local disease, and prescribed local remedies, and by continually failing to cure with local treatment, pronounced it incurable. Science has proven catarrh to be a constitutional disease and therefore requires constitutional treatment. Hall's Catarrh Cure, manufactured by F. J. Cheney & Co., Toledo, Ohio, is the only constitutional cure on the market. It is taken internally in doses from 10 drops to a teaspoonful. It acts directly on the blood and mucous surfaces of the system. They offer one hundred dollars for any case it fails to cure. Send for circulars and testimonials. Address F. J. DON'T TAKE A SUBSTITUTE.

Preparations That are "Just as Good" Seldom Stand the Test.

A recent article in the New York Times says that "we are confronted with the serious problem of how to prevent keepers of drug stores from palming off some preparation of their own in place of goods that are guaranteed to be pure and wholesome, and which are put up in original packages, with the name and trade mark of the manufacturer on them.

No large and profitable sale can be obtained for any article which has not merit behind it. The advertiser merely makes known the quality of the article he has to sell, and his profits come from the steady demand of retail customers, who find by experience that the article is what it is represented to be. He makes his goods on a large scale, saves all possible economies, and, naturally, can make the best article. But the keen competition of business brings a constant pressure upon the retailer to substitute an inferior article for one on which there is a living profit.

There is one aspect of the sale of substituted goods which the public certainly should know about. There are many non-secret manufacturers of drugs in this country who will put up an imitation of a medicine, with the name and label of the local druggist who sells it on every package. The druggist who buys these goods has no guarantee that they are pure, and, as a matter of fact, they are frequently adulterated with comparatively harmless drugs, which cost, however, much less than the real drug. The manufacturer would not care to sell them under his own name as pure because it would injure his reputation. If the druggist put them up himself, he probably would not have the skill, nor the deliberate dishonesty, to substitute cheap goods for dear ones; but by shifting the reponsibility, the fraud on the public is lost sight of. It is not the manufacturer's business; it is not the druggist's business, although they are sold under his name; a profit is made all around, and only the public is the loser.

When you ask in a drug store for any particular article that you want, and are put off with the answer that the druggist has another, made by himself, which is not only better but cheaper, take care! You can always afford to pay a few cents more for that article which has a record of years of results back of it.

An Ordinance to regulate the use of bicycles, tricycles, and similar vehicles, and other road vehicles in the public streets.

The inhabitants of the City of Plainfield, by their Common Council, do enact as follows:

Sec. 1. That all bicycles, tricycles and similar vehicles when in use on the public highways, streets, or places of the city are hereby required to have a lamp of such illuminating power as to be plainly seen one hundred yards, attached thereto and kept lighted between one hour after sunset and sunrise.

Sec. 2. That all bicycles, tricycles and similar vehicles shall carry a suitable alarm-bell attached to the handle bar of such machine, which, when rung, may be heard one hundred feet distant. That such bell shall be sounded as an alarm by the rider of such vehicle upon approaching another vehicle from the rear or upon approaching pedestrians crossing the street or upon the approach of another vehicle on the same street or on a street intersecting the street ridden upon.

Sec. 3. That no person shall ride upon any bicycle, tricycle, or similar machine upon any sidewalk within the limits of the City of Plainfield: provided that the term sidewalk as used in this ordinance shall be construed to mean such sidewalks only, concerning which the city has power to pass ordinances under and by virtue of paragraph V, Section 1 of Chapter 8 of the Public Laws of 1896; and provided further that this section shall not apply to the riding of any bicycle, tricycle or similar machine upon any sidewalk when necessary to ride upon such sidewalk in passing from private premises to the roadbed of any street, or vice versa.

Section 4 That every violation of any of the provisions of this ordinance shall render the offender subject to a fine not exceeding the sum of five dollars ($5) for each offense, and that the Justice, Police Judge, Recorder or other Magistrate who may have jurisdiction over such offenses in violation of this ordinance, may impose such fine in his discretion, as he may think proper, not exceeding the sum of five dollars ($5), for each offense.

EVEN SILK IS ADULTERATED.

Tannate of Tin and Silica to Give It Weight.

Some improvements in the treatment of silks are announced. Ordinarily silk is "weighted" by depositing tannate of tin on the fiber; the material receives a bath of tannic acid and then another of perchloride of tin, a repetition of this being made until an increase of the weight amounts to from 15 to 20 per cent., beyond which it is not considered safe to go in the case of silk intended to be dyed light shades or to be bleached. Recently a German inventor has brought forward a process in which silica is the weighting agent. In carrying out this method, says the Detroit News-Tribune, three steps are described. First, the silk, raw or in any stage of manufacture, and either before or after dyeing, is worked for an hour in a bath of perchloride of tin; then, after squeezing and washing, it is worked in a warm solution of water glass or soluble silicate of soda for about an hour, followed by washing, having also been previously passed through a solution of phosphate of soda. The operation may be repeated again and again, with no harmful effect on the fiber or on the subsequent dyeing, and in five operations the silk may be increased in weight some 100 to 120 per cent. The silk is now soaped, and, if already dyed, is cleared in an emulsion of olive oil and acid.

SAVED BY A WORD.

Knowledge of a Musical Term Proved Useful to an American Abroad.

There are more advantages in a musical education than most of us think, remarks the Washington Post. A certain physician here in town, who is just home from Europe, says: "I never appreciated the advantages of a musical education until I went into a barber shop in Italy. Nobody about the place spoke a word of English. I was stretched on a rack that passed as a chair and swathed in a towel. The barber made an impressionist sweep from the upper cheek to the lower chin. Gee whiz! how it hurt. My mouth and eyes were full of lather; I didn't know a word of Italian. I yelled. The barber seemed to pause for a moment. Perhaps he was gathering strength for a new onslaught. You have heard that a drowning man can think 50 years in a second. I thought whole libraries and dictionaries. Not a word of Italian. The razor was raised again. Suddenly I remembered a word that I had seen on my daughter's music, and had asked the meaning of.

"Adagio! adagio!" I yelled. "D—n it! Adagio!"

"Si, signor," said the barber, and my life was saved.

DANGEROUS FIRE RISKS.

Insurance Companies Ask High Rates for Some of Them.

The marine store business is a risk which most companies prefer to avoid. A dealer may have stuff on his premises, consisting of rags, old dresses, and the like, which is probably worth several thousands, yet the insurance companies will refuse to insure the stock at any price. In the case of an ordinary householder, most of these articles would be insured without a demur as household goods.

Lumber yards and sawmills are not regarded by insurance companies with a very favorable eye. The stock of a lumber yard was once insured at a moderate premium, but when a small sawmill was built on one portion of the premises, up went insurance company rates. Owing to the addition of the mill, where the premium before was something like $25, about $300 was required, and this favor was only to be granted on the strict condition that no timber was to be stored within 15 feet of the mill.

HARD SKULL SAVES HIM.

Mexican Receives a Volley of Bullets in the Head and Lives.

A Mexican was condemned to death for stealing a can of kerosene, remarks the Buffalo Express. He was taken out by a party of soldiers, received a volley of bullets at close range, and was left for dead. As soon as the soldiers had gone he sprang to his feet and walked to the City of Mexico, many miles away, where he entered a hospital. The doctors found three rifle bullets imbedded in his skull, but he was not fatally injured. Now the authorities of the town which ordered him executed want him back in order to shoot him again.

But he objects. He argues that if subjected to the discomfort of execution a second time his health might be greatly endangered. There is logic in that. The man's plea ought to hold good. It is a serious menace to a man's health to be taken out and shot, and the fellow who survives the experience once should be spared a second exposure, in order that he may come to the states and go the rounds of the museums as the man with the iron skull.

English Humor.

A strange society was brought to light during the hearing of a case before the Thames magistrate. Several men were charged with stealing a watch from a sailor, and were all discharged except Alexander Fullerton, on whom was found a savings bank book for $245 and a card of membership of a society with a curious title. It bore the following inscription: "National Liars' association—Having been a member of the above association, and finding you are a bigger liar than myself, I must congratulate you on relieving me of this card." It must be gratifying to the East end community, as well as a tribute to Fullerton's own abilities, that he had found no one worthy of relieving him of the card. The magistrate remanded him for inquiries.

Death in Japan.

There are no undertakers in Japan. When a person dies his nearest relatives put him into a coffin and bury him. The mourning does not begin until after burial.

PARIS DRESSMAKERS.

There Are Enough of Them to Form a Good Sized Town.

Paris is the city where the dressmaking trade flourishes as it does in no other spot in the world. In 1850 the number of couturieres, as given in the Annuaire du Commerce, the commercial directory of those days, was only 158. There were besides 67 shops for the sale of ready-made feminine apparel, but there were none, as there are to-day, which sold lingerie or certain articles exclusively.

In the Bottin (as the Paris directory is familiarly known) of 1895 there are 1,636 couturieres and 296 commercial houses for the sale of ready-made garments, besides many establishments which manufacture and sell jupons de desous or under-petticoats alone. The number of working dressmakers in Paris is estimated at 65,000.

In all France, according to M. Georges Michel, the industry of manufacturing the various articles of woman's dress is in the hands of 81,400 male and 143,648 female owners of shops or factories. These furnish employment to 700,801 persons, of whom over 500,000 are women.

In addition to these there are 925,855 persons who make their living from industries which are tributary to that of the manufacture of feminine apparel. The total value of the product of this labor from so many hands is estimated at £50,000,000.

A GREAT SNAKE COLONY.

An Australian Enthusiast Has a Fine Collection of Venomous Reptiles.

Mr. J. McGarvie Smith, an eminent bacteriologist of Sydney, Australia, is the proprietor of probably the greatest collection of snakes in the world, says the New York World. He is in the business partly for scientific purposes and partly for business. He advertised some time ago for 500 venomous reptiles, but one publisher refused to permit the advertisement until he had satisfied himself of the sanity of the scientist.

The different species of venomous snakes in Australia, so far as known, number 42, and Mr. Smith has specimens of all of them. The poison extracted from the reptiles is largely used in the Pasteur institute in Paris.

Mr. Smith is an enthusiast on the subject of snakes, and regards them as the most wonderful of living creatures. He has in his collection serpents that have gone nearly a year without food and are still fat. He has injected some of their own poison into them without the slightest ill-effects to them. As a result of his investigations he has established the fact that a non-poisonous snake is not affected in any way by the poison of the venomous species.

"Why," said Smith, "it does not kill one of its own species while it is so fatal to other creatures is one of the mysteries of the Almighty which we cannot unravel."

MADE FROM NIGHTMARES.

Methods Used by Artists Who Design Popular Grotesque Posters.

People who dine late at night in a certain uptown restaurant may have noticed a well-dressed, wild-eyed, haggard-faced, dyspeptic man devouring night after night with apparent relish dishes which only the ultra brave have courage to eat more than once a month. That man is an artist, says the New York World, and eating indigestible food is a part of his business, for he is a maker of posters. Since the use of grotesque posters, built on the lines of Aubrey Beardsley's phantom fancies and on the principle of Chimpanzee Johanna's savage sketches, has become general as a means of advertising newspapers it is no more than right that the world should know how the designs are conceived.

The case of this wild-eyed, haggard-faced, dyspeptic artist alone will be cited. His may or may not be the method used by all the better poster makers. Every night he goes to this uptown restaurant, eats a welsh rabbit, a cold broiled lobster, two cream rolls and a dish of ice cream and drinks a quart of cheap claret. Then he goes home, drinks two glasses of ice water, retires and the nightmare does the rest. In the morning he sketches the horrors he saw in his dreams and finishes them as the orders for posters pour in. He is making a fortune in the business.

MICROBES ON STAMPS.

The Philatelist's Collection as a Source of Danger.

Having successfully disclosed the hygienic dangers adherent to the kiss, the telephone receiver and the towel, medical science has now turned its attention to the perils that beset the philatelist's art. According to Dr. Unna, says the Science News, a patient was recently attacked by a peculiar parasitic growth in the beard. On making a minute examination of some of the hairs, the doctor recognized the disease as "piedra," which is chiefly met with in British Columbia. The doctor's friend had never been in Columbia, but he frequently received letters from correspondents there, and, being a collector of postage stamps, he was in the habit of removing them from the letters. In Dr. Unna's opinion the gum on the postage stamp is an excellent material for retaining any disease germs that it may receive from the application of the tongue, and in removing stamps—even when moistening is done with the sponge—there is always a danger that the collector's fingers may receive and communicate the contamination.

Turned the Tables.

When a schoolmaster entered the temple of learning a few mornings ago he read on the blackboard the touching legend: "Our teacher is a donkey." The pupils expected there would be a combined cyclone and earthquake, but the philosophic pedagogue contented himself with adding the word "driver" to the legend, and opened the school as usual.

3,000 DEATHS A DAY.

Startling Statistics in Regard to Consumption.

Some Idea Also of the Proportion of Cures—Analysis of the Dread Disease.

When we visit a factory where there are the most delicate and most dangerous machines, we are amazed to notice how indifferent the workmen are to the danger about them. Saws and knives work rapidly, and yet no one seems to think of danger. Long association with danger causes indifference to it.

If the statement were made that there was a contagious disease abroad in the land which was killing people at the rate of 3,000 a day in Europe, thirty a day in New York State, and nearly 100,000 in one year in the United States, every one would be aroused to action. Yet such a condition exists to-day. Consumption is a contagious disease, and the above figures concerning it are taken from recent reports. But we have become so familiar with the disease in our midst, that we do not fully understand its terrible nature.

Yet it is surprising how many recover from this disease. Even after the germs of consumption cause serious damage to the lungs, thousands recover. As yet, no specific is known for the disease. The treatment consists in giving aid to the body in its efforts to destroy the disease germs. For two centuries, cod-liver oil has occupied the first place in the list of remedies. The next valuable remedies are the hypophosphites. Some rely on one alone, but as both are recognized as of great value, we think it best to combine them. Thus you are sure of getting every help which the best remedies known to medical science can afford. In Scott's Emulsion of Cod-liver Oil with Hypophosphites, the oil is emulsified, that is the oil is broken up into minute globules of fat. The oil is digested and thus saves the weakened body from doing this work. What will Scott's Emulsion do for those with weak lungs?

If taken before the germs of consumption have secured a foothold in the lungs, it will so invigorate and nourish the body that the disease will be successfully resisted. In this way it prevents consumption. Even after the lungs are diseased, the body emaciated, and the health greatly affected it will often enable the system to come off victorious. And even in the last stages of the disease, when all hope of recovery has been abandoned, it lessens the severity of the attack, and makes the last days more comfortable. Scott's Emulsion brings hope and health to the great majority, while it brings comfort and relief to all.

Scott's Emulsion contains more pure Norwegian Cod-liver Oil than any other emulsion in the world, that will stand the test of time as being a perfect inseparable emulsion. Ask your doctor.

"Resign her!" I exclaimed, obtusely. "How?"

"By giving him a choice—you understand?"

I did understand—I saw it in a moment. I had been dull not to see it before. Bezers might put it in this way: Let M. de Pavannes resign his mistress and live, or die and lose her.

"I see," I answered. "But Louis would not give her up. Not to him!"

"He would lose her either way," Croisette answered, in a low tone. "That is not, however, the worst of it. Louis is in his power. Suppose he thinks to make Kit the arbiter, Anne, and puts Louis up to random, setting Kit for the price? And gives her the option of accepting himself, and saving Louis' life; or refusing, and leaving Louis to die?"

"St. Croix!" I exclaimed, fiercely. "He would not be so base!" And yet was not even this better than the blind vengeance I had myself attributed to him?

"Perhaps not," Croisette answered, while he gazed onwards through the twilight. We were at the time the foremost of the party, save the vidame; and there was nothing to interrupt our view of his gigantic figure as he moved on alone before us with bowed shoulders. "Perhaps not," Croisette repeated, thoughtfully. "Sometimes I think we do not understand him, and that after all there may be worse people in the world than Bezers."

I looked hard at the lad, for that was not what I had meant. "Worse?" I said. "I do not think so. Hardly!"

"Yes, worse," he replied, shaking his head. "Do you remember lying under the curtain in the box-bed at Mirepoix's?"

"Of course I do! Do you think I shall ever forget it?"

"And Mme. d'O coming in?"

"With the coadjutor?" I said with a shudder. "Yes."

"No, the second time," he answered, "when she came back alone. It was pretty dark, you remember, and Mme. de Pavannes was at the window, and her sister did not see her?"

"Well, well, I remember," I said impatiently. I knew from the tone of his voice that he had something to tell me about Mme. d'O, and I was not anxious to hear it. I shrank, as a wounded man shrinks from the cautery, from hearing anything about that woman; herself so beautiful, yet moving in an atmosphere of suspicion and horror. Was it shame, or fear, or some chivalrous feeling having its origin in that moment when I had fancied myself her knight? I am not sure, for I had not made up my mind even now whether I ought to pity or detest her; whether she had made a tool of me, or I had been false to her.

"She came up to the bed, you remember, Anne?" Croisette went on. "You were next to her. She saw you indistinctly, and took you for her sister. And then I sprang from the bed."

"I know you did!" I exclaimed sharply. All this time I had forgotten that grievance. "You nearly frightened her out of her wits, St. Croix. I cannot think what possessed you—why you did it?"

"To save your life, Anne," he answered solemnly, "and her from a crime—an unutterable and unnatural crime. She had come back to—I can hardly tell it you—to murder her sister. You start. You do not believe me. It sounds too horrible. But I could see better than you could. She was exactly between you and the light. I saw the knife raised. I saw her wicked face! If I had not startled her as I did, she would have stabbed you. She dropped the knife on the floor, and I picked it up and have it. See!"

I looked furtively, and turned away again, shivering. "Why," I muttered, "why did she do it?"

"She had failed, you know, to get her sister back to Pavannes' house, where she would have fallen an easy victim. Bezers, who knew Mme. d'O, prevented that. Then that fiend slipped back with her knife; thinking that in the common butchery the crime would be overlooked, and never investigated, and that Mirepoix would be silent!"

I said nothing. I was stunned. Yet I believed the story. When I went over the facts in my mind I found that a dozen things, overlooked at the time, and almost forgotten in the hurry of events, sprang up to confirm it. M. de Pavannes'—the other M. de Pavannes'—suspicions had been well founded. Worse than Bezers was she? Ay! worse a hundred times. As much worse as treachery ever is than violence; as the pitiless fraud of the serpent is baser than the rage of the wolf.

"I thought," Croisette added, softly, not looking at me, "when I discovered that you had gone off with her, that I should never see you again, Anne. I gave you up for lost. The happiest moment of my life I think was when I saw you come back."

"Croisette," I whispered, piteously, my cheeks burning, "let us never speak of her again."

And we never did—for years. But how strange is life. She and the wicked man with whom her fate seemed bound up had just crossed our lives when their own were at the darkest. They clashed with us, and, strangers and boys as we were, we ruined them. I have often asked myself what would have happened to me had I met her at some earlier and less stormy period—in the brilliance of her beauty. And I find but one answer. I should bitterly have rued the day. Providence was good to me. Such men and such women, we may believe, have ceased to exist now. They flourished in those miserable days of war and divisions, and passed away with them like the foul night-birds of the battle-field.

To return to our journey. In the morning sunshine one could not but be cheerful, and think good things possible. The worst trial I had came with each sunset. For then—we generally rode late into the evening — Louis sought my side to talk to me of his sweetheart. And how he would talk of her! How many thousand messages he gave me for her! How often he recalled old days among the hills, with each laugh and jest and incident, when we five had been as children! Until I would wonder passionately, the tears running down my face in the darkness, how he could—how he could talk of her in that quiet voice which betrayed no rebellion against fate, no cursing of providence! How he could plan for her and think of her when she should be alone!

Now I understand it. He was still laboring under the shock of his friend's murder. He was still partially stunned. Death seemed natural and familiar to him, as to one who had seen his allies and companions perish without warning or preparation. Death had come to be normal to him, life the exception; as I have known it seem to a child brought face to face with a corpse for the first time.

One afternoon a strange thing happened. We could see the Auvergne hills at no great distance on our left—the Puy de Dome above them—and we four were riding together. We had fallen—an unusual thing—to the rear of the party. Our road at the moment was a mere track running across moorland, sprinkled here and there with gorse and brushwood. The main company had straggled on out of sight. There were but half a dozen riders to be seen an eighth of a league before us, a couple almost as far behind. I looked every way with a sudden surging of the heart. For the first time the possibility of flight occurred to me. The rough Auvergne hills were within reach. Supposing we could get a lead of a quarter of a league, we could hardly be caught before darkness came and covered us. Why should we not put spurs to our horses and ride off?

"Impossible!" said Pavannes quietly, when I spoke.

"Why?" I asked with warmth.

"First," he replied, "because I have given my word to go with the vidame to Cahors."

My face flushed hotly. "But," I cried, "what of that? You were taken by treachery! Your safe conduct was disregarded. Why should you be scrupulous? Your enemies are not. This is folly!"

"I think not. Nay," Louis answered, shaking his head, "you would not do it yourself in my place."

"I think I should," I stammered awkwardly.

"No, you would not, lad," he said, smiling. "I know you too well. But if I would do it, it is impossible." He turned in the saddle, and, shading his eyes with his hand from the level rays of the sun, looked back intently. "It is as I thought," he continued. "One of those men is riding Gray Margot, which Bure said yesterday was the fastest mare in the troop. And the man on her is a light weight. The other fellow has that Norman bay horse we were looking at this morning. It is a trap laid by Bezers, Anne. If we turned aside a dozen yards those two would be after us like the wind."

"Do you mean," I cried, "that Bezers has drawn his men forward on purpose?"

"Precisely," was Louis' answer. "That is the fact. Nothing would please him better than to take my honor first, and my life afterwards. But, thank God, only the one is in his power."

And when I came to look at the horsemen, immediately before us, they confirmed Louis' view. They were the best mounted of the party; all men of light weight, too. One or other of them was constantly looking back. As night fell they closed in upon us with their usual care. When Bure joined us there was a gleam of intelligence in his bold eyes, a flash of conscious trickery. He knew that we had found him out, and cared nothing for it.

And the others cared nothing. But the thought that if left to myself I should have fallen into the vidame's cunning trap filled me with new hatred towards him; such hatred and such fear—for there was humiliation mingled with them—as I had scarcely felt before. I brooded over this, barely noticing what passed in our company for hours—nay, not until the next day when, towards evening, the cry arose round me that we were within sight of Cahors. Yes, there it lay below us, in its shallow basin, surrounded by gentle hills. The domes of the cathedral, the towers of the Vallandre bridge, the bend of the Lot, where its stream embraces the town—I knew them all. Our long journey was over.

And I had but one idea. I had some time before communicated to Croisette the desperate design I had formed—to fall upon Bezers and kill him in the midst of his men—in the last resort. Now the time had come if the thing was ever to be done: if we had not left it too long already. And I looked about me. There was some confusion and jostling as we halted on the brow of the hill, while two men were dispatched ahead to announce the governor's arrival, and Bure, with half a dozen spears, rode out as an advance guard.

The road where we stood was narrow, a shallow cutting winding down the declivity of the hills. The horses were tired. It was a bad time and place for my design, and only the coming night was in my favor. But I was desperate.

Yet before I moved or gave a signal which nothing could recall, I scanned the landscape eagerly, scrutinizing in turn the small, rich plain below us, warmed by the last rays of the sun, the bare hills here glowing, there dark, the scattered wood-clumps and spinneys that filled the angles of the river, even the dusky line of holm-oaks that crowned the ridge beyond — Caylus way. So near our own country there might be help! If the messenger whom we had dispatched to the vicomte before leaving home had reached him, our uncle might have returned, and even be in Cahors to meet us.

But no party appeared in sight; and I saw no place where an ambush could be lying. I remembered that no tidings of our present plight or of what had happened could have reached the vicomte. The hope faded out of life as soon as despair had given it birth. We must fend for ourselves and for Kit.

To see that we had not escaped.

That was my justification. I leaned from my saddle towards Croisette—I was riding by his side—and muttered, as I felt my horse's head and settled myself firmly in the stirrups: "You remember what I said? Are you ready?"

CYCLING COMMENT.

Miss Laura Runyon, of East Fifth street, has purchased a wheel.

Miss Green, of West Eighth street, has just received a new Keating.

Frank Richards is training for the club race at the Crescent Wheelmen's big Decoration Day meet.

Rev. Dr. E. M. Rodman has purchased a Crescent for his daughter from the F. L. C. Martin Cycle Company.

Edward Maynard, the Park avenue barber, is very proud of his ride to Metuchen and back which he made in fifty minutes.

Joseph Donahue, the champion ice skater, will ride in the team for the Jersey Wheel Company. He arrived in town yesterday.

The riders who will represent the Quill Club Wheelmen on the track this year are Sims, Sanger, Baker, Wheeler and Cabanne.

Charles Butts has returned to work at Potter's after an absence of six weeks. He expects to do some bicycle racing later in the season.

The Crescent wheel is represented in Bound Brook by the leading grocer, A. S. Coriell, and not by the First National Bank, as previously stated.

A number of the representatives of the Riverside Wheelmen who will enter the Irvington-Milburn road race will train on the track of the Crescent Wheelmen.

Zimmy wheels have been purchased of Louis Morris, the agent, by the following persons: Wm VanNuise, C. Kelly, Albert Stevens, Edward Nelson and Albert Snowden.

Many of the elergymen of Newark are enthusiastic cyclists, and they have gotten together and the Clerical Cycling Club promises to be one of the most flourishing of Newark's clubs.

Wm. Volkmar, the champion rider of Pond's, who has broken several records lately, had his wheel partly demolished while after the scalp of another record on Maltby's track, Plainfield avenue, Monday night. A fall caused it.

A party of six started from here last Sunday to go around Staten Island. The pace was a lively one and for that and other sundry reasons four of the riders dropped out. H. M. Sherwin and Edward White were the two who completed the ride.

Complaint is made by many wheelmen that their cyclometers do not register correctly, and they are often misled as to the distance they have traveled. The fault is not in the cyclometer itself, but in the principle of its application.

Heretofore the bicycle has not been held up as an effective agent in the cause of morality, but western newspapers have called attention to the fact that the increase in the number of wheels in use has made horses so cheap that there is no longer an inducement to steal them.

Bicycle accidents are becoming more frequent every day, and a majority of them result from violation of the road law to "keep to the right." If wheelmen would bear this fact in mind many bruises would be avoided, and the repair business would materially decline.

Tamden-riding on country roads is often hard work. The long wheel base makes the steering on a crooked side path or poorly constructed road very difficult, more especially when the steering has to be done by the rider on the rear seat. A tamden trip over country roads with a woman should not be attempted until she has thoroughly mastered riding a single wheel, and then the task of guiding the machine should be left entirely to her, as she can see and avoid the stones, sand and other obstacles which might, if not seen, cause disaster.

A proper method of preparing a bicycle for transportation has caused no little study. A well-known dealer gives the following advice: Have a crate of a triangular shape made, sufficiently large at the top to avoid the necessity of removing the handle-bars, tapering so that the pedals and saddle will fit and not have to be taken off. The adjustment of these parts to the requirements of a rider takes time to perfect, and to remove them would only necessitate the work being done over, and many days will be necessary to get the same adjustment as before.

The Associated Cycling Clubs of New Jersey are determined to make the century run from Newark to Asbury Park, a memorable event. The organization will give two banners to the clubs making the best showing. With a view toward increasing the membership, one banner is to be awarded to the club not in the organization turning out the largest number of survivors. The other banner is to be given to the club holding a membership which makes the best showing. The Asbury Park Wheelmen have donated a prize, to be awarded to the club scoring first. The time schedule is as follows: Leave Newark 5 o'clock, Paterson, 6:45; Montclair, 7:40; Springfield, 8:45; Plainfield, 10:40; New Brunswick, 1:25 p. m; Matawan, 3:10 p. m; Red Bank, 5:20; Long Branch, 6:20; arriving at Asbury Park at 7 o'clock. Dinner will be served at New Brunswick.

Although to the ordinary mortal the weather on Sunday seemed too hot for comfort, the turnout of wheelmen was the largest of the season. Of course all wheeling Brooklyn was on the Coney Island Cycle path, besides the hundreds of New York riders who are drawn thither by the never failing attractions of Coney Island. Staten Island came in for its share of attention, while the Hudson River Boulevard was another favorite road. Hundreds of metropolitan cyclers went by train to Elizabeth and spent the day on the numerous routes of Union county's famous roads. Tandems were to be seen everywhere and tandem riding is evidently gaining in popularity every day. It would be interesting to know how many of the wheelmen riding single wheels on Sunday have ordered tandems and anxiously await them.—Evening Sun.

Despite the rough condition of our streets, Plainfield is becoming, more than ever, a headquarters for cyclists. There never was such a demand for new wheels, and the salesrooms of the F. L. C. Martin Cycle Company are never empty of customers from morning till night. The list of supposed necessaries to the cyclist has greatly increased and the sundry trade is consequently very large. Among the last to purchase Cleveland Swell Specials of this enterprising company are: W. W. Smith, Isaac W. Laing, Jr., and Philip Cruger. Crescents have been sold to W E. Dwight. Miss Minnie Smith, Augustus W Hill, of Dunellen, Miss Bessie Higgins, of Warrenville. F. C. J. Hoh, Miss Norma Freeman, F. A. Kreitling, Thomas Owens, Henry Miller, Robert Clark, Jr. and W. A. Boe.

VARIOUS SPORTS.

Elvin VanName and Alex. Ayers have had phenomenal luck in catching bass and perch at Bound Brook recently.

An informal meeting of the Sportmen's Propagating and Protective Society of Union, Middlesex and Somerset Counties was held in the offices of Percy C. Ohl in the Babcock building last evening when the action of the Wardens in removing the large bass from New Market pond to stock other ponds was discussed. There was general indignation shown and, although no action was taken, it was agreed that the society will fight any such action.

For many years fishermen throughout the State have repeatedly expressed their wish that the rivers and lakes might be stocked with wall-eyed pike. The United States Fish Commission declared its intention to cooperate with the New Jersey Fish and Game Commission in the undertaking. Under direction of Charles A. Shriner, the State Fish and Game Protector, the deputy wardens have been netting and removing carp preparatory to the propagation of the wall-eyed pike. One million fry were shipped in cans and will be distributed in the waters of New Jersey. Middlesex county will get 50,000, a large portion of which will go into the New Market pond.

AROUND THE BASES.

The New Jersey A. C. team were beaten Saturday afternoon last by the famous Woodbridge Browns.

Leo Smith and Ed Daley, two ex-Crescents, are playing on the Newarks, the former shortstop, and the latter third base.

The Atlantic League games are attracting a good deal of attention. The Metropolitans are in the lead, with Paterson and Newark close behind.

A number of the candidates for the Y. M. C. A. baseball team practiced at the Y. M. C. A. gymnasium last evening for the opening game on Saturday.

The Cranford baseball grounds are being put in condition for use this summer. The roof of the grand stand, which was blown off, is being replaced.

George Leidy, formerly of Plainfield, is playing left field for the Reading, Pa., Club of the Pennsylvania State League. He leads the club in batting.

It is hoped that a good crowd will turn out at the opening Y. M. C. A. game next Saturday. The Cranfords will be their opponents, and a good game is looked for.

Princeton College is represented more strongly on the diamond this year than it has been for several years past, and should have no trouble in defeating their old rival, Yale.

Billy Keeler is playing a snappy game for the Baltimores this year and promises to outdo his 1895 record. He manages to get in his share of hits every game, and has a clean fielding record. He is one of the most earnest players in the National League.

The Plainfield Athletic Club baseball team has been organized for the season and will play out-of-town games. They will open the season at Dunellen on Decoration Day with two games, with the Dunellen A. C. Manager Swalm has arranged games with Cranford, Westfield, Elizabeth, Dover, Washington and several other strong clubs. The club will have grey uniforms with black trimmings.

The Phillies are playing pennant ball just now, and if they do not commence on their annual mid-summer toboggan slide, The Press is under the impression they will land in first place. They are making a mistake in keeping Tuck Turner on the bench, and Sullivan in the field. Turner is his superior in batting and equal in fielding. They should give him a chance to play or release him to some other club. Cincinnati is anxious for him.

NEW ORANGE.

New Orange is located about a dozen miles from New York City Hall, and is within the boundaries of Greater New York west of the Hudson. The town site is situated in Union County, New Jersey, west of Newark, south of the fashionable "Oranges," north of Roselle, northwest of Elizabeth and northeast of Cranford.

A belt line railroad will be constructed connecting New Orange with railroads running to New York, Newark, Jersey City and adjoining towns.

New Orange is located at an altitude of from 120 to 180 feet above the ocean. The land is high and dry, and is admirably adapted for beautiful homes, splendid streets and excellent roads.

There are about 1,700 acres in the town site. Several hundred acres have been purchased by this association and deeds taken therefor, while it has also purchased several other hundred acres on land contracts and has made payments thereon. Any lots offered for sale by the association will be such as it holds absolute legal title thereto.

A system of streets, boulevards and parks has been surveyed for the Association, and it has reserved 150 acres along the projected belt line railroad which will be utilized for manufacturing purposes.

This association agrees with its lot purchasers that it will erect, or cause to be erected, manufacturing plants with a capacity to employ 10,000 wage-earners. With such a number of employees, New Orange is destined to have a population of 60,000 inhabitants.

The city, we believe, will become the most beautiful of the "Oranges," and while possessing all the qualities of a first-class residence town, it will also afford opportunities for employment to the mechanic, the clerk, the workman, &c.

Nature has done much for New Orange in point of attractiveness, and these charms require very little artificial improvements to make them very beautiful. Near the centre of New Orange is located the source of the south branch of the Elizabeth River, the water of which is utilized by the citizens of Elizabeth for drinking purposes. This natural reservoir covers an area of a mile long and about one-third of a mile at its widest point. It is surrounded by a natural bank, and by constructing less than a 200 feet dam at the point where the stream leaves this water basin, it will form a lake to a depth of eight feet, thus insuring one of the most beautiful fresh bodies in America. It is evident from appearances that not long ago the lake was in existence, and now that this association has cleared off all the trees and brushwood which had grown up, the matter of beautifying the lake is only a question of brief time. When completed it will wonderfully enhance the value of the site of New Orange. A casino, hotels, boat houses, &c., will be erected on the banks of the lake, and with these improvements it cannot fail to be one of the most attractive resorts in the United States.

We think that New Orange has all the requisites necessary to make it a model city, and it is the purpose of the association to advance it toward that end.

The association will offer a limited number of its lots for sale at prices that will be very beneficial to the early purchasers.

The prominence and responsibility of those interested in developing this property is in itself a guarantee that any representations made will be faithfully performed.

FIRST STRAWBERRY FESTIVAL.

Members of St. Joseph's Church Have a Profitable Affair.

The first strawberry festival of the season attracted a good sized audience to Saengerbund hall last evening, and a most pleasant time was passed in sociability and enjoying the good things provided. It was given by the woman of St. Joseph's church for the benefit of the church. During the evening the young people indulged in dancing to the excellent music rendered by Eugene O'Reilly. Mrs. Andrew Kenney, Mrs. Carney, and Mrs. Neely had in charge the lemonade booth, and dispensed this essential liquid to the thirsty ones, while Mrs. Farley, Mrs. Wilkins and Mrs. David Kenney looked after the ice cream, strawberries and refreshment tables. The affair was a success in every particular and will be continued this evening. There will also be dancing and possibly some new features.

Claimed Italians Beat Him.

A man, who was evidently a tramp, but who said that he was walking from Philadelphia to Norwalk, Conn., made complaint in Westfield Tuesday night that he had been beaten and robbed of $16 in an Italian place on South avenue, near the Fanwood Township line. He had a battered face to back up his assertion of having been beaten, but as he had no proof of having lost the money, and as the Italians stoutly denied his having been in their place at all, no charge could be sustained against the Italians.

Epworth League Delegates.

After the regular prayer meeting at Grace M. E. church last evening, the Epworth League held a short business meeting. Miss Stella Voehl, Miss Belle Lunger and Mrs. Most were elected delegates to attend the annual convention to be held at Trenton, Wednesday and Thursday, May 20th and 21st. A committee consisting of Rev. Mr. Johnston, John Steiner and Raymond Carroll were appointed to look after the tennis grounds and arrange for the outdoor games this summer.

Movement for Good Roads.

New Jersey's delegation to St. Louis is being besought by Sterling Elliott, president of the League of American Wheelmen, to favor a plank in the platform at the National Convention which will sympathize with a general movement for good roads. "What we want," writes Mr. Elliott to the delegates, "is better highways and the help of the Republicans to secure them for us." Democratic delegates to Chicago will probably receive the same request.

The Work Will Be Well Done.

Ex-Mayor Barnes, of Perth Amboy, has purchased a large tract of land near Flemington, Hunterdon county, where he proposes to live during the summer months, and in order to make it more beautiful and attractive he has given Civil Engineer F. A. Dunham, of this city, charge of the place. David Bowden, the contractor, has a number of men at work laying out drives, walks, etc.

The State Foresters.

The next meeting of the New Jersey Forestry Association will be held in this city on the afternoon and evening of May 21st. B. E. Fernow, Chief of the Division of Forestry, will deliver an election on forestry in the afternoon. Mr. Fernow is well known to Jerseymen, and is familiar with the forest conditions of this State. An excursion is planned to some interesting point.

Middlesex Freeholders Organize.

The new Board of Freeholders of Middlesex county convened for the first time in New Brunswick yesterday morning. The board is composed of eleven Republicans and nine Democrats. The board elected Frank H. Pownall, of Monroe township, director of the board, and Dr. Samuel Long, of New Brunswick, county physician.

Two Borough Transfers.

These two real estate transfers were recorded in the Somerset County Clerk's office during the past week: Wm. J. Roome et ux to Benjamin A. Hegeman, Jr., $300; Benjamin A. Hegeman, Jr., et ux to Charles A. Reed, $1,000.

Hunterdon Freeholders Organized.

The new Hunterdon County Board of Freeholdrs met in Flemington yesterday and organized. Jacob Dills, Jr., was elected Director; Edward Humphrey, of Glen Gardner, County Collector, and Paul A. Queen, County Counsel. It was a warm battle.

Blackstonian Candidates.

The junior examinations at the Law School of the University of New York close today and the senior examinations begin. Frank J. Blatz is a member of the junior class and Robert Clark, Jr., of the senior class. The college closes for the summer June 1st.

—Marshal Hansen, of the borough, is having a stone walk laid alongside of his property on Vine street.

CARD CUTTING FACTORY.

THE HASTINGS CARD COMPANY TO BUILD IN THIS CITY.

Factory Will Be Located on Second Street Between Elm Place and Plainfield Avenue—To Employ Fifty Hands.

It is now a settled fact that Plainfield is to have an industry that is not only thoroughly representative but one that wtll be a credit to the city. The Hastings Card and Paper Company, of which F. C. Lounsbury, of this city, is the preident and treasurer, will at once commence the erection of a handsome two-story building, 26x96 feet, with a basement and attic, on the ground located just off West Second street, between Elmwood place and Plainfield avenue, which is owned by Mr. Lounsbury.

This company has for years held the reputation of being headquarters for everything in their line. They do not manufacture card nor paper, but they represent nearly all the large mills in the east. In the factory to be built card will be sent here and cut in the required sizes and then used for the demands of their business. They do elegant work in the card line of every description, such as programmes, price lists, society work, and embossing of the most delicate kind.

They employ only the very best help and especially true is this in regard to their women employes and when the factory is completed there will be a demand for young women and only the best will be taken. The factory which is now being conducted in Rahway, is run on a comparatively small scale and with the change there will be an increase of force. The factory will be built according to the latest scientific plans as regards light and it will be complete in all the modern conveniences. Many details regarding the structure are Mr. Lounsbury's ideas and that is sufficient evidence that the building will be perfect in every particular.

The grounds are now being cleared off preparatory to commencing the work. Hummer Brothers, of North Plainfield, have the contract for erecting the building. The other contracts have not yet been awarded.

It is expected to have the building completed and ready for operation by August 1st.

A PITABLE CASE.

An Infirm and Homeless Old Lady Taken to the Elizabeth Hospital.

The ambulance of the Elizabeth General Hospital came to this city this afternoon and removed Mrs. Bolmer, who has been a great care to the benevolent workers of Plainfield, to that institution. She formerly lived on Church street, but of late has been living on Cottage place. During the past forty years she has been a resident of Plainfield, and for the last nine years she has been a helpless invalid, cared for by her husband, a man of seventy years of age, infirm and deaf. Her helpless condition and uncomfortable surroundings were those that appealed to the sympathy of all who knew of the case.

Mrs. W. A. Woodruff, agent of the O. A. A., became interested in the old lady, and for several weeks has been persistently working to find a suitable place for her to spend the remainder of her days, or at least stay until her health was improved. Plainfield has no way of providing for an incurable case of this kind, and the State gives the subject no attention. Various institutions have been appealed to, but without success. On several different occasions Mrs. Woodruff thought that she had provided a place for Mrs. Bolmer, but when the time came for her removal those with whom she had made the arrangements seemed reluctant to take her. Finally, at a great expense of time and energy, Mrs. Woodruff prevailed upon the management of the General Hospital to accept the case.

An appeal was made through the local press for assistance for Mrs. Bolmer and $9 was realized. By private subscription since then a sufficient amount of money has been raised to keep her for three months, and there is assurance that there will be more coming when it is needed.

Now Before the Jury.

The summing up of both sides of the Benner-Hedges suit has been finished at Elizabeth and the case is now before the jury.

Superintendent E. L. VanCampen, of the Hastings Card and Paper Co., has leased the house on Plainfield avenue now occupied by Mr. Parmlee, and will take possession August 1st.

—Tomorrow "only" Thursday May 14th, VanEmburgh & Son will sell a line of fine outing flannels at 7½ cents yard, former price 10 and 12c. Don't let this opportunity slip.

LIVELY FIRE AT WESTFIELD.

A Burning Coal Trestle Threatened to Make a Disastrous Conflagration.

Westfield was again threatened with the fire fiend yesterday afternoon at 2:30 o'clock when a spark from a passing locomotive of the Jersey Central railroad set fire to the wooden trestle at the coal yard of J. J. Irving, just east of the station. The dry material of the trestle burned briskly and by the time the alarm was sounded and the volunteer firemen had arrived at the scene of the conflagration, the structure was beyond saving. The sparks set fire to the big lumber building nearby and the firemen confined their efforts at first to saving this structure. But while they were working there the roof on the house of the Rev. Henry Ketcham also caught fire, and a part of the firemen had to transfer their energies to that building. After much hard work they succeeded in saving both buildings.

Ex-Chief Erwin Waters, of this city, who is in business in Westfield, was among the most active of the workers and with his experience in fire fighting in this city he lent the local department much good advice. Mr. Waters specially distinguised himself when he carried a sick woman from the burning house and took her into an adjoining residence.

There were no cars on the coal trestle at the time the fire caught, and the damage was confined to the structure and a top layer of coal. The loss will not exceed $2,000.

Reception Abandoned.

The regular meeting of the Parliamentary Club was held this morning, with Mrs. J. Wesley Johnson as presiding officer. The amendment providing for annual dues was brought up and was adopted. U., would be unable to come to Plainfield and in consequence the proposed reception has been abandoned. The next meeting of the club will be held May 28th. One new member was elected this morning.

Run Into By a Reckless Driver.

While Michael Powers, the flagstone dealer of South avenue, was driving slowly along West Front street, between Grove and New streets, last night, he was run into by a reckless driver going in the direction of Dunellen. The rear wheel of Mr. Powers' buggy was wrenched off and the vehicle upset. Mr. Powers was thrown out into the roadway with considerable force and his leg bruised. The reckless driver escaped without identification. Mr. Powers' injuries are temporary.

Cutting Down a Street.

West Third street, from Muhlenberg place to Grant avenue, is being cut down to grade. In some places it was found necessary to dig as deep as three feet. The dirt taken from the excavations is being carted to West Fourth street to bring it up to the grade established by the Street Railway Company. The work is being done by the city.

A Free Concert.

Orchard place is now enjoying a free concert almost every evening. Guttman's orchestra is now practicing at the home of their new accompanist, Miss Mabel Benner, who lives on that street.

For every quarter in a man's pocket there are a dozen uses; and to use each one in such a way as to derive the greatest benefit is a question every one must solve for himself. We believe, however, that no better use could be made of one of these quarters than to exchange it for a bottle of Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhœa Remedy, a medicine that every family should be provided with For sale by T. O. Doane; vice-president, Auguste Saltzman; treasurer, Joseph A. Hubbard; secretary, G. Thorn. The report of the treasurer for the year ending May 1st, showed the association to be in a far better financial condition than for several years past. There were less calls for relief, giving the association an opportunity of securing a neat little sum for the treasury.

This will be a delightful social event, and, with the underlying motive of aiding so worthy an object as the Relief Association, it should be more beautiful than an ordinary rose tea, that has in itself the elements of beauty.

Mr. Hubbard was escorted to the chair by Freeholders Clark and Roll. He thanked the board for the new expression of confidence. He appreciated the honor, and said he would do all he could to assist them in legislating for the best interests of the taxpayers.

The salary of the clerk was fixed at $300, and S. Rusling Ryno, of Rahway, was re-elected. There was no opposition, and Mr. Ryno was also unanimously chosen. He expressed his appreciation of the unanimous vote. He was immediately sworn by Director Hubbard.

On motion of Freeholder Krouse, the date fixed for the next meeting was Thursday, May 21.

On resolution of Freeholder Littell, it was decided that the minutes of each meeting of the board shall be published in one issue of the newspapers.

Director Hubbard named the committee on appropriations: Freeholders Farrell, Ogden, Littell, Clark and Brucklacher.

The old Board of Freeholders held their last meeting Tuesday afternoon and cleared up the county business for the year.

County Collector Wood's annual report was read, showing the receipts to have been $439,385.83; disbursments, $427,503.90; balance in the county treasury, $11, 781.93.

RAMMING DOWN THE BUMPS.

Street Commissioner Meeker Compels Contractor Siddall to Fix the Streets.

Street Commissioner Meeker has about come to the conclusion that the people on Park avenue between North avenue and Front street do not know what they want. First, they petitioned him not to allow the steam roller to work in the day time, but at night. Mr. Meeker told them that one night of the steam roller would be all they wanted and he was right for they immediately petitioned that the roller be used only in the day time as they wished to sleep at night. The Street Commissioner consented and now the steam roller works by daylight.

The Park avenue residents are not suited, however. One complains that it is almost impossible to work with the steam roller groaning and puffing outside. The street would now be completed had the work been allowed to go along smoothly, but much time was necessarily lost by the changes in time.

After being jumped on most unmercifully, Street Commissioner Meeker has at last found someone that he can turn the tables on and that individual is Contractor Siddall. By the latter's contract with the city, he is compelled to put the streets in as good condition as before. Street Commissioner Meeker has informed the contractor that he must level the bumps in the streets, caused by the sewer connections, at once and Siddall's men are now picking off the top dressing and ramming down the bumps.

AN INTERESTING LECTURE.

Rev. C. E. Herring Talks on the Work of John Livingston Nevius.

Every seat in the chapel of the First Presbyterian church was taken last evening, when Rev. C. E. Herring gave an illustrated talk on the work of John Livingston Nevius in China. It was the regular missionary meeting and the pastor made it of great interest to all. The views were thrown on a sheet by a small electric lantern which was operated by Augustus Searing. Considering the size of the views they were exceptionallly good, and Mr. Herring in his usual interesting manner held the closest attention of his hearers.

"John Livingston Nevius," he said, "was born in New York State and his ancestors came from Holland. Later in life he moved to New York city and was for some time an Alderman. He was a man that believed thoroughly in Providence which quality especially fitted him for the position of missionary. He was also a strong temperance man. He would go to the people for facts, but not advice. The Presbyterian missions were opened in China in the year 1844, and in 1854 Mr. Nevius sought that field of labor having been called to it. He met with many difficulties as there was only a small portion of the Empire at that time open to missionaries, but he was thoroughly devoted to his work and never gave up for one minute his labor for lost souls. He did not believe that it was necessary for a missionary to adopt the Chinese dress, but on the contrary thought it was a hindrance to them in working among the people. During his stay in China he accomplished much good and had the privilege of seeing many of the natives become thorough Christians."

Want the Axle Replaced.

The fire and building committee of the Common Council have formally requested the makers of the chemical engine, Halloway & Company, of Baltimore, to replace the axle which was burned, while the chemical engine was responding to an alarm of fire some time ago.

Mr. D. P. Davis, a prominent liveryman and merchant of Goshen, Va., has this to say on the subject of rheumatism: "I take pleasure in recommending Chamberlain's Pain Balm for rheumatism, as I know from personal experience that it will do all that is claimed for it. A year ago this spring my brother was laid up in bed with inflammatory rheumatism and suffered intensely. The first application of Chamberlain's Pain Balm eased the pain and the use of one bottle completely cured him. For sale by T. S. Armstrong, druggist.

AN UNSAFE LEADER

Platt Explains Further His Reasons for Opposing McKinley.

FINANCIAL RECORD AGAINST HIM

Says the Ohio Candidate Has Always Acted on the Money Question in Accordance with What He at the Time Considered Popular.

New York, May 14.—Ex-senator Thomas C. Platt gave out the following statement last night at the Fifth Avenue hotel: "The McKinley managers have undertaken to break the force of my charge that his financial record shows that he is an unsafe leader for the republican party at this time by printing extracts from his recent speeches. These extracts consist of a lot of general phrases about the necessity of having a currency 'as good as the best,' of our 'keeping all our dollars equal in value,' and all that sort of thing. But the McKinley managers are away from the point. The point is not that McKinley has made no remarks and cast no votes that tend to the maintenance of good money, but that he has made all sorts of remarks and cast all sorts of votes, and, in a word, that he has acted in every situation not from settled principles and convictions but in accordance with what he considered at the time to be popular.

Even Sought His Influence.

"Now, if we are going to nominate Major McKinley for president we should do it with our eyes open and with the full knowledge of what we have got to stand up against during the campaign and with as good a view as we can get of how his election will turn out in its consequences to the people in their affairs and to our party in its fortunes. It is charged that the 'bosses' are against McKinley, that he is the 'people's man.' There is not a single one of all the men who are offensively styled 'bosses' who has not been repeatedly importuned by McKinley's managers to support the Ohio candidate. They have not omitted even so humble a person as myself from those whose influence they have sought. This attempt to picture McKinley as a modern St. George running the blade of pure and high-minded politics down the red and horrid jaws of the dragon boss is one of the many contemptible humbugs that have characterized his canvass.

Superior Statesmen.

"It is perfectly notorious that McKinley's managers have used all possible inducements to secure delegates for their candidate, while, on the other hand, any one of these superior statesmen who are mentioned as the 'candidates of the bosses,' would take office, if nominated, without a single pledge, direct or implied, to embarrass his course or to afflict his conscience. The methods that have been used to work up this McKinley 'cyclone' may be all very well for the lily-souled mugwumps and that sort, but they make a so-called 'unscrupulous boss' like myself stand rather aghast.

Mortgaged Up to His Eyes with Pledges.

"It is believed on all sides that the man who is placed in nomination at St. Louis will be the next president of the United States, that the utter detestation into which the democratic party has fallen and the deep desire of everybody for a return to republican policies are enough to carry any republican candidate, within a reasonable range of selection, into the white house. The republican delegates therefore have an incomparable opportunity. It is their supreme duty to nominate a man whose developed character and achieved record indicate that with his leadership republican policies will secure the longest application. They should find their candidate who will take office with the confidence of the country and not with its apprehension and distrust; who is known to be a free agent and not mortgaged up to his eyes with pledges that can never be performed and expectations that can never be satisfied; who is safe and not erratic, conservative and not impulsive, firm and not impressionable. If these general principles are agreed to, they render the selection of Major McKinley impossible.

Foresees the Gravest Dangers.

"And I repeat that my opposition to him proceeds from the fact that I foresee the gravest dangers to the republican party when he has been elected and we settle down to the work of restoring to this country the prosperity of which it has been robbed by the democratic sectionalists and free traders. The financial question cannot be ignored. It might not have been especially troublesome just yet if there had been an uninterrupted period of republican rule, but even then its embarrassments would have been only postponed. A protective tariff is only half our task and much the lesser half, because much the less difficult of accomplishment. We are all agreed about protection, but if our bill were ready to-day and if its enactment could be a complete fact simultaneously with the president's inauguration, a return of the prosperity that we used to know would be still far distant.

Finance the Great Question.

"The great question, then, is the financial question and nobody can look at Mr. McKinley's record and read the conflicting and generally flabby things that he has said on that subject without perceiving that he has no fixed opinion about it, and that he has been turned and twisted by every changing wind of what he thought was public opinion. The most explicit statement that he has ever made upon the subject was in these words which he delivered in congress on June 24, 1890, when he moved for a conference committee: 'I am for the largest use of silver in the currency of the country. I would not dishonor it. I would give it equal credit and value with gold. I would make no discrimination. I would utilize both metals as money and discredit neither. I want the double standard, and I believe a conference will accomplish these purposes.'

Friendly to Silver.

"It is all very good for McKinley's managers to come to New York and say that he is 'as sound as they are on the money question,' which may be true and yet mean a great deal, but I want the business men of New York to understand that this extract which I have quoted from McKinley's speech has been sent by these same managers all over the southern and wester states for the purpose of showing tha t McKinley is 'friendly to silver' and that the free coinage people can safely give him their support.

Too Much Thought Given to "Bosses."

"The Republican party is not in favor, as Mr. McKinley says he is, of the double standard. It is without disguise a gold standard party. It has had enough of crazy schemes to make money out of all sorts of paper resting on all sorts of security. I submit to the business men of this country, whose sentiment can always control a nominating convention, that they would better do some thinking between now and the sixteenth of June on other subjects than the silly twaddle of newspapers about 'bosses' and 'boss rule.'"

A. P. A. AND M'KINLEY.

Action of Advisory Board Likely To Be Repudiated by Supreme Council.

Washington, May 14.—Every indication points to an absolute repudiation by the supreme council of the A. P. A., now in session in this city, of the action taken by the executive committee of the advisory board against McKinley's candidacy. There has been much feeling expressed over the matter and the executive committee has been severely criticized. But the members of that body have not given any indication of a back-down, but meet the criticisms with intimations that those composing the supreme council are endeavoring to get in line with his friends since McKinley has shown such strength. The trouble in the organization has been intensified by the action of the executive committee of the advisory board last evening in presenting to the board a report adhering to its anti-McKinley decision. The meeting of the board was the most important event of the day. A member of the executive committee said last night that the report which the executive committee presented to the advisory board is in accord with the statement made public at the time McKinley was blacklisted. He also said that the action of the committee was based on affidavits made by prominent Ohio citizens.

May Censure the Executive Committee.

It is likely that the advisory board will censure the executive committee. This will take the question of McKinley's repudiation out of the hands of the supreme council and will allow the advisory board to make another report to the convention. There is no doubt, however, it is said, that the question of McKinley's candidacy will be discussed by the supreme body, and, as stated, the attack on McKinley will be discarded. But before getting down to the main question the convention will have to consider a motion which will be made to-day referring the subject of the executive committee's action and the position of the A. P. A. towards McKinley to a special committee for investigation. This motion will provide that the special committee shall report on all candidates for presidential honors.

Woman's Missionary Society.

Erie, Pa., May 14.—The Woman's General Missionary society of the United Presbyterian church held a session here yesterday. There were 300 delegates and alternates present, and the reports of the financial officers showed that the receipts for the year were $65,000 and the expenditures $71,000. The opening exercises were conducted by Miss Pressley of Allegheny City. Miss M. McKeown, who, after thirty years' labor in Egypt, lost her eyesight and is totally blind, addressed the convention.

Killed in an Awful Manner at Sea.

Philadelphia, May 14.—Geo. Tucker, aged 32 years, an oiler on the Clyde line steamship Pawnee, was killed by the machinery Tuesday while out at sea. Tucker was oiling the engine and in leaning ower with his oil can he lost his balance and fell under the crank shaft. He was horribly mangled and died almost instantly. His body was sewn up in a canvas sack, and when the steamer arrived here the coroner was notified.

Foreign-born Bluejackets in Our Navy.

Washington, May 14.—Admiral Ramsay, acting secretary of the navy, has informed the senate, in response to its request, that of the 9,323 bluejackets in the United States naval service 4,400 are foreign born, and 861 of the 2,017 marines are natives of other countries than the United States. The percentage of Americans in the navy is, however, increasing.

DANGEROUS FORGERS

Cregan and Becker's Operations Have Involved Thousands.

THE LATTER LEADER OF A BAD GANG

They Will Make a Desperate Fight Against Being Taken Back to California, But Their Efforts Will Probably Fail.

Newark, N. J., May 14.—Cregan and Becker, two of the quartet of forgers, who were arrested here yesterday and held under $15,000 bail each for a hearing one week hence, will make a desperate fight to baffle the efforts of the San Francisco officers to secure extradition papers for them. In this they will probably fail as they are known to have conducted operations throughout the country involing thousands of dollars. According to the story told by one of the Pinkerton detectives who effected the arrest, Becker is the leader of a gang of the most dangerous and the most sought forgers in this country. He is said to be able to perform the cleverest work known to bank swindlers. The specific crime for which the men are wanted and for which they have been indicated in San Francisco is the raising of a draft from $12 to $22,000 and upon which they obtained all of the money. Of this amount $20,000 was paid in gold.

Well Supplied with Money and Jewels.

The men have been searched for high and low for five months. The other two are now in custody in San Francisco. They were arrested in Denver, Col., more than three months ago and removed to the Golden Gate city. They were not tried, for the alleged reason that, without the arrest of Cregan and Becker, the chief conspirators, their conviction would have been difficult. When searched at police headquarters $2,307.85 was found upon the persons of Cregan and Becker. Cregan had one $1,000 bill, twelve $100 bills, and some change. Becker had the remainder of the money. Jewelry worth at least $1,500 was also taken from them. Cregan had a diamond ring in his pocketbook which is worth at least $400, and Becker wore a sapphire scarf-pin set in diamonds which is probably worth about $250.

The one mile scratch race was won by Jaap Eden, the Dutch champion, with Morin second and Macdonald third. Johnson did not ride in this race, but is scheduled for next Sunday.

Hood's

Sarsaparilla as a blood purifier and building up medicine leads everything ever produced. It is positively the best. Others may make the same claim. But there's this difference: We prove it. Not by antiquity, but by Merit. Not by what we say, but by what Hood's Sarsaparilla does. It has a record of Cures unequalled in medical history. It positively, perfectly and permanently cures when all other medicines fail. That the keen discrimination of the people recognizes its merit and the cures by Hood's Sarsaparilla, is shown by the fact that they buy Hood's Sarsaparilla in preference to the exclusion of all others. Hood's Sarsaparilla has a larger sale than all other blood purifiers. It wins confidence everywhere because the statements in its advertising and testimonials are verified by all who take it. No other medicine has ever received such praise, or so many voluntary testimonials of wonderful cures. No other medicine possesses the peculiar combination, proportion and process used in preparing Hood's Sarsaparilla, and which give it merit peculiar to itself. This is the secret of its wonderful power, of its wonderful sales, of its wonderful hold upon the confidence of the people. This is why it cures Scrofula, Salt Rheum, Catarrh, Rheumatism, all Humors, Kidney and Liver troubles, Dyspepsia, That Tired Feeling, builds up the nerves, creates an appetite and strengthens the whole system. Its merit, its sales, its Heart Failure.

Often first manifested by extreme general debility, with sudden reactions for the better; a general dying out of the fires of life, that brighten up at intervals, giving hope of returning health, but eventually subside, go out on the spot, and another "dropped dead on the street" is reported. A general collapse of the great vital centres, due to a lack of sufficient nourishment is the cause. In such cases take and live to join the great army who today sing its praise. Dr. P. B. Carpenter, of 430 Friendship St., Providence, says, "I have never seen a case of general debility which Bovinine failed to cure, when taken as I directed." It cures in every instance where mal-nutrition is experienced. It is not a medicine, but a powerful condensed food that makes blood, flesh and bone, and by invigorating the life-generating organs dispels disease.

Some gowns are so dainty in the weave, so delicate in tint, that they seem to soil by being looked at—one or two wearings making them unpresentable, NOT USELESS. We make a specialty of cleaning fine fabrics, the more delicate the material, the better the results. Sometimes an accident will ruin a gown, without injuring the texture. We dye them then, sometimes we get a prettier effect than the original color. Fine goods stand redyeing. The finer the material the better the new color. We charge so little for cleaning or dyeing, that even if you are in doubt as to the result, it's worth while to experiment. Want a new evening gown for a dollar or two? THE DUPONT CASE

Senate Resumes Consideration of the Delaware Contest To-day.

EXPECT TO DISPOSE OF IT TO-MORROW

Only Three Appropriation Bills Yet To Be Passed—House Still Considering the Rinaker-Downing Election Case.

Washington, May 14.—The disposal by the senate yesterday of the river and harbor bill leaves only three of the annual appropriation bills to be acted on. These are the District of Columbia bill, the fortifications bill, and the deficiency bill. Before either of them is taken up the Delaware senatorial election case will be disposed of, and that case is before the senate to-day and will not be gotten out of the way before to-morrow afternoon. The amendment which had been offered to the river and harbor bill by Senator Gorman, dem., Md., limiting expenditures under the bill to $10,000,000 a year, was yesterday afternoon, after a long discussion, laid on the table by a vote of 40 to 23. An amendment in the same sense, limiting the expenditures under contracts to 20 per cent., was offered by Senator Bate, dem., Tenn., and met a like fate by a vote of 37 to 18; and then, after a somewhat bitter encounter of words between Senator Allen, pop., Neb., and the chairman of the committee on commerce, Senator Frye, Rep., Me., the closing speech in advocacy of the bill and in response to criticisms of it was made by Mr. Frye, who told some facts in illustration of the immense growth of river and lake commerce of the United States. The railroad freights, he said, had been cut down within the last twenty years from three and one-half cents a ton per mile to about three-quarters of a cent a ton per mile, and yet the people wanted cheaper freights. This requirement could only be met by improving water facilities; and for that reason the intelligent people of the United States were asking for river and harbor improvements. The vote on the passage of the bill was: Yeas, 57; nays, 9; the senators who voted in the neagative being Messrs. Allen, pop., Neb.; Bate, dem, Tenn.; Chilton, dem., Tex.; Harris, dem., Tenn.; Hill, dem., N. Y.; Kyle, pop., S. D.; Smith, dem., N. J., and Vilas, dem., Wis. The bill as it passed the house appropriated $10,594,718, and authorized contracts for thirty-two projects involving aggregate liability of $51,721,210. As it was reported to the senate the amount appropriated was $13,714,570. That sum was increased by various provisions in the senate, including the Deep Sea harbor in southern California.

House of Representatives.

The house is again to-day considering the Rinaker-Downing contested election case, which has already occupied one day of that body's time. The debate yesterday was participated in by Mr. Lacey, rep., Ill., in favor of Downing, and Mr. Dalzell, rep., Pa., who gave reasons for not assenting to the report unseating Downing. Messrs. Hepburn, rep., Ia., and Connolly, rep., Ill., strongly favored the seating of Rinaker.

HIS VACATION NEARLY OVER.

No Significance Attached to the Summons to Washington of Minister Terrell.

Washington, May 14.—No significance is attached to the summons sent to Minister Terrell, who is now visiting his family at Austin, Tex., to report to the president. There is no knowledge of any impending trouble in Turkey. In view of the fact that not much of his leave of absence remains unexpired it may be that Mr. Terrell will not return immediately to Texas from Washington, but will rather choose to go direct to his post. It was the understanding when the Rev. Dr. Knapp, the American missionary who was expelled from Bitlis, was brought to Constantinople under charges preferred by the Turkish officials, that his trial would take place before Minister Terrell, and this fact may operate to hasten Mr. Terrell's return to Constantinople.

Newspaper Mulcted for an Error.

Fonda, N. Y., May 14.—In the case of Alonzo Sitterly vs. the Journal company of Albany, tried in the supreme court, the jury returned a verdict of $1,100 for the plaintiff. The action was brought for alleged libel, a mistake having been made in an Amsterdam news item. The item stated that Sitterly had been arrested, whereas it was another man. The case will be appealed.

Strike Against a Non-Union Man.

Buffalo, May 14.—Thirty-two pressmen employed by the Matthews-Northrup company went out on strike last night, because of the refusal of the concern to discharge a non-union man who was hired a few days ago. It is probable that a sympathetic strike that will close the establishment will be inaugurated. This would throw 250 people out of work.

French Imports and Exports.

Paris, May 14.—According to the official returns, the French customs receipts for the first four months of 1896 show increases in imports to the amount of 167,000,000 francs and in exports amounting to 83,000,000 francs, as compared with the same period of 1895.

Dwyer Buys Ben Eder.

Race Track, Louisville, May 14.—M. F. Dwyer has bought Ben Eder from "Umbrella Bill" McGuigan for $12,000.

Cholera at Alexandria.

Alexandria, Egypt, May 14.—Thirty-five fresh cases of cholera were reported to the authorities here yesterday.

FIVE YEARS IN PRISON

Sentences Imposed on the Leaders of the Thransvaal Raid.

PRIVATE ADVICES RECEIVED IN BERLIN

The Sentences of the Other Members of the Reform Committee Said To Have Been Reduced To One Year's Imprisonment Each.

Berlin, May 14.—A private telegram received in this city says that the sentences of Col. Francis Rhodes, brother of Cecil Rhodes, ex-premier of the Cape Coloney; John Hays Hammond, the American mining engineer; Lionel Phillips and George Farrar, who were condemned to death by the high court at Pretoria upon charges of treason in being active members of the Johannesburg reform union, which was held to have instigated Dr. Jameson's raid into the Transvaal, have been commuted to imprisonment for a term of five years. The sentences of other members of the reform committee who were found guilty in connection with the conspiracy and raid and were condemned to imprisonment and banishment and to pay a fine of $10,000 each, have been reduced to one year's imprisonment. The telegram is as yet unconfirmed.

PARDONS FOR INSURGENTS.

Weyler Extends a Recent Edict To Apply to Two More Provinces.

Havana, May 14.—Reports have been received here of several encounters between government troops and insurgents, but no engagement of importance has taken place. According to these reports the rebels lost eleven killed and two taken prisoners. The losses of the Spaniards were one officer and seven privates killed and two wounded. Capt.-Gen. Weyler has extended temporarily the operation of the last edict issued by him granting pardons to insurgents who shall surrender to the authorities within a specified time so that it now applies to the provinces of Havana and Matanzas, as well as to the Pinar del Rio provinces. United States Consul-General Williams has presented to the authorities the claims of two of the prisoners alleged to have been members of the last filibustering expedition and requested that the men be granted a civil trial on the ground that at the time of their capture they were not bearing arms. He has also made a similar request on behalf of the Frenchman who recently arrived here on an American ship.

More French Newspaper Criticism.

Paris, May 14.—The French newspapers continue their attitude of opposition to the United States, so far as Cuba is concerned. The Eclair says: "It is clear that Brother Jonathan has just as much scruples as his brother John Bull. He wants to interfere at any price in affairs which do not concern him. This policy will not find supporters in France."

Morton's Position on the Money Question.

Albany, May 14.—Gov. Morton, in reply to a telegram from a New York newspaper asking him whether he favored the continued use of silver, and if so at what ratio and under what conditions, sent the following: "I have only to say: Our last republican state convention declared the position of New York state republicans, including myself, on the money question. I stand on the New York platform."

Verdict for Slander.

Boston, May 14.—In the superior court a verdict of slander has been given Rev. Matthew J. Hawes in his suit for damages for slander against John J. Dorey. The plaintiff is a retired Universalist minister, and the testimony showed he was falsely accused of adultery and blackmail by Dorey. The defense was a general denial.

Drouth in Connecticut Causes Anxiety.

Waterbury, Conn., May 14.—The drouth in this section of Connecticut has assumed serious proportions and is causing much anxiety on the part of farmers. Vegetation is rapidly drying up, and unless the drouth is speedily terminated the hay crop will be spoiled.

For Giving a Concert on Sunday.

Boston, May 14.—The complaint against Eugene Tompkins, proprietor of the Boston theatre, for giving a concert on May 3, (Sunday) for other than a charitable or religious purpose, has been continued to May 27, in $100 bail. The concert was that of Sousa's band

Nolan Evades New Britain Police.

Hartford, May 14.—The negligence of the New Britain police has resulted in the escape of "Patsy" Nolan, of Bridgeport, whose blow probably caused the death of "Johnny" Houlihan. The participants in the fight cannot be found.

Military Instructor Wanted.

Albany, May 14.—An open competitive civil service examination for the position of military instructor in the State Industrial school at Rochester will be held at that institution on May 26, 1896. The salary of the position is $1,500 per annum.

Courses in Pleading and Practice.

New Haven, Conn., May 14.—One of the most thorough courses in Connecticut pleading and practice will be given by Judge Prentice at the Yale law school, beginning with the opening of the college year in September.

Sympathy for Justice Brewer.

Washington, May 14.—The Venezuelan commission yesterday afternoon adopted resolutions of condolence with Justice Brewer, and the meeting adjourned as a mark of respect.

It is said that the Elizabeth Common Council are contemplating the adoption of the law providing for the appointment of members of the Board of Education by the Mayor.

Spitting on the floor of public buildings, railway cars or ferryboats, is now a misdemeanor in the city of New York. Now is the time for some one to invent a pocket cuspidor for the use of the urbane metropolitanite.

The Herald this morning classed Frank Bergen and William Riker, the delegates to the Republican National convention, as anti-McKinley men. The Herald says there are only seven out of the twenty delegates who are sure for the Ohio man.

The people of Delford, a little town in Bergen county, have come to the conclusion that good roads are the proper caper, and they will vote on an appropriation of $16,000 to macadamize six miles. If the appropriation is carried, only the chronic croakers will regret the improvement after it is made.

Senator Smith yesterday made a short but strong speech in the United States Senate in favor of limiting the amount of money to be expended for river and harbor improvements. He insisted that duty demanded that every Senator should take into consideration the bad condition of business and the Treasury situation and vote to limit the amount to be expended.

W. J. Bryan, the silver-tongued boy orator of the Platte, asserts that the Nebraska Democrats are for silver at 16 to 1, and no compromise. "We cannot be frightened by threatened bolts," remarks the Hon. Mr. Bryan. There is a well grounded opinion that if there are any bolts in the Democratic National convention on the money question, they will come from west of the Mississippi.

It was eminently proper for the Board of Freeholders as a recognition of past and assurance of future efficient service to again place the mantle of the Directorship on J. Frank Hubbard of this city. Mr. Hubbard is experienced in the duties of presiding officer of the county legislature, and his well-known fairness in the treatment of his colleagues and ability to quickly dispatch business has made him a popular member on whom they were happy to confer an honor.

A New Brunswick minister was walking along a lonely road Sunday night, returning from an outlying parish, when he hailed a passing driver whom he thought was a friend of his. But it seems not, for a crack of a pistol instantly followed and a bullet whizzed by the parson's head. The moral of this is that every pedestrian should carry a light on a lonely road. With an illumination, a man's chances for being taken for a highwayman are reduced to the minimum. And there is a supreme satisfaction in knowing that you are not running the risk of being shot full of holes.

What Will the Dudes Do?

A new era has dawned. The great tobacco and cigarette firms are no longer giving away so many pictures of actors and actresses as formerly. The demand for them seems to have commenced to fall away. Instead of portraits of those stage beauties in scant costume the large dealers are now giving spectroscropes and spectroscopic views. Mr. Campbell, the photographer, of Elizabeth, says that he is now printing 20,000 a week of these views, and orders are so rapidly increasing that 50,000 a week will soon be the order. He has eight photographers taking views in different parts of the earth to meet this new demand.

To Produce a New Piece.

Rich & Maeder, managers of Music Hall, this city, will produce and manage "The Cotton Spinner," a melodrama, by Scott Marble, the coming season. It will be a big production, and Messrs. Rich & Maeder will doubtless score a success with it. They have engaged a creditable company, and will make the first presentation in the Grand Opera House, New York.

New York Business Man Dead.

E. H. Woodward, a New York business man, died at his home on Norwood avenue yesterday from a complication of diseases. He leaves a wife and three children. The funeral will be held Saturday afternoon at his late home.

PARTICULAR MENTION.

The little child of Mrs. Peale, of Netherwood, is very ill.

Miss Trewin, of Orchard place, is is recovering from an illness.

Charles Potter, of West Seventh street, is in Philadelphia on business.

Miss Nettie Lord, of South Plainfield, is the guest of friends in town.

J. A. Karet, of Craig place, has secured a position with a firm in New York.

EATON BREAKS A WORLD'S RECORD.

The Jersey Rider Successful at the Chicago Indoor Meet.

Only two nights on the track and one world's record broken makes a pretty good record for the Jersey wheel. The indoor races in Tattersall's big building at Chicago were continued last night and Jay Eaton, of the racing team of the Jersey Wheel Company, again distinguished himself. He rode in the one mile professional handicap starting front scratch and finishing first. His time was 2:17, a world's record for a mile on a ten lap track. The performance was an excellent one and puts Eaton in the front ranks of the professional riders. The wheel he rode was one hurried through the factory and not specially prepared. If the rest of the Jersey team are anything like Eaton the Crescent Oval will be the scene of the breaking of a number of records.

TAKEN FOR A ROBBER.

Frightened Driver Put a Bullet Through a Minister's Hat.

Rev. Philip Flumfert, a young Baptiist clergyman, who preached in the Georges Road Baptist church, near New Brunswick, on Sunday night last, had an adventure after the service that nearly cost him his life.

When the service was over the young man spent a few hours with Rev. George Love, the pastor. He had expected a carriage to come after him to take him to the house of Samuel N. Stillman, where he was visiting, but when none came he started to walk. It was dark. The young man walked a short distance in the road when he heard a carriage approaching. Running forward, he cried out, "Hello! Is that you, Mr. Stillman?"

"I'll show you who it is," came the quick reply, and a moment later a pistol shot rang out on the night.

The preacher felt a bullet pass through his hat as the driver lashed his horse and passed along.

Mr. Flumfert, greatly frightened, hastened to the home of Mr. Stillman and told the story. The driver of the carriage had evidently taken him for a highwayman.

For Your Protection.

Catarrh "cures" in liquid form to be taken internally, usually contain either mercury or iodide of potassa, or both, which are injurious if too long taken. Catarrh is a local, not a blood disease, caused by sudden change to cold and damp weather. It starts in the nasal passages. Cold in the head causes excessive flow of mucus and, if repeatedly neglected the results of catarrh will follow, and oftentimes an offensive discharge. Ely's Cream Balm is the acknowledged cure for these troubles and contains no mercury nor any injurious drug.

Fences have been torn down, the wire and staples taken and articles are missing from the shed near the pond. Some of the parties are known, and notice is hereby given that if they do not cease, the matter will be placed in the hands of the authorities at once.

There is more catarrh in this section of the country than all other diseases put together, and until the last few years was supposed to be incurable. For a great many years doctors pronounced it a local disease, and prescribed local remedies, and by continually failing to cure with local treatment, pronounced it incurable. Science has proven catarrh to be a constitutional disease and therefore requires constitutional treatment. Hall's Catarrh Cure, manufactured by F. J. Cheney & Co., Toledo, Ohio, is the only constitutional cure on the market. It is taken internally in doses from 10 drops to a teaspoonful. It acts directly on the blood and mucous surfaces of the system. They offer one hundred dollars for any case it fails to cure. Send for circulars and testimonials. Address F. J. Cheney & Co., Toledo, O.
